HOUSE PASSES BANKHEAD BILL

Orchards Damaged Here and There Over Week End

FULL EXTENT IS NOT EXPECTED TO AT ONCE BE KNOWN

Heavy Windstorm Is Felt Here During Saturday

DALLAS, March 19. (U.P.)—Freezing temperatures over the week end caused excessive damage to orchards, a survey today revealed. Fruit trees which already were blooming were badly hurt if not entirely destroyed in east and north Texas. The full extent will not be determined for several days. Frost was reported all the way to the coast and was felt in Brownsville and Port Arthur. Early gardens were seriously hurt and in some instances destroyed. Fall oats and young corn was killed or badly damaged. Panhandle wheat was suffering from drought and was blown out of the ground in some regions. West Texas cattle regions were left in poor condition.

HEAVY GALE BLOWS HERE SATURDAY

A 48-mile-an-hour wind slowed traffic in the city between 6 and 7 o'clock Saturday afternoon, and an oil field truck with engineers who had been working for the Texas Electric was forced to turn about and put back for Odessa, not able to pull the blow. "We went back like a bat out a canyon," said one of the engineers, "the truck running like a racing car." A total of 631 miles of wind, as Sloan field meteorologists expressed it, or an average of 263 miles an hour, blew that day. The temperature for Saturday brought a high of 75 and a low of 25, that of the 18th showing a low of 23 and a high of 50. The low temperature of this morning was 28, with the mercury reaching 38 at 11:15.

Public Grazing Land Bill to Be Acted on

WASHINGTON, March 19. (U.P.)—Joseph Byrns, house majority leader, democrat of Tennessee, said today that the house would adjourn to-morrow and act on the Taylor bill regulating the grazing of public lands.

Fitz Invited to Sing Before ETCC

Sketches from his opera "Tejas" presented by Professor Theophilus Fitz for the Federated Women's clubs in Texarkana recently made such an impression that Professor Fitz has been asked to repeat the program for the East Texas chamber of commerce convention. Fitz was the principal musical performance ever given in Texarkana. The former Midlander has a class and is director of a church choir in Texarkana. Miss Lucille McMullan of Midland is secretary of the voice school.

Couple Arrested On Theft Charges

SAN ANGELO.—A man and woman, who gave their names as Mr. and Mrs. Fae Farris of Dallas, were returned to Midland county Friday night after being arrested here during the afternoon on charges of Midland county officers. The couple was charged with robbing a Midland rancher of $400 Thursday night in a hotel party at Midland. Members of the sheriff's and constable's department, notified of the affair by Midland officers, spotted the car here during Friday morning and arrested the man at a local garage. Shortly thereafter, Robert Brown local attorney, arrived at the jail to confer with Farris. As he talked with the prisoner, Jailer Gene Hill called the sheriff's office and informed officers of the visit. Officers went to Brown's building where they thought they might find the woman. She was located in the office of W. H. Lipscomb, another attorney. As Brown left the jail to file habeas corpus proceedings, officers rushed the man and woman out of town. They were met on the way by Midland officers who took charge of the couple.

CARDS DISTRIBUTED

Window cards and windshield stickers advertising the International Petroleum exposition at Tulsa were distributed by Jack Gay in Wink and Mountain Monday on request of the Midland chamber of commerce. Gay spent Sunday night at Midland. He is manager for the Murchison interests in Winkler county.

Britain's Bid For Supremacy In The Air

Newest entry in the world race for largest airliners is the giant plane Seyla, pictured here during its construction at Kent, England, where there were no hangars large enough to house it. The ship will carry 43 persons, which is six more than can be seated in "largest and fastest commercial plane" now being groomed for tests in Bridgeport, Conn.

