WE CAUGHT THE BEAR AND CAN'T LET GO

The gentleman who caught the bear by the tail, and who found hanging on a trying proposition, but didn't dare let go, because things would be very much worse if he did, seems to have had nothing on the present administration in its civil works program.

The administration has been spending something like $50,000,000 a week on civil works employment. At that rate the existing fund will be exhausted by the middle of February. The president has asked Congress to vote $350,000,000 more to carry the job along; yet it would require more than twice that sum to take the program through May 1, if the present rate of operations is maintained.

Right here the administration would seem to have a wide-open chance to get itself into a lot of grief.

The tough part of it is that, back of those stupendous sums of money, there is a stupendous number of human beings who will get a cruel and tragic disillusionment if the problem is not handled just so. Also, though it might be mean to mention the fact, they are all voters.

Already the CWA is showing signs of creaking. Money is beginning to run short. Hours of work have been reduced. In some localities men are being laid off.

The theory, of course, is that the CWA program can be tapered off as private business revives sufficiently to absorb the men who are discharged. But that time hardly seems to have arrived.

One locality, where CWA men are being laid off, reports that applications for relief have been increasing of late. It would take an optimist to believe that prosperity will return so fast that private business can absorb all 4,000,000 CWA men by next May.

The administration has on its hand a program which cannot be continued indefinitely, but which cannot be cut off suddenly without causing profound disappointment to a great many people.

These CWA men had not had jobs for a long time—for years, in many cases—before the government put them to work. Many of them had been on the relief rolls.

To cut them adrift before new jobs are open would be cruel.

So what? Well, the administration would seem to be up against one of its biggest tests. It may not exactly be between the devil and the deep blue sea, but it at least can understand the emotions which beset the gentleman who had a bear by the tail.

UNDEFILED HIGHWAY

There won't be any ugly billboards or ramshackle hot-dog stands along the 21-mile highway which the Tennessee Valley Authority is building in the vicinity of Norris Dam.

This highway will have a 250-foot right of way, and all buildings erected along its borders will have to conform to architectural standards set by the Valley Authority.

Since the highway will cross country of great scenic beauty, especial pains will be taken to prevent the erection of any structure which might cut off the motorists' view.

This news is apt to make many a motorist wish that some similar regulation could be laid down for highways elsewhere. No one can take a motor trip nowadays without being obliged to look at a great number of roadside eyesores.

A 21-mile stretch of road completely lacking in such phenomena ought to be a rare treat for the eyes.

Strange Inquiries

Received at Press

Corps' Department

AUSTIN, (U.P.)—This is a story of the press room, one of the few departments in the state capitol that seldom "breaks into print."

The greater portion of the capitol news corps has its headquarters in a crowded room adjacent to the state library. The location may, or may not, have something to do with the strange inquiries which sometimes intrude.

There was the instance of the young legislator who had come to Austin for his first session of the legislature. He had traveled a long way from out in Southwest Texas. He was tired. His clothes were wrinkled.

He stopped at the doorway of the press room and looked about in wonder. "Where are the machines?" he inquired.

"The pressing machines. Isn't this where the legislators get their clothes pressed?"

On another occasion newspapermen were very busily engaged transmitting stories on the governor's call for a special session of the legislature. A young woman, petite but worried, stopped the proceedings to inquire if there were two "eds" in boys' d' arc.

Shortly after the change of state administrations, a middle-aged man in search of political plums looked hungrily in. "Who appoints the men who work here," he asked.

His curiosity was appeased only by a full explanation that members of the news corps are not state employes, that their paychecks are entirely dependent of the state and of any of its departments.

Once a masculine voice pleaded by telephone for the press corps' help in locating his girl friend. "A blonde, tall, and with a mole on the left side of her nose."

How Governors React to Public Schools

Dear Sir: Considerable condemnation has been extended in the direction of out state governors with respect to their interest in public education. And since governors do have considerable influence in the matter of public school legislation it is a very valuable portion of information when we can learn of their reactions in this matter.

Mr. Charles A. Smith of the junior college at Long Beach, Cal., has made a recent study of more than passing interest. He analyzed the written messages of the governors of the nation as delivered to the legislatures of the various states in 1932-33.

He summarizes his conclusions as follows: 1. Governors may be expected to be fairly toward public education.

2. Governors agree that public education is a primary function of the state and accept the resulting implications.

3. They recognize and aggressively champion equalization of educational opportunity through state-wide taxation.

4. Wherever higher education is controversial it has the active support of every governor who mentions the subject.

5. Transportation, consolidation, and county units are aggressively advocated by every governor who

Meaning of Ash Wednesday Given

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following article was prepared by the Rev. W. H. Martin of Big Spring, vicar of Trinity chapel.

