ARMY AIR MAIL SERVICE STOPS

Hearing on Stevens Peace Bond Order Set for Monday

WAS REMANDED TO JAIL AFTER FRIDAY VERDICT

Peace Justice Holds Jurisdiction Is Prescribed

J. C. Stevens, tried in district court here Friday on charges of assault with intent to murder, was given a five year suspended sentence by the jury which returned its verdict at 6 o'clock in the afternoon.

Stevens pleaded guilty to the charges, asking the suspended sentence and promising the court good behavior if released. Mrs. Katie Stevens, wife of the defendant, was the complaining witness.

J. C. Stevens, remanded to jail Friday afternoon in default of a $1,000 peace bond judgment, will be brought into district court Monday morning on a writ of habeas corpus for a hearing sought by his attorneys, Joseph A. Seymour and Dick Tate, in an effort to get dissolved an order for peace bond.

The bond was ordered after a separate complaint had been made in the January term of justice court by Mrs. Katie Stevens before Peace Justice B. C. Girdley, and was not affected by the district court jury's verdict of a five-year suspended sentence on a charge of assault with intent to murder.

Mrs. Stevens swore in her complaint her husband had made sexual threats against her and that he was able and a person calculated to carry out his threats.

Stevens pled guilty to the threats, as he had done in the examining trial held prior to the separate complaint, but pled no intention of executing them.

He was placed in jail. Grand jury indictment resulted on the assault with intent to murder charge, and the trial which was held Friday. But the restrictions of the peace bond judgment remained, as Peace Justice Girdley held he is without jurisdiction or authority of law for reopening of the January session of justice court, in which this case was tried, resulting in the order for peace bond.

Methodist Young People Will Observe the Founding of Epworth League Sunday Night

Young People's day will be observed in all Methodist churches of the West Texas conference today, in recognition of the 44th anniversary of the founding of the Epworth league in Southern Methodism. Young people of the churches have promoted special programs, in which achievements and development of their division will be discussed.

The Epworth league, which was organized in 1889 at Cleveland, O., was expanded into the Young People's division in 1930. There are now several thousand recorded members in the West Texas conference. The league resulted from a merger of five widely extended societies of the Methodist church, at the Cleveland meeting, and was adopted by Southern Methodism the following year.

The evening service at the First Methodist church here will be devoted to observance of the day, the service beginning at 7:30. An interesting program has been planned and the public has been invited to attend.

Of the Young People's division, M. D. Johnson, president of the division, said: "This organization has slowly molded itself into the Methodist church as an inseparable agency for the promotion of the will of God among the young people. It stands today as a monument to the thousands of men and women who have enjoyed its opportunities of Christian service and growth, and for the attainment of the highest ideals of a character and manhood, which this great instrument affords. We, the people of today, feel that we have advantages in the Young People's division of our church that were not enjoyed by any previous generation to the extent that we enjoy them."

WILSON DRY GOODS CO.

Now It's Beef-Steak Cooked in Good Beer

It has often been said "Eat an apple a day and keep the doctor away." How it originated, I'm afraid no one knows. Evidently it is simply an expression which took the fancy of the people and has been handed down from generation to generation. Incidentally, you might be interested in the English version of this same rhyme. It reads, "Eat an apple going to bed, make the doctor bawle his head." Which, after all, is pretty tough on the medical profession, but we doubt if the apple eating habit would ever become so popular as to cause all doctors to become worried over their source of income.

Nevertheless, it is true that anything which will add to the general health and well-being of her family is of much concern to the housewife. In this connection, it is interesting to note a tendency which has gained favor since the return of legal beer—it is the use of this foamy beverage in lending a new savoriness to many dishes. One explanation for its wide use may perhaps be gained from the fact that bottled beer has a high nutritive value and adds a unique and distinctive flavor to many soups, sauces, dressings, in casseroles, meats and cheese dishes.

This "new deal" in cooking, so to speak, has gained particular favor among some of the leading hotel chefs throughout the country. Prominent among the list is Hilare Krummacker, chef at the world's largest hotel.

According to Mr. Krummacker, "Good beer is essential in securing the proper flavor in many meat dishes. Some days we use several cases of beer to flavor special soups and meats, and scarcely a day passes that beer is not an ingredient in some recipe."

Here are recipes for two of Mr. Krummacker's favorite dishes.

Ford V-8 Design Means Fine Car Performance

IT TAKES eight cylinders to give you eight-cylinder performance. If it's less than an eight in cylinders, it's less than an eight in speed, power, smoothness and motoring enjoyment. The Ford V-type eight-cylinder engine has certain definite engineering advantages that increase this margin of superiority.