'Slottery Racket' Bites Hand That Feeds It, Charges Borum in Sermon

Condemnation of the slot machine and appreciation of the agencies of city and county government which have decreed that it must go from Midland business and social establishments were voiced Sunday morning at the 11-o'clock service in a sermon from the Rev. Winston F. Borum of the First Baptist church. The minister, in part, said: "There is an evil that has sprung up in our city recently in the form of slot machines, which should not be allowed to ply its criminal business. I am happy, as most of you are, no doubt, that steps have already been taken by the officials to rid our fair city and county of it. Every right thinking citizen should show our city council, city and county peace officers their approval and appreciation of such action. This is a fine step in the right direction. Recognizing the existence of this evil, have been gathering data to be used against it, in voicing a strong protest; and helping to stir up, as best I might, a strong public sentiment that would rid us of its presence. Learning of this action mentioned above, I thought at first it might be needless to go further. However, it has been the experience in all cities where crime is fought, that it dies hard, and we may expect a kick-back. So after prayer and thought, I have deemed it best to continue with an exposure of this "mechanical larceny" as Mayor La Guardia of New York City has so fittingly called it—first, that we might fight this particular evil to the finish; and, secondly, that we might take other needed steps to rid our city of other kindred evils, carried on by the undesirable element. "The question has no doubt been asked by many, and came up in my own mind, as to why our officials had not taken more drastic steps in eliminating this evil, which they had a legal right to do under our state laws. The answer that has come to my own mind—and I speak officially, and voice merely my own opinion in answer—seems sufficient reason. If it does not satisfy yours, and you want more enlightenment, ask them. But a number of our good citizens have been more or less incoherently and thoughtlessly drawn into the affair, and have laid themselves liable to court action. I imagine the officials appreciating their position, did not take extreme measures until sufficient warning had been given. "Now that such consideration and leniency has been shown, if there should be a kick-back, let it be only from that element which does not respect the law. Let every right thinking and well minded citizen back up the officials in this and any further steps they see fit to make in this direction. I am persuaded that the great majority of our citizenship is of the fine and whole type. I believe the farmers and ranchmen whom I meet on our streets are in the great majority the fine honorable citizens. I believe the merchants and professional men with whom we do business are in the great majority of the highest type. I believe our women, in the great majority, are noble, virtuous, and as fine as can be found in the land. Then, this being true, let this great majority control in our city and county—instead of that element (found in every town) who cares nothing for law and will do anything they can get by with to make a dollar. "But back to the point of issue: the slot machine, and kindred devices so illegal and criminal in many cities of our country, a fight has been launched against them. Mayor La Guardia of New York has been outstanding in his war on slottery. In his 40 years of office, he has won 7,698 votes, 1201 of which

JURY FINDS FOR KING IN VERDICT

Awarding damages of $6,750 to Chas. King in his suit for $19,000 against the Southern Greyhound bus lines, a verdict was returned in district court shortly before noon today by the jury which had been deliberating since Thursday. The body had recessed over Sunday and court reconvened at 9 o'clock this morning. The verdict was expected to form a basis on which a second suit, filed by Mrs. Savannah King against the bus company could be settled. Mrs. King was asking $16,000. Both were injured when the car in which they were riding was struck by a bus on a Midland street.

Oil Men Here to Attend Congress

Many oil men in Midland are already making plans to attend the International Petroleum exposition in Tulsa May 12-19. The exposition is not only the world's greatest oil show, local petroleum men say, but it affords a reunion of old friends from all parts of the world where petroleum is produced. The oil industry will celebrate its start toward recovery when it holds its eighth congress, according to William G. Skelly, president of the Skelly Oil company, and president of the exposition. "This exposition, which is the largest industrial show of any one industry in the world," said Skelly, "will have exhibits valued at more than ten million dollars representing the producing, refining, transportation and marketing divisions. "At the last exposition, held in 1930, exhibits and delegations in attendance represented 21 nations from five countries and 38 states of the United States and from 49 of the states of the United States. It is apparent that equal representation will be in attendance again this year. "The United States government has approved the exposition under a resolution passed by congress and is sending out official government invitations to more than 50 countries of the world and to each of the 48 states of the United States inviting them to exhibit samples of fabricated and raw products of all countries used in the petroleum industry and bringing together buyers and sellers for promotion of trade and commerce in such products. "Tariff duties have been waived on all products of equipment brought to this country for exhibition in the exposition under the resolution. "With the increased price of oil and a partial balance between supply and demand a general wave of reconstruction is prevailing in the industry which will see many producers and refiners planning for improvement of their properties and extensive construction work and additions to equipment. "This means that now is the opportune time for manufacturers to display new machinery and inventions which have been perfected by engineers and scientists over the past three years and which, due to depressed business condition, have not as yet been generally introduced to the industry. "Thousands upon thousands of oil men and those interested in the industry will have an opportunity to see a catalogue of the latest equipment, practices and policies gathered together in one place, Skelly said.