In the forty days in which all Christians are to imitate Christ in preparing for the works of His kingdom, several days stand out in major importance.

Tuesday of this week was Shrove Tuesday. In olden days the people went to the church or to the cathedral to confess their sins and to repent and listen to the pronouncement of God's mercy and forgiveness of their misdeeds.

The next day, Ash Wednesday, they assembled again, in humility, and dressed in garments of sorrow they had a service in which they used the penitential psalms and the Litany, which is a succession of short prayers or intercessions of forgiveness for their sins of omission and commission.

As time goes on more and more Christians are realizing the necessity and the wisdom of having a certain period in each year set apart in which true Christians remember and practice the things that will bring them nearer to Christ.

This morning at ten the congregation of Trinity Episcopal church met and read the Penitential Office and the Litany which are services set for Ash Wednesday.

In this service the minister is on the same footing with the humblest of his congregation and must take his place as their leader without the surplice and stole which are the symbols of his office as minister. He is required by the constitution of the church to take his place outside the sanctuary in the body of the church at the Litany, desk which is set to face the altar.

His devotions to God are the same as that of the congregation and he is standing in need of divine guidance and forgiveness as much as the most guilty of God's erring children.

All-Day Quilting At Hafer Home

Mrs. C. L. Hafer was hostess Tuesday with an all-day quilting at her home at the gas plant. The affair was also a meeting of the Stitch and Chatter club.

Informally prevailed throughout. The lunch hour when the hostess served a four-course dinner consisting of baked chicken and dressing, cranberry sauce, grape jelly, corn relish, cabbage slaw, buttered carrots, celery, pickled apples, tomato pickles, hot rolls, creamed potatoes, green beans, banana cream pie topped with whipped cream and coffee. All the vegetables served were grown and canned by the hostess.

The afternoon was spent finishing the quilt, of Indian princess pattern, and in conversation. At the tea hour sandwiches, fruit cake and coffee were served.

Attending were Meses. Paul Moore, Terry Elkin, Jess Prothro, Lowe, Ily Pratt, W. G. Riddle, J. S. Noland, John Dabbs, K. C. Miller, J. C. Amick, Webb, J. H. Rhoden, John Davis and L. B. Hankins. Frances Lowe Peters and Tom Moore. Willie Mae Riddle was a luncheon guest.

For Hard Coughs or Colds That Worry You

Cremulsion is made to give supreme help for coughs or colds. It combines seven helps in one—the best helps known to science. It is for quick relief, for safety.

But careful people, more and more, use it for every cough that starts. No one knows where a cough may lead. No one can tell which factor will do most. That depends on the type of cold.

Cremulsion costs a little more than lesser helps. But it means the utmost help. And it costs you nothing if it fails to bring the quick relief you seek. Your druggist guarantees it. Use it for safety's sake. (adv.)

CHAPTER I

The little Eskimo village seethed with excitement. From its dozen or more tents of walrus hide, men, women and children rushed out at the shout: "Mala returns! The dogs are weary with their burden of geese!"

of the two that he had intended to feed to the dogs, cut it up into pieces and fed it to the animals, taking care that no dog got more than his share. Then Mala walked slowly through the village, the meat racks were empty, or nearly so; dogs stood hungrily about the entrances to the tents; here and there were women plucking the geese that Mala had given them.

"A foolish boy asks where the caribou are?"

Mala, hearing that cry, came out of his tent to meet the boy, shouted quick orders to the villagers, who ran to carry them out. A broad spear, a harpoon, bow and arrows out of the tent and gave them to Mala, who slung them on his back as he questioned Orskidok and flung more orders to the villagers.

As the boats near the large ice pan on which lay part of the walrus, the men paddled more slowly not to alarm the animals. On the side of the ice pan farthest from the walrus, the umiyak landed several men who, with spears, bows and arrows, and harpoons, were waiting cautiously towards the animals.

The boats now darted forward to get into the fray. Mala's kayak in the lead. The mighty hunter let fly two arrows into the herd, and then took up his harpoon and plunged it into a big bull walrus past. The line began unreeling rapidly and Mala threw out a bladder buoy after it.

Taparte, the Igdluk, in the bow of the umiyak, saw a wounded walrus come up beside the boat, lunged at it with a harpoon, but missed. The walrus charged the boat, lunging its tusks over the gunwale, giving a vicious wrench, roaring with pain and anger. The umiyak was capsized, the men floundering about in the water, seeking to get a hold on the overturned craft. Mala, seeing the disaster, turned his kayak and sped swiftly to the struggling men.