The real quality of an automobile is invisible—it is hidden beneath the hood. But performance cannot be concealed—it is a definite, demonstrable fact. The Ford V-8 tells its own story of performance in traffic, on hills—on every road. A half-hour behind the wheel will

There is an additional feature of the Ford V-8 that is of importance to every motorist. And that is economy. Millions of miles of constant use have proved to hundreds of thousands of Ford V-8 owners that this is the most economical Ford car ever built. Small Turnover In Senate Seen

AUSTIN (AP)—A relatively small turnover in the membership of the Texas senate in the next legislature is predicted by political observers...

Contests for the seats of the other 11 senators who are not "holders" are probable. Sixteen of the 31 members have two years remaining in the terms for which they were elected in 1931.

Of the four who will retire voluntarily, three will seek higher offices. The fourth, Miss Margie E. Neal of Carthage, the only woman ever elected to membership in the upper house, will not again be a candidate.

Senators Joe M. Moore of Greenville, and Walter F. Woodull of Houston, aspire to the office of lieutenant governor, which will be vacated by Edgar E. Witt, candidate for governor.

Walter C. Woodward of Coleman seeks to advance from the senate to attorney general. Tales of difficult campaigns ahead of those who want to return to their seats in the senate were brought to Austin by many who came here for the recent special session.

In the senate's southernmost senatorial district, the senior member of the senate, Archie Parr of Beaufort, is expected to have stiff opposition. Those who have seen him re-elected continuously for the past 20 years are confident he will again emerge the victor, however.

Conjecture was rife among the legislators on the possibility that Mrs. Sarah P. Hughes of Dallas, only woman member of the current house of representatives, would oppose Senator George C. Purl, who will seek to continue as the Dallas county senator. Political friends and opponents of the senator and representative precinct it would be a bitter contest if she entered the race.

Other senators whose terms end this year are W. R. Cousins of Beaumont, Julian P. Greer of Elkhart, T. J. Holbrook of Galveston, W. K. Hopkins of Gonzalez, Cecil Murphy of Greenville, Frank H. Rawlings of Fort Worth, and H. Grady Woodruff of Decatur.

Indians Will Have Full Freedom for Ceremonies

FORT HALL, Idaho (AP)—Indians of the United States will be permitted freedom of religion and tribal ceremonies, John Collier, Indian Commissioner at Washington, D. C., notified Fort Hall Indian reservation officials.

Many governmental school located on Indian reservations are depriving their students of arts and crafts of their forefathers, the notice said. These activities must be encouraged instead of prohibited.

"The fullest constitutional liberty in all matters affecting religion, conscience and culture is insisted on for all Indians," the correspondence emphasized. "I have discovered that in some jurisdictions, it is believed by some Indians that they must secure permission of the agency before they may hold dance ceremonies."

More than 100,000 applications for new inventions and devices pour into the United States patent office each year.

The tourist business in the United States approximates $9,000,000,000 annually.

Retired Minister Received Only 12 Months Schooling

BRADY. (P)—Few of the thousands who have listened to his forceful sermons knew or suspected that the Rev. I. T. Morris, 80-year-old retired Methodist minister of Brady, had only 12 months of schooling. Systematic reading, however, gave "Brother" Morris, as he always was known to his parishioners, a broad education.

Mr. Morris, who was born at Powhatan, Ark., in 1853, was a pioneer Arkansas circuit rider, twice a presiding elder, and held pastorates in many of the leading Methodist churches in Texas.

When Mr. Morris became of school age, the Civil war broke out, and schools available to him were closed during the four years of strife. Had it not been for his mother, Morris perhaps would not have learned to read until he was 17, when he attended a little country school for six months.

His mother taught him the alphabet when he was six, and with that key he unlocked the mystery of the printed word. At the age of 21, he attended a "district school" taught by a Methodist minister for another six months, thereby bringing his total school training to 12 months.

Taking the man who was president of the United States at the time as an example, young Morris acquired a liberal education by reading books. He has kept up his "reading habit" through life and today is regarded as one of the "best read" men in the community.

Brother Morris acquired his theological education in the same way. When he decided to become a preacher in 1877, he was assigned as a circuit rider to the White River conference in Northeastern Arkansas. Preaching, teaching and pastoral calls consumed every minute of his time at each mission station. But those long, weary hours in the saddle between preaching places, provided considerable leisure and "Brother" Morris utilized it to read books while his trusty gospel steed trudged along. In that way he equipped himself for service in the larger congregations of his church.