War on Prairie Dogs Proves Successful

ODESSA.—Local ranchmen who have been putting out prairie dog poison recently have reported excellent success in killing off the pests, according to County Agent H. L. Atkins. Many dogs have been killed, and whole dog towns have been wiped out in many instances. The county agent again calls attention to the fact that ranchmen should obtain the free poison and put it out as soon as possible, as the dogs will be much harder to kill once we have a good rain and the pastures green up. Ample supplies of poison grain are still available free to ranchmen in Ector and Andrews counties. Relief Director Will Martin stated that the question of whether or not OWA labor will be available in the future for this work depends on information expected from Austin within the next few days.

Bulletin

DETROIT, March 19. (U.P.)—The automobile industry will not contract on behalf of employees with the American Federation of Labor, the National Automobile chamber of commerce announced today. "There is only one issue, namely whether the automobile industry is to be run by the federation," the NACC charged. "The automobile industry does not intend to recognize the federation."

The NACC charged that the strike order represents an attempt of the federation to seize control of automotive industry "by force, coercion and strike threats."

This is a type of publicity which will be heard by thousands of people and is considered a high compliment to Midland by the great oil exposition at Tulsa. Tulsa's courtesy to Midland comes through a return compliment to the Midland chamber of commerce, which is giving wide regional publicity to the world's greatest oil show at Tulsa May 12-19.

THE FALL OF A RACE, AN EPIC IN HISTORY

Give history plenty of time, and it can create some shifts in its never-ending pageant that will leave you gasping.

It may take thousands of year, but in the end—from the standpoint of ironic contrast—the results are worth it. There are, for instance, those Assyrian refugees who are about to start on a long migration from the land of their ancestors to a colony along the upper reaches of the Amazon, in Brazil.

These people, a mere handful, have been living in what now is the country of Iraq. They are among the most luckless and put-upon of modern peoples. Last summer many of them were massacred by neighboring tribesmen, and only action by the League of Nations is saving them from complete ruin.

Now, under league auspices, a spot has been found for them in Brazil, and they are to be moved there en masse as soon as arrangements can be finished.

And all this surely is one of the strangest twists that the pageant of history ever has taken.

For these people are the surviving descendants of the Assyrians of old—the Assyrians who made their name mighty in the east, who built great Nineveh, swept down like destroying angels on such folk as the Israelites, and stood for the power and glory of temporal greatness in all its splendor.

That was unimaginably long ago. The great city of Nineveh is a heap of sand and clay, now; the canals with which the Assyrians turned the bare plains of Asia Minor into garden spots dried up and disappeared centuries ago; the very name of what once was the most powerful nation in the world has become covered with dust, so that it sounds unreal and very far-off when we read about it in our Bibles or our history books.

And here astoundingly, is a fragment of that far-away time surviving in the twentieth century—a pitiable, harassed fragment, saved from complete extinction only by the League of Nations, and exiled to a far-off jungle to start life anew!

Of all the strange tales if history, this one is surely among the strangest.

TROUBLE IN UNIFORM

Dispatches from London report that the British government seriously is considering action to disband all uniformed political bodies, such as the Fascist black shirts organized by Sir Oswald Mosley.

England never has been plagued with these organizations to the extent that continental countries have been; nevertheless, it is beginning to have difficulties with them, and during the last six months of 1933 no fewer than 22 disturbances in which men wearing political uniforms were involved were reported.

As a general thing, it can be said that when political parties take to organizing their young men into semi-military bodies, dressed in distinctive uniforms, there is trouble ahead.

These bodies are not designed for use in harmless parades; they are organized for fighting, if their directors think it necessary—fighting with their fists, with clubs, or with guns.

There is precious little place for them in a democracy, and, if the British government plans to abolish them, the action will be very easy to understand.

The new emperor of Manchuria gets $1,750,000 a year. He might try doing something in his spare time, to make ends meet.

London had 21 murders in 1933 and New York had 647. If New York can't beat London in population, at least it'll pass that city in depopulation.

New Tunesful Film Coming to Yucca

"Let's Fall In Love" starring Edmund Lowe and the sensational new screen find, Ann Southern, is coming to the Yucca theatre Tuesday for a two-day run.

Titled as one of the season's most unique and tuneful musical offerings, the production has created much favorable comment. It is entirely different from the run of musicals which has flooded screens recently, as its music is worked into the story in a logical and convincing manner. Even without the music, it would be an outstanding dramatic production.