Groups of men and women ate of the fresh walrus meat, grinning and laughing; dogs barked and snarled over pieces of meat flung to them; groups of children ran about shouting and playing, while in a cleared space Orskidok and another youth went through the gyrations of the walrus dance, imitating the grotesque bellows and struggles of the animals seeking to escape from the harpoon.

Max Schmeling Loses to Hamas

CONVENTION HALL, PHILADELPHIA—The comeback campaign of dogged Max Schmeling, once heavyweight champion of the world, crumbled Tuesday night before the sledgeing fists of young Steve Hamas, more famous as a football player than a prize fighter, in another stunning ring upset. Before a crowd of 16,000 that jammed Convention hall as a fight place hasn't been jammed in Philadelphia since Gene Tunney beat Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight title in the Sesquiennial stadium. Hamas battered the subber Teuton for the greater part of twelve rounds, slashed his left eyebrow open in the ninth, and easily won the unanimous decision of Referee Spud Murphy and two judges. Despite the width of his margin, the seriousness of a gash almost two inches long in Schmeling's left eyebrow, Hamas had to save off a terrific twelfth round drive of the German to save himself from being battered to the floor. There were no knockdowns, but the duel wound up in a fever of punching that had the capacity crowd roaring wildly. Beaten so badly that only a knockout could turn the tide, Schmeling rallied near the close of the eleventh, brought a stream of blood from Hamas' nose with the final punch of the round, a righthand smash to the face that sent the former Penn State fullback until he was weak and wobbly in the final session.

Mighty Frog Rally Trims Owls, 29-27

HOUSTON—A brilliant offensive rally that netted ten points in the closing minutes of play paved the way for the Texas Christian university Horned Frogs to defeat the Rice Owls, 29 to 27, Tuesday night and grab a strangle hold on the Southwest conference basketball title. Trailing, 19 to 27, with but a precious few minutes remaining, to play, the Frogs broke loose with a spectacular exhibition of goal shooting that carried Jimmy Kitts' Owls to defeat. While the Horned Frogs were scoring ten markers, the Frogs blanked the Owls, holding Rice scoreless. The victory gave the Frogs a commanding lead in the Southwest conference basketball race. Having won seven out of eight battles, they have only to win two of their remaining four contests, including a return engagement with Rice at Fort Worth, to be assured of at least a tie for the championship. Failure to "freeze the ball" during the last four minutes cost the second place Owls the game. In the last 30 seconds, Perkins made a dazzling one handed shot to score the winning field goal.

STUDENTS RAP FACULTY

DALLAS (U.P.)—The faculty of Southern Methodist university got a slap on the wrist from students through "The Campus" student publication, for not attending chapel, "except when convocation makes the occasion compulsory."

Stradivarius Owned By Denton Student

DENTON (A)—A genuine Stradivarius—one of the two hundred such violins in America. No wonder Barbara Hargett, junior student at Texas State College for Women keeps her violin locked in a bank vault. Carved by the hand of the old Italian master in 1735, the violin has been in the family for generations. It last belonged to Miss Hargett's great-grandfather and according to family traditions, it is handed down every other generation to the oldest grand-child. In this way Miss Hargett came into possession of the valuable heirloom which was presented to her by her great-grandfather on her sixth birthday.

Film Hits Racket of Snatching Kids; Wieck, Brady Star

Dorothea Wieck, the disturbing screen personality, recently brought to this country by Paramount, is currently co-starring with Alice Brady in "Miss Fane's Baby Is Stolen," the first picture to hit the very center of the ruthless child-stealing racket. The picture is showing today and tomorrow at the Ritz theatre. In addition to Miss Wieck and Miss Brady, Baby LeRoy and Jack La Rue are featured. Directed by Alexander Hall, the story was written by Rupert Hughes and was adapted to the screen by Adela Rogers St. Johns. In the story, Miss Fane, famous motion picture actress, finds her eighteen-month-old son kidnaped. Her charming, blue-eyed boy is snatched from his nursery crib. But with the entire world answering her cry of terror and anguish; with every means at her command for apprehending the fiendish criminals, it remains for a poor, self-effacing woman, the wife of a hillside farmer, to bring about the boy's safe return. And the manner in which she captures the child, outwits the kidnapers and returns him to his mother, brings to the screen a most startlingly dramatic climax.

Ann HARDING THE RIGHT TO ROMANCE

They Satisfy . . . people know it! Same thing with a good cigarette or a good wood-fire. All you need is a light. And all you want is a cigarette that keeps tasting right whether you smoke one or a dozen. That's what people like about Chesterfields. You can count on them. They're milder—and they taste better. In two words, they satisfy. That says it. Chesterfield the cigarette that's Milder • the cigarette that TASTES BETTER.
