Journey's End

"It was easy," said Sir Malcolm Campbell after his super-car Bluebird had bulleted over the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., at nearly 254 miles an hour. But was it? Look at the drawn, tense lines in the face of the steel-nerved British driver as he appears in this picture, taken immediately after the recent run which beat his own former world speed mark of 245 miles an hour.

ODESSA EXPECTS TO OPEN A BANK ABOUT APRIL 1

ODESSA, March 1.—Application has been made to the comptroller of currency by Judge T. G. Hendricks, Wickliffe Skinner, R. T. Waddell, T. S. Armstrong, and Geo. D. Elliott of Odessa to organize the First National bank of Odessa. T. G. Hendricks will be president and Wickliffe Skinner vice president. Other officers and directors have not been announced.

Those making application for the charter have been assured by the national banking department that it will be granted without delay, and it is expected to have the new institution open for business before April 1. This is a new bank and will have no connection whatsoever with the closed Citizens National bank, which has been closed since last May and in the hands of George C. Embry, receiver.

Business men and citizens of Odessa are greatly enthused over the opening of the new banking institution and are of the opinion that it will increase business in the Odessa area ten per cent or more. According to Wickliffe Skinner, who is to be vice president, the new institution will probably occupy the old Citizens National bank building.

Another Holder Is a Roper Now

Another Holder will uncoil his riata in country-wide competition, when Arthur, 19-year-old brother of Allan Holder, rides in the Fat Stock show this month at Fort Worth.

Holder, who lives a few miles this side of Lamesa with his father, J. W. Holder, has a five-year-old roping horse, "Pronto," which he says is as good as the best.

Holder to Rope At Stock Show

Allan Holder, Midland roper, has gone to Fort Worth to compete with national roping experts in the Fat Stock show. He took second money in a calf roping event at Tucson recently, and also took prize money at shows in Wickenburg, Ariz., and Los Angeles.

He told friends that Wickenburg was the former home of Williams, who draws "Out Our Way" for The Reporter-Telegram. The comic was formerly known when it ran in The Arizona Republican, as "Out Wickenburg Way."

Holder and Elmer Jones, also of Midland, are riding the same horse, Holder's animal, the well known "Coondog," having received a bad wire cut last year, from which he failed to recover and had to be shot.

English Writer Has Praise for Midland

Midland has been used as a "cited example of the smaller American towns" upon two occasions this month.

In the New York Times, Gilbert K. Chesterton, noted English writer, writes: "A few weeks ago, I drove across the continent, I know more about the small towns of the United States than I had learned from train windows. I remember the barren, the ugly, the sordid, the clap-trap, the horrible—but in the towns out west, particularly some of them, as in New York itself, there is something more. I remember Midland, Tex., a town of a few hundred with its restricted business blocks and its great hotel and office buildings (I speak carefully) as I would remember anything outside of New York; the desert stretched all about it, still and tawny, and just then in full bloom... the small town curve of architectural taste."

Cornelius Vanderbilt, here about six weeks ago, wrote an article for the American magazine, in which he spoke of Midland in the leading paragraph, using the name of the town in connection with Palm Beach, Fla.

A RABBIT DRIVE IS UNDER WAY

Tentative Plans Are For a Speaking, Barbecue

The most gigantic rabbit drive ever staged in the history of Midland county may result from plans being made by county farmers, business men said today.

The farmers are tentatively planning a great drive which would be culminated with a barbecue and speeches of political candidates.

Now would be a good time for such a drive, it is pointed out, inasmuch as the death of one adult female rabbit now would be equivalent of killing numerous rabbits later in the year, after the mating season.

Valley Land for Apartments Here

Mrs. T. E. Zimmerman, from Pharr, in the lower Rio Grande valley, will move to Midland this week to take charge of the Rainwater apartments which she acquired in a deal with Dr. J. B. Thomas of Midland.

To Exhibit Oil Painting Here

A Biblical painting done by a former Midland woman, Mrs. Bessie Cowden Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cowden, will be exhibited Wednesday evening at the prayer meeting service in connection with an address by the pastor, the Rev. Winston F. Borum, on "The Great Triumvirate."