The famous song-writing team of Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler composed the lyrics and score for the half-dozen musical numbers heard in the picture. The team is responsible for such big song hits as "Stormy Weather," "Minnie the Moocher," "I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues" and "Get Happy."

CATCHES DEER BY TAIL

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP)—As a hunter approached a deer he had shot and crippled, it sprang up and started to run away. Another sportsman killed the deer with one shot and helped the crazy tail "hitch hiker" to sit down.

CANYON (AP)—Five members of the 1933 Amarillo College Badgers, football champions of the Texas Junior College association, have registered for the spring term at the West Texas State Teachers college and will be out for spring football training.

Coach Al Baggett, whose first year with the Buffaloes did not bring forth as many victories as he desired, said his 1934 squad would be greatly strengthened by the new recruits. Some of them formerly played for Baggett at the Amarillo school.

The new players, all of whom will be eligible for this year's squad are: Clinton Meek, 190-pound tackle, Stung Cain, 180-pound end and capable pass snatcher, Aubrey Smith, and Costello Taylor, 150-pound quarterback, and Otis Jackson, center. Pug Weaver, of Fairbault, an ex-Badger, also is at school here now.

Baggett has made application for membership in the Border conference, but his petition has not been accepted.

What Has Happened

Nana, a girl of the shadows, living in Paris in 1868, is taken up by a Mr. Greiner, a powerful theatrical producer who, struck by her singular beauty and personality, takes her into his theatre, trains her, and presents her to the public in his newest revue, in which she is a tremendous sensation. At the same time he makes love to the girl, and she accepts his caresses, because she knows if she doesn't, he will fire her from the theatre and the life of luxury and ease she has grown to love. The opening night she meets George Muffat, a good-looking young officer, who frankly tells her he is quite smitten with her and asks her to dinner. She refuses, but sets a tentative date for a later assignation with him.

CHAPTER IV

What with the show, which the whole of Paris was fighting and clamoring to see, and Greiner, who was still as insistent with his love as ever, and the new element in her life, her love for George, Nana had but little time for rest. So, when the show closed for the summer, she was heartily thankful to leave for a villa which she rented in the South of France.

There we see her now, Nana, the gossip and delight of France and the entire world.

Nana stood before a mirror in her luxurious bedroom. Perfumed and gleaming, just out of her bath, this body of hers, she thought, must be God's greatest treasure to any woman. She caressed herself, feeling still as insistent with his love as ever, and the new element in her life, her love for George, Nana had but little time for rest. So, when the show closed for the summer, she was heartily thankful to leave for a villa which she rented in the South of France.

Blue Star Kills Foot Itch Germs

ful hours, when a noise at the window gave her a slight start. Few ladies, interrupted in the intimacy of toilette or love's young dream, could have turned as she did, with an immediate smile of unruffled confidence.

It was George. He peered over the edge of a window, his face wreathed in a smile.

"Never have I seen you looking so exquisite before as you do in that gown, darling."

Nana ran over to him and embraced him closely, warmly.

"You've seen it often enough; I don't see what is so surprising now," she taunted.

"Ah," he smiled, "but mostly I've only seen it at night."

Laughing happily, Nana helped him into the room and held him at arm's length, looking him over greedily, up and down, her eyes seeming to devour him piece by piece.

"Oh, darling," she murmured, "I do love you, I love you more than anything else in the world. You are my world—my sun and moon and stars, my very life."

Passionately she embraced him, showering him with kisses from her warm red mouth. And George responded, making love to her, to the woman who had changed him from a boy into a man, the woman who had given him a reason for living, and an escape over-night from flames of which his whole life had previously seemed composed.

After a while they sat smoking on Nana's divan, near the open window. She was looking at him, her eyes following every movement of his face.

"You know, darling," she said, "nothing can ever separate us. We're one for all time."

"Yes," he smiled, "even with Greiner. You must leave him and be my wife."

"You said, 'it's not necessary. I can have you, whom I love more of all, and I can have the theatre and all it brings me, too, if I go on as we have. If I tell Greiner to go to the devil, such as I would like, to hell, throw me out. And, darling, I really do want to stay on the stage. There's nothing to worry about. I love you, I can't tell you how much—and you love me. That's all there is to it. Then, added coyly, 'You do love me, don't you?'