After serving as a circuit rider in Arkansas for eight years, he was transferred to the West Texas conference in 1885. He held pastorates at Yorktown, Corpus Christi, Victoria, Beville, Llano, San Antonio, Gonzales, San Marcos, Runge, Cuero, Bastrop, Brady, Goldthwaite and Sabinel. He served as presiding elder in the Beville and San Marcos districts.

In 1921, he retired after 44 years of pastoral service and since has made his home with one of his daughters, Mrs. Duke Mann, at Brady. He still preaches occasionally.

Prehistoric Culture Found in Panhandle

CANYON. (P)—Dr. Warren K. Moorehead, dean of American archaeologists, while in Canyon recently, stated that from the point of view of archaeological studies, the Panhandle of Texas was a strategic center and that the prehistoric Panhandle culture, the remains of which are found in many different places, is one of extreme interest. He stated further that it was now the opinion of scientists that the Pueblo Indian culture found in New Mexico was a later phase of the same life which had its beginnings in the Panhandle region.

Asked the extent of the area in which this peculiar Panhandle culture existed, Dr. Moorehead and Floyd Studer, Amarillo archaeologist, were agreed that the eastern boundary of New Mexico marked the limits of the land in which these early people lived.

Dr. Moorehead said that no one knew the number of these people, that there might have been 20,000, and that it was possible the remains they left were those of many generations.

Houses built by these ancient men of the Panhandle were usually one story in height, sometimes made of stones placed vertically in slab-like arrangements, and sometimes laid horizontally, forming substantial walls. Rooms varied in size from six to 25 feet square. Often one floor was superimposed upon another, although no reason for doing so had been discovered. Most of the ruins are out on the plains, only two having been found in the shelter of overhanging cliffs.

It was probable, Dr. Moorehead said, that the people who built the dwellings depended upon the buffalo and other game for their sustenance, although some wild plants resembling the sweet potato have been found near the ruins and nowhere else in this section of the Panhandle.

He is the father of eight children and has given all of them a college education.

Country.

It was not likely these early Indians used tobacco because only two small pipes have been found in an area covering many hundred square miles.

The pottery found in the ruins was without decoration. Only two perfect jars have ever been found in the Panhandle and these now rest in a New York museum.

Dr. Moorehead said it was now the opinion of scientists that as the Indians slowly moved west they progressed in civilization, their culture culminating in that high type found in the ruins of the Pecos, New Mexico, region.

The eastern scientists stated that the American Museum society recently voted to have work done by local trained men and to have valuable specimens stay in the museums of the section in which they were found.

"It is to be regretted," said Dr. Moorehead, "that untrained people attempt to make excavations, that amateurs destroy materials of great value which can never be replaced."

He suggested that a better proceeding would be for the amateur who thinks he has discovered a ruin, to get in touch with a well-trained investigator and then assist him in securing the treasures in the ruin.

Dr. Moorehead declared he had never found any buried treasure and had never personally known any one who had secured anything of monetary value by digging for treasure.

Cameron Cemetery Is Pioneers' Rest

CAMERON. (P)—One mile east of Cameron, overlooking the Valley of Little River, is a two-acre tract of land called "The Old Cemetery," where the bodies of Cameron pioneers are buried. The old cemetery has been neglected for several years.

In one unmarked grave lies the body of Daniel Monroe, who donated the sixty-acre tract of land on which Cameron was built. As captain of state rangers during Sam Houston's presidency, Monroe defended Cameron in several Indian raids.

The old cemetery, dedicated in 1949, is the resting place of a number of Confederate soldiers, including Mayor J. C. Rogers, who commanded a company of a Texas regiment during the Civil war.

Dr. Beaumont, formerly of Kentucky, and physician to many pioneer Cameron families, was buried by the Masons here 66 years ago.

A troop of Union soldiers was quartered in Cameron during reconstruction days. One was killed in a brawl and buried in this old cemetery. Though his name is unknown, the grave is remembered on the annual Confederate Decoration day.

The finest monument was erected 71 years ago by James Jeffries, former district clerk of Milam county, and later lieutenant governor of Louisiana. To his young wife, Annie, and her brother this marble memorial was erected and surrounded by an ornamental iron fence which now shows the ravages of time.

Boy Scouts and other organizations, business men and citizens, have cooperated with the charities, Mrs. Stewart said.

year after being appointed deputy land surveyor of Bexar land district, a large area in the western portion of Texas surrounding San Antonio. In this capacity he surveyed and made land locations in Gillespie county and in the year 1846 surveyed lands located on the upper Guadalupe river. About this time while working with another surveying party on the San Sabo river, Tivy found himself precipitated into a rousing battle with the Indians.