FACE BIG LOSS OF SOLDIERS

Observers Say Japs Stand Chance to Lose 10,000

TOKYO, March 1. (UP)—The League of Nations plan for a round table conference of world powers to end Shanghai hostilities was acceptable to Japan, its foreign office notified its Geneva delegation today.

The principle of simultaneous withdrawal from Shanghai was not accepted because the Japanese do not trust the Chinese to carry out their promises. The Japanese insist on witnessing the actual Chinese withdrawal first.

Observers Say Japs Desire Peace Now

SHANGHAI, March 1. (UP)—Foreign military observers toured the battle front today and expressed the belief that Japan, faced with an almost insurmountable tactical problem, would soon be prepared to accept any reasonable peace proposals.

Experts were unanimous in declaring that the Japanese cannot hope to meet the situation unless they sacrifice 10,000 casualties. It appeared that General Shirakawa was unwilling to do that.

Visitors agreed that the Chinese were well dug in and that the Japanese would be compelled to literally pulverize the entire area to gain victory, barring the possible weakening of the Chinese morale.

THE PROBLEM AT GENEVA

As the so-called disarmament conference drags along at Geneva, it becomes more and more apparent that few, if any, of the governments represented there are really looking for disarmament.

The problem is a tougher one than we had supposed. For rivalry in armaments is, after all, only a symptom, not a disease in itself. It is an effect, not a cause.

Back of it lies the fact that we have a world civilization in which international differences, in the last analysis, can only be settled by force. As long as we have such a set-up, everybody concerned will keep on maintaining the instruments by which force is applied.

All of this becomes clear when you examine the specific points on which discussion at Geneva has been going forward.

A recent cable pointed out that only the American delegation is opposed to the abolition of the battleship. The other naval powers are willing to do away with it. Uncle Sam demurs.

Now when you get right down to it—what earthly difference does it make?

The word battleship evolved from the old expression, line-of-battle-ship, which meant a ship carrying enough heavy guns to be able to take its place in the main line of battle where the hardest blows are given and received. In the old sailing ship days such vessels were three deckers, mounting from 74 to 100 guns. Lighter one and two-deck ships—frigates, corvettes, sloops-of-war and so on—were meant for scout work.

Suppose that every navy sank its battleships; what then? The most powerful ships remaining, whatever their type, would become line-of-battleships—would be counted on to do the heavy work when two fleets collided. At present, these would probably be the 10,000-ton eight-inch gun treaty cruisers.

Destroy the 30,000-ton dreadnaught and you simply promote the heavy cruiser to take its place. The essential situation remains precisely the same. You may economize slightly on construction costs, but the navy as a fighting machine remains practically unchanged.

The delegates at Geneva, in other words, are squabbling over minor points. You can't abolish armaments without abolishing the causes that lead to war, any more than you can abolish unemployment without doing away with the things that lead to depression.

INSTALLMENT AUTO TAGS

Authorities in Arkansas have found a novel way of making the depression easier for motorists, simply by permitting automobile owners to pay for their 1932 license tags in installments instead of in a lump sum, as is usually the rule.

Many taxpayers are unable to pay the full amount now, but can pay part of it now, part of it in June and the remainder in September. And the plan has much to commend it.

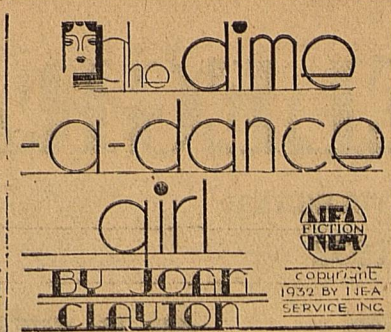

There are those, of course, who insist that people whose incomes have been radically reduced by unemployment or part-time work have no business trying to run their automobiles. But the auto, in a great many cases, is an absolute necessity. A ruling that permits the ordinary citizen to continue using his auto when he is hard up is apt to be a wise one.

Beautiful Ellen Rossiter, employed at Barclay's department store, works nights as a dance hall hostess.

Steven Barclay, 57, and owner of Barclay's, is in love with Ellen. She refuses to marry him because she loves handsome Larry Harrogate.

Larry asks Ellen to pose for a portrait. Ellen agrees on condition that Myra and Bert Armstrong, Myra's fiance, accompany her to the studio.