George smiled. "Love you? Do I love to breathe? I can't help but love you. But, Nana, darling, I'd feel so much more secure if I were to be married to you. Something might happen to us as we are. Something that would tear us apart. And that would be my end. It will find me."

Nana laughed. "Nobody's going to separate us. We're what we are for all time, all eternity. Anyway," she laughed, "you're a soldier. If anyone tries to come between us, why you just take your trusty gun, and 'bang'—you've shot him, and there's no more danger. He's dead."

But George was serious. "Nana, don't be silly. I don't fear a man—or a beast or anything I can see and kill, and that be the end of it. I fear something else."

"What are you driving at, what is there to fear?"

George didn't speak for a long time, and when he did there was a hesitating furtive quality in his voice.

"Something insidious. Something no one can see, and no one can stop. I feel it, darling. And that's all. I feel sure of it. And if anything ever breaks us up, it will be tearing my heart right out of my body. My losing you will be my death knell."

His voice was louder. "And Nana, darling, I think it's coming. Something in me says so."

them, and has gained one victory after another. And many other cities have followed suit. Thousands of machines have been confiscated, destroyed, and their contents used for charitable purposes. The State of Texas seems to be provided with as fine laws for the protection of its citizenship as any state in the Union.

"This business has been termed not only as 'mechanical larceny,' but also, 'The World's Meanest Racket,' Paul Harrison, writer for the NEA Service has called it. 'Mechanistic Marvel of Small Time Suckerdom,' and Dr. E. E. Free of New York University has termed these machines 'Ubiquitous Jitney Juggernauts.'"

"In talking recently with a business man of another state who had been approached to put in some of these machines, he told me that they were so arranged that they could be so regulated as to pay off whatever percentage the operator desired, and that he was informed that most of them in his section set them to pay off about 20 percent. It is impossible to beat these machines, and anyone thinking he has any kind of a sporting chance to do so is a sucker. Sometimes the machines are so set for a day or a few hours, to pay off liberally so as to establish a reputation as a bait to draw suckers like the fly to the sticky paper."

Dr. E. E. Free and his assistant, Dr. C. C. Clark, both of New York University, aiding Mayor La Guardia, and for the benefit of their students, have taken down a number of the confiscated machines and established the following startling facts. There are three dials with fancy figures of inticing fruit, etc. There are 20 of these figures on each dial, but exactly half of them are bogus, as the machine cannot stop on them. But they whirl the same as the others to lure the sucker on with visions of big returns, like the illusive mirages of West Texas.

"Again, in conjunction with each wheel was a steel disc, invisible within the machine, containing holes corresponding to the symbols on the wheels. If these discs, by an extremely remote chance, happened to stop so that certain holes corresponded, steel plungers would drop through the perforations and trip a release mechanism which would send down a shower of brass tokens. Various combinations of Nana laughed. "Nonsense," she said, "nothing's going to happen to us. Why this can't ever stop. It's too beautiful and fine and noble . . . it's too . . ."

"It's no use, Nana," he interrupted. "I know something will happen. It's inevitable that Fate will never allow any two human beings to be so happy for long. It's in the cards, darling, and we can't see the player who is dealing them."

holes and plungers determined the number of tokens returned. Thus if one plunger dropped through two discs, the machine paid two slugs; if through three, four slugs. If a second plunger penetrated the discs, eight tokens were paid; a third would give 12, a fourth 16, and a fifth the "jack-pot."

"Naturally, however, such combinations seldom occurred since the 'Slottery Racket' is in no sense a philanthropic machine. In fact, Dr. Free discovered by mathematical calculation that it took eight and a third nickels to get two slugs, being the highest percentage offered by any machine tested. To get 16 slugs at a pay off took 600 nickels. The 'Jack-pot' combination proved to be only one in a thousand, and that the highest paid at one time was $5 in the jack-pot. So, reduced to its simplest terms, the jackpot was found likely to pay one nickel, for every ten invested."

"Dr. Free was recently giving a public exposure in the city of New York, when a heckler interrupted, shouting, 'That's no news! You never get back less than 80, and you might get two or three hundred.'"

"Alright," said Dr. Free, "there are 100 slugs. Play them on any one of the 52 confiscated machines we have here, and prove your statement. With the 100 slugs provided, and a policeman and a mechanic at his elbow to see that he did not carry on their businesses for illegotten gains. I pay tribute to you, Mr. Sheriff, and you, Mr. City Marshal, and you, Gentlemen of the Council, and to you, Mr. and Mrs. Citizen, who wish to live, enjoy and rear your children in a clean little city."