Following the gold rush in California, and Tivy went overland with a wagon train, spending the winter on the way and encountering many elemental hardships. His first California venture was in the hotel business, following which he staked a claim and tried mining. In 1853, he was elected surveyor of Tulare county, Calif., and served as a member of the California legislature.

In 1855, he was ordered to run a surveying line through the wild Sierra Nevada mountains and, in spite of engagements with Indians and grizzlies, was accredited with running the first standard correct line through those mountains.

Tivy returned to Texas and joined the Confederate ranks. From a second lieutenant, promotions came steadily and as Captain Tivy, the soldier returned to Karnes county and thence to Kerrville, where he settled on a rich tract of land now embraced in the southern section of Kerrville. In 1873, he was sent to the legislature of Texas and, when Kerrville was incorporated in 1883, he was selected its first mayor. Late in life he was married to Mrs. Ella Losee, widow of an army surgeon.

Tivy gave the 16 acres of land that became the site for Kerrville's first public school building, and additional lots to be sold for school maintenance.

During the time of his residence, terminated by his death in 1892, he saw the gradual transformation of Kerrville from a frontier village to a beautiful town; a school, change from log cabin days to well-appointed buildings and a well-selected curriculum.

The schools, especially, will support a part of a day in which to honor him.

Under the Dome Of the Capital

BY GORDON K. SHEARER

AUSTIN (U.P.)—A married man's overcoat can be sold for his debts, but a single man's clothing is exempt, Rep. Harlee Morrison, Terrell, discovered when he studied the present state laws witholding certain personal property from seizure by creditors.

His study brought out other strange things. The law literally separates the sheep from the goats. Twenty head of sheep can be retained by a farmer against all creditors, but his goats can be taken. He can keep hogs, but turkeys, ducks, geese, chickens and guinea may be sold.

He can keep a horse and buggy. The law does not mention an automobile, but courts have construed the provision for keeping a horse and buggy to mean that the family is entitled to one vehicle, and have refused to deprive them of an automobile.

Rep. Harold Hankamer, El Paso, is one of the smallest members of the Texas house of representatives in stature. Rep. George Parkhouse, Dallas, seized upon this for some good natured raillery. Hankamer was addressing the house from behind the stand upon which a microphone connects with the house loud speakers. His head barely was visible above the stand.

Parkhouse raised a "point of order." When Speaker Coke Stevenson inquired what the point was, Parkhouse replied:

"The gentlemen from El Paso should stand up, not sit, when he address the house."

Judge Richard Critz of the supreme court commission took his best stance for a swing at a golf ball on the Austin country club links. The other three members of a foursome were silent as golf etiquette requires at such a moment. Suddenly they heard a sharp snap. Judge Critz lowered his club, looked around wonderingly, and then said "I'm shot." A boy shooting with a target rifle had hit him in the left foot. The small bullet struck a bone and glanced along the judge's big toe. He was taken to a physician. The wound was not serious, though painful.

Chief legislative feat of the special session was accomplished by Rep. J. C. Duvall, Fort Worth. He convinced a committee that a constitutional amendment could be submitted at a special session of the legislature. His argument upset an accepted belief to the contrary that he existed more than 50 years.

Incidentally, the discussion brought out the fact that the present constitution provides no authority for the legislature to call a constitutional convention to frame a new constitution, though that has been attempted several times in recent years.

Rep. R. M. Johnson, Palestine, issued campaign placards this week announcing his candidacy for lieutenant governor. The cards said he is "in to stay and out to win." Fellow house members had quite a bit of sport by pasting pictures of wrestlers and others over Johnson's features on the cards and sending the amended cards to his desk.

Incidentally, the week was marked by a lieutenant governor's breakfast. It was engineered by Sen. Joe Moore, Greenville, with the various candidates for that office invited. All denied that it was an elimination breakfast.

Work is Proctor's favorite pastime. He hopes to die with his boots on and a lariat rope or a plough handle in his hand. At any rate, the veteran cattleman will never retire unless bedridden, he said. He says he never expects to have a "drought in his shirt," meaning by that he won't use dry weather as an excuse to stay out of his field.

Colorado Looks for More Teams to Beat

COLORADO. (P)—Alexander, exponent of strategy in the days of manual fighting, had nothing on "Red" Coffman, Colorado girls' basketball coach, in the belief of the fans.

His girls engaged in more than 20 contests over the season past, never losing a game. Now he's looking for a match with any club which thinks it has a chance to beat his charges.

Let any coach think the Colorado girls a set-up, Coffman points out they defeated the crack team from Westbrook 60 to 39 in the Colorado invitational tournament.