Later when Ellen is in the dressing room friends of Larry's arrive. She overhears them teasing him about his "fast-dancer" ways.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXIV

At the beginning of the long subway ride from Larry's studio to the Brooklyn apartment Ellen was plunged in misery. The evening had been the most wretched of her life.

Association with Larry had been folly from the beginning. It was late now to mend that original mistake, but mend it Ellen would.

In her mind she framed the polite little note that would tell him of the unavoidable duties that prevented her from posing further.

At 11 o'clock she reached the Brooklyn apartment. Molly and Mike were long asleep. Ellen cautiously tiptoed into her bedroom. Before undressing she wrote the note to Larry. It had cost her a few tears but Larry would never guess that. He would never know the bright fancies and dreams she had woven about his irresponsible figure.

She sealed the envelope and placed it on the bureau for morning mailing. She was in bed but not asleep when Myra entered and turned on the lights.

"Awake, Ellen?" she asked softly. Ellen kept her eyes shut a minute then opened them. "Why'd you run away from us?" Myra demanded. "We got there only about 10 minutes after you left. Larry seemed rather worried about you."

"What is it? Did something happen?" When Ellen did not answer Myra went on viciously. "I bet that Cleopatra woman said something. We didn't stay, so I barely met her, but if I ever saw a natural cat that woman was one."

Ellen turned her head away from the glare of the light. She stared at a patch of starry sky cut out between the clouds.

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

this time there will be another prayer.

The young man who followed his dad's advice and married both beauty and brains was jailed for bigamy.

A Midland woman complained to her maid that she saw a man kissing her the day before and asked if it was the iceman or the grocery deliveryman.

A Scotch barber explained to a newly hired hand that he paid lower wages in the summer because the work was easier. They didn't have to help the customers on with their overcoats.

A small boy, leading a donkey, passed an army camp. A couple of soldiers wanted to have some fun with the lad.

Why are you holding on to your brother so tightly, sonny?" asked one of them. "So that he won't join the army," the youngster replied.

Under the coping, he told her, "and you'll not get wet. I had to talk to you a minute—alone. We can't use the time fighting because mother's waiting in a cab downstairs. So you'll have to postpone till tomorrow telling me what a black-hearted villain I've been. I want you to meet mother—that's my wife. You and I will have tea—his eager voice hesitated a moment—because there's something I must tell you alone. Then we'll see mother in the evening for dinner."

All right, said Ellen faintly. She felt the cold dash of rain against her face, across her bare arms. "You're a darling."

He named forward. His arms were about her, his eager, searching mouth found her lips. Again and again they kissed in the rain.

Ellen stayed for a long time with the wind and with the rain. When she went inside her eyes were still bright with remembered kisses, her heart kept up its hard, happy beat. Oh, the miracle of love! What an exciting and thrilling and colorful thing life was. She loved the rain outside, the music and the gaiety inside. There was nothing critical now about her mood. She sparkled and shone and danced like one possessed. For she knew what Larry meant to tell her tomorrow! It could be only one thing—there could be only one reason he wanted her to meet his mother.

The next day was Saturday. Ellen went through her duties at the store in a happy daze. A thousand times she sought the mirror to look at her bright eyes and glowing cheeks. She looked often at the clock as well, convinced that 12 o'clock would never again in her life be so long in coming.

Indeed, long suffering Lorene became somewhat irritated with her assistant.

"You'll never make a buyer if you don't bone up on your fashion magazines more carefully," Lorene said sharply. "I'll bet you've turned a dozen pages without seeing a thing. The only thing you seem to see is the clock."

Ellen laughed guiltily. "I'm sorry to do that," she promised. "But I have a date and I'm sort of excited."

"If I told Steven that you'd gone blind because you were lurching with him, I'm sure he'd be flattered," Lorene observed dryly. "I must say you're not much help as an assistant."

Ellen opened her mouth but left the words unsaid. She did not correct Lorene's impression but after that she paid more attention to what she was doing. She succeeded in surprising Lorene by the sudden intelligent interest she took in misses' fashions. At 11:50, however, she closed the magazine without a sigh, replaced the dresses she had taken from stock and began the delightful process of arranging her perky felt hat at its most becoming angle. Lorene snorted and left the room.