Called "Emperor" A letter for the Emperor? (Emperor, not Prince, on the lips of the aged, worried servant.) But he doesn't receive visitors. It is an old acquaintance of Father Hyacinth? But Father Hyacinth is busy—But come in, then, come in!

The old servant hurries thru across a tiny medieval hall into a dark reception room as impersonal and graceless as a boarding house. There is just enough time to note that the Prince's dog, Ivan, has a floppy bed made up by the doorway, and to observe antique arms over the dead fireplace.

The stairs are too close at hand. Beggar at door, visitor within, both wait. There is a shuffling step. An elderly gentleman in the rusty clothes of a schoolmaster appears. He draws from his pocket a quaint, shabby, lean purse. Just a few centimes for the beggar. Is the beggar hungry? The beggar is. Beggar and elderly gentleman shuffle off together in the direction of the kitchen. But the beggar's visit was obviously a strain. Almost as much of a strain as that of the individual who had a letter to Prince Otto and who is waiting in the little room.

and gangsters—the "wise-guys" who never appear, but who reap tremendous profits by remaining in the background.

"This racket is outlawed vigorously in Texas, so again we appeal to every right-minded citizen to stand behind our officials as they enforce the law. Let every good citizen, likewise keep his hands and 'space' clean even of such as would strive to evade the law by some ruse.

"We repeat, this is a fine step in the right direction. Other steps should be taken and rid our community of bootlegging, road-houses, resorts of ill-fame even within the city limits. Close them up and keep them out, as well as carnivals whose main traffic is in kindergarten gambling machines and contrivances, and feed on the vital stream of decent humanity."

"Father Hyacinth is quite at ease. 'History is his favorite study,' he explains. 'His majesty is wrapt up in history.'"

"No Photographs!" Father Hyacinth graciously consents to pose for photographs himself, warns the visitor that he must not approach the archdukes or the archduchesses near the ragged old tennis court, must not photograph them.

A final picture of the chateau seen from across its stagnant lake leaves an impression of mist and almost Maeterlinckian strangeness. The soggy Belgian winter weather scrunches underfoot as the visitor retires down the driveway. But the gates are still open, as if in eagerness to let Otto through. And the stir of expectancy persists longer after the train has started on its 45-minute journey from Steenockerzeel toward Brussels.

oh, no. Not uninvited visitors. Journalists? The thought of journalist is devastating to the old man. "Photographers?" One blow trends upon another's heels.

The big handsome bulk of Father Hyacinth Weber, confessor to the royal house of Hapsburg, voluntary exile with it, appears.

"I am sorry," he says. "Prince Otto is much occupied just now. He is not seeing anyone. How does he occupy himself? He works. In the mornings he reads the Austrian newspapers. Of course, he can't read them all. And his mail, too, it is large. He has received loyal greetings from many Austrian towns. They have made him honorary citizen, and he has responded with proclamations. But we mustn't talk politics."

"History is his favorite study," he explains. "His majesty is wrapt up in history."

nate young person, who has never known happiness and when finally a ray of sunlight in the guise of Bill Crawford, candidate for Governor, enters her life it is destined that her happiness will be short-lived and that a more dreadful conclusion than the one visited on her would hardly be conceivable.

Brilliantly directed by Phil Goldstone, this new Majestic film makes a fair play to be one of the outstanding pictures of 1934.

A sensational cast headed by Zita Johann, who as Nora gives a splendid performance, Alan Dinehart, Paul Cavanaugh and John Miljan offer something extraordinary in the field of motion picture acting. The climaxes and situations are startlingly alive and real and credit should be given to Frances Hyland, who wrote the screen play adapting it from the play by Willis Maxwell Goodhue. This film must not be missed.

Pulsing Drama Told In Great Screenplay

Showing at the Ritz theatre Tuesday only, the picture, "The Sin of Nora Moran" proves that the old saying, "there is nothing new under the sun," is wrong. There is something new under the motion picture sun, at any rate. This new film has been made with an amazing and totally different screen technique. Starting from the last moments of a doomed girl's life it carries the theatre-goer back through the entire history of the girl, hitting her life through the unusual medium of dreams.

Nora Moran is the poor unfortunate.