Ellen was dressed for the street, satisfied at last with her appearance when a messenger boy knocked and then pushed through the half open door. "Sign here," he said. Ellen signed and, wondering, took the envelope from him and tore it open. She read a few lines, a few sentences. She felt the paper crunch in her hands and watched the wall of the room recede. Larry's letter fell to the floor. Every word was seared in her mind. He

Story of Over-determined Wife and Restless Husband Told in 'Windymere'

By KATHLEEN EILAND
One of the newest additions to the county library's collection of new books is "Windymere" by Alice Ross Colver. It is a pleasant, placid story which will be enjoyed by readers who are tired of having their emotions wrecked by drama and their nerves tortured by mystery and horror.

"Windymere" is a New England apple farm which houses a collection of thoroughly modern people. There is Mary, over-brusque, over-determined, but with a heart of gold. There is Nick, Mary's husband, restless, emotional, selfish in little things but generous in reality, and with his own heart of gold.

The theme of the book is the married life of Mary and Nick. Mary represents the commonplace, worthy and practical type of individual whose roots strike deep into the soil of some homeplace. Nick is the restless, gay wanderer with more heart and more real strength of character than is usually pictured in such a type.

Because no marriage can be on a fifty-fifty basis but must incline the balance of power to one side or the other, Mary's and Nick's marriage strikes discord.

Nick's ill-health forced Mary into the position of bread-winner and general manager of the household. Alice Ross Colver has a way of relating things, but as Nick reminded her, she did it in her own way. She forced them all to live at "Windymere," the remote farm they hated and she loved. She "bossed" them thoroughly and Len's painting and even Nick's writing were interrupted by ash-carrying and chicken-feeding.

An entertaining program, including musical numbers and games was arranged by Mrs. B. C. Girdley, Mrs. E. A. Wall, Mrs. L. H. White, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. A. W. Wyatt and Mrs. George Phillips of the circle.

Mrs. Alvin Hicks read the devotional lesson, Mrs. E. Lee offered a prayer; Miss Margie Ward sang a solo; Mary Elizabeth Newman gave a humorous reading and Mrs. O. L. Walton entertained with a piano solo.

The game hour was composed of farmer's love letter contest, family stunts, an intelligence test and a novel refreshment game.

The Hill home was beautifully decorated in spring apple blossoms, and potted plants.

Urges Hurrying Of Reunion Plans

E. H. Estes, early resident of Midland, said today that he believed it important to lose no time in laying plans for the old timers' reunion here July 4 and 5.

Estes attended the old settlers' reunion at Colorado last year and said it was a great event and was staged at little expense.

Thousands of former residents and citizens of the surrounding area were in attendance. People from many states came back to Colorado to meet old friends.

Estes, an old friend of Elza White of Roswell, who originated the idea of the old timers' meeting here this summer, said he wanted to help in any way he could to bring about the reunion.

King Again Ump In Texas League

The popularity of John King, former Midland baseball manager, as an umpire was again recognized when J. Alvin Gardner, president of the Texas league, announced that King had been named as holdover umpire.

King's home is in the East Texas oil fields, and he fortunately owned property that realized for him a small fortune in oil and gas rentals, his friends say.

ODESSA, March 1.—The Odessa track team has been in training for the past few days and great progress has been made, according to Coach Swain. The Odessa team expects to enter the Midland meet early this spring and stage a meet in the "Friendly City."

FIGHT RENEWED

Citizens of Marfa have renewed their fight against the abandonment of Fort D. A. Russell since receiving word from the war department that a "stay of execution" has been granted for 10 months.

Political friends in Washington have pledged their support to have the order cancelled entirely, thereby making Fort D. A. Russell a permanent camp. Messages from General Douglas MacArthur, not only advised the fort would not be abandoned for at least ten months, but gave out the information that the First Cavalry, now stationed at Marfa, would remain there.

As soon as Secretary John Robinson of the Marfa chamber of commerce returns from Washington, there will be held a meeting of the citizenship of the Big Bend country to determine just what action should be taken.

In the meantime, the American Legion post and other organizations are asking the government to establish a veterans' hospital at Marfa. A hospital for the treatment of throat and lungs is badly needed in the southwest and Marfa offers every advantage that such an institution should be located there, it is claimed.

Glasscock Lowest In Indebtedness

Glasscock county has the distinction of carrying the least indebtedness of the 250 counties of Texas according to an article in the Texas Tax Journal which was shown by Willis Woody today.

The county's total indebtedness consists of a warrant issue of $6,276. Dallas county, with $21,382,850, reported the greatest indebtedness.

The first use of chlorine gas in the World war was on April 22, 1915, when the Germans used it in an attack against the French and British lines in the northeastern part of the upper Ypres salient.

are covered with frescoes of Holy Land scenes, executed by an artist brought over from Jerusalem.

Biblical inscriptions are everywhere, on the wall and in the ceiling of the main reading room. There are rugs and rare tapestries from Damascus, a brass brazier from the palace of the governor of Jerusalem, bottles of water from the River Jordan, scores of ancient relics and several thousand volumes of religious writings, old and new.

Keeps Daily Vigil

From the time, about a year ago, that she first admitted a few friends, the fame of the library has spread. Thousands of visitors, even ministers, priests and rabbis with their congregations, have come to Manhasset to see the treasures Mrs. Littleton has collected during her 20 years of travel and Bible study. Today, in her robe and headshawl, she keeps open house every afternoon.

Some of the visitors remain to discuss with Mrs. Littleton the sensational theories she has developed regarding our religious life and times. Many of them hold with her opinions. She lectures sometimes, but she does not exhort. She is a student, she reiterates, and not a preacher.

Her pleasant-faced, soft-voiced woman takes her Bible literally, from hell-fire and brimstone to heavenly streets paved with gold. Her interpretations of parts of the New Testament have convinced her that the Second Coming of Christ is imminent—perhaps tomorrow morning, perhaps next month, but soon.

Sees Prophecies Fulfilled

"The whole world is waiting for it," she said, "although the world itself does not generally realize what is about to occur. This depression is just another link in the chain of evidence which is fulfilling the scriptural prophecies.

"Don't think I'm just raving. It's all in the Bible. If people don't believe as I do then they just don't believe in the Bible. Look at the perfect picture of today in the fifth chapter of James:

"Go to now, ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted and your garments are moth-eaten. Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days."

Wars and earthquakes, famines and floods, all point to the day, Mrs. Littleton believes, when the Christ will return, not as the Lamb of God,

Airplane Motors May Combat Frost

SAN BENITO. (UP).—If frost threatens the 100-acre beanfield of Fred Rusteberg and his son, Fred Jr., three airplane motors will be tuned up in an attempt to ward off damage.

The motors, taken from bombers used during the World war, have huge wooden propellers. Currents set in motion by the whirling propellers will keep frost from forming, the Rustebegs believe.

Their experiment is based upon results obtained by Brown White, San Benito, two years ago when two airplanes flew low over a potato field during a few hours that frost formed elsewhere. The potato crop was undamaged by the cold.

Sergeant Saves Blimp in Florida

FORT BRAGG, N. C. (UP).—Sergeant Frank D. Neff, of the second balloon company at Pope field here, whose home is in Narberth, Pa., has been commended for highly meritorious action in connection with his rescue of a storm-battered army blimp and its crew members.

Neff, himself aboard the blimp, bravely fought his way against the storm to the left engine outrigger when that engine stalled and hand cranked it until it started while the blimp was plunging and rolling before the wind across the army post. The right engine had started at once from the cabin control.

The commendation was in a letter written by Major Gen. Benjamin D. Boulois, chief of the air corps.

Women Get Beauty Hints From Canon

CHRISTCHURCH, Eng. (UP).—Alarmed by the "utter waste of money" on lipsticks and rouge, Canon W. H. Gay is publishing his own beauty hints for the housewives here in his church magazine.

"Let me present you with a prescription which, if followed, will save you a lot of money and will preserve your schoolgirl complexion far more effectively than those messy and sticky compounds," he wrote.

"Here it is: Wash your face in hot water, using ordinary soap. Fill the jug with boiling water and, putting a towel over your head, hold your face over the jug, allow steam to penetrate the pores. Finally, bathe the face with ordinary cold water, using no soap.

"You would be astonished if you knew how many women and girls spend on face creams, face sets containing those funny little bottles and absurd little brushes. Oh, my sisters, what an utter waste of money."

the same region, while farther to the southwest near the Chisos mountains, cinnabar, from which quicksilver is made, is being mined, the product used for paints, ink and other purposes.

Several state university experts in the last decade have made an exhaustive study of potash conditions in the western section, all their reports having been optimistic, but the expense of mining proved a stumbling block until the cheaper system was discovered in recent months.

Estimates have been made that under the new process potash can be prepared for the market $15 to $20 cheaper than the price now asked for the European product.

Tracts in West Texas having potash have for many years been ranch lands, used for grazing, some of which developed new oil fields. The potash area is regarded as much more extensive than the oil sand strata.

More than a decade ago Odessa and Midland pinned their hopes on potash, expecting big growth, and development. But with that delayed, oil wells came in, and now with oil somewhat slowed up, apparently the potash is coming back.

Archers all set

Some 25 citizens of Marfa who organized what is known as the Marfa Archery club, plan to hold a "chicken shoot" in the near future. Several matches in the past have been held and have attracted wide attention. Marfa marksmen have won quite a few honors in West Texas and the club, under the leadership of J. Stogeries, has sponsored a number of shows.

Spring grid practice

According to Leslie Martin, coach of the Marfa Shorthorn football squad, spring practice will start there next week. The Marfa team has a hard year ahead. The first game will be with the Bowie high squad of El Paso early in September.

Studees plant trees

ODESSA, March 1.—Students of the Odessa high school have planted some 50 trees donated by J. T. Long of Odessa. In addition to this, C. W. Pegasus donated the school some 60 shrubs which the students have set out. The beautification program has progressed and property has been greatly improved.

Odessa Planting Many Trees Now

ODESSA, March 1.—The city beautification program which is being sponsored by the Odessa chamber of commerce and civic clubs of this city has made great headway. Nearly 50 persons have entered the yard contest which is to be judged Wednesday and graded on a percentage basis. The judging committee will meet the first of August and again judge the yards, grading them on the percentage of improvement, and prizes will be awarded the winners of each of the six classes. In the past week some 237 trees have been planted.

More than 150 breakfasts, lunches and dinners are served to various members of the royal retinue of Buckingham palace, London, every day.

Ritz Film Shows Conviction Ease

Depicting vividly the ease with which an innocent man can be convicted of a crime by circumstantial evidence, "The Silent Witness," the Fox mystery drama, opening today at the Ritz theatre, brings to the screen one of the most successful of recent stage plays.

It also serves to bring to the screen a star new to movie-goers but extremely popular with Broadway first-nighters, Lionel Atwill, who played the leading role in the stage play. And with Mr. Atwill is a cast of notables, including the seductive Greta Nissen, Weidon Heyburn, Helen Mack and Bramwell Fletcher. The picture was adapted by Douglas Doty from the original play by Jack DeLeon and Jack Celestin. It was directed by Marcel Varnel and R. L. Hough.

Awaits Crisis

By PAUL HARRISON NEA Service Writer

MANHASSET, N. Y.—"The world is fast approaching the greatest crisis it has ever experienced, and will shortly witness the greatest event that has ever occurred.

"The event will be the second coming of Christ."

Tiny silver bells on a bracelet tinkled emphasis to the words of Mrs. Martin W. Littleton. The wife of a prominent New York attorney wore a flowing yellow robe, a white silver-banded headshawl and red slippers. The chair in which she sat was inlaid almost solidly with mother-of-pearl, and commanded a room crowded with the rich, colorful treasures of the Holy Land.

She looked like the high priestess of some mystic cult. She is, she declares, only a humble and devout Bible student who has been able to surround herself with the atmosphere appropriate to her researches.

A Son Remembered

Widely-traveled, socially accomplished, Mrs. Littleton is the mistress of a pretentious Long Island estate. Two years ago she set about building a private studio and library at some distance from her old Colonial house. It never was intended as a shrine, she declared, except in the sense that it was dedicated to the memory of a son, Douglas Littleton, who fell in France during the World War.

But she designed it to be reminiscent of old Palestine. The one-story flat-roofed building is surrounded by a wall, the inner sides of which
