Oil Workers Issue New Strike Warning Today

WASHINGTON, April 19. (U.P.)—Oil workers warned the president today that if wages are not equitably set in the industry "we will witness a national economic warfare perhaps never before equalled", in a letter from Harve Fremming, president of the International Oil Workers' union. The letter carried a threat of strike of 100,000 workers.

CANCER CLAIMS

2 VICTIMS HERE

Two succumbed in Midland today from cancer—R. E. Van Huss, 77, and Mrs. M. J. Snyder, 75. Both had been here longer than a quarter century.

Van Huss, born in Tennessee in 1857, lived in Midland for about 26 years, and had been kept in his bed for the past 15 months. His death was at 6:30 this morning. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon from the family home at 311 N. Marinfeld, under auspices of the Masonic lodge. The Rev. Kenneth C. Miller, pastor of the First Methodist church, will officiate. Interment will be at Fairview cemetery.

Executors will be A. C. Francis, P. J. Mims, W. J. Sparks, E. H. Barron, F. J. Middleton and Charles L. Klapproth.

Van Huss is survived by two sons, Earl of Galveston and Bill Van Huss of Midland, and by a daughter, Mrs. Ed Dooler of Midland.

Mrs. Snyder, who was born in 1859 at Rome, Ga., died at 2:45 this morning. She had lived in Midland for 28 years, the last two of which had been confined to her bed.

Services will be held at 10:30 Friday morning from the family residence at 511 N. Big Spring, with the Rev. W. S. Garnett, Baptist pastor of Stanton, officiating. Interment will be at Fairview cemetery.

Mrs. Snyder leaves one daughter, Miss Sadie Snyder, and two nephews, Raymond and Jodie McCarter, all of Midland. Escorts at the funeral will be Charles Judge Elliott H. Barron, T. Paul Barron, Claude O. Crane, R. Coats, Charles Allen and Allen Tolbert.

BABY'S FUNERAL IS HELD THIS MORNING

Funeral and commitment services were held this morning at the chapel of the Ellis mortuary and at Fairview cemetery for the two-day-old infant son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Jackson which died at 4 o'clock this morning.

The Rev. Winston F. Borum pastor of the First Baptist church, officiated.

VARIED PROGRAM GIVEN TODAY BY THE INSTRUCTOR

Good Cooking Hints Given by Expert During Session

Continuing her presentation of helpful household suggestions and demonstrations of practical recipes, Mrs. Ethyl Warren lectured today to an even larger audience than that of Wednesday. Today marked the third session for the Reporter-Telegram All-Electric cooking school being held in the Yucca theatre.

Outstanding in the recipes presented today was a meat-ball dish called porcupines. Others included an oven meal of tuna fish and noodles en casserole, deviled tomatoes, apple and banana pudding, lazy lady cake, grape mousse, health salad, chocolate yeast cake and banana pie. Recipes for all these dishes except the pie were published in Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram.

Ingredients called for to create the banana pie are 1 1/2 cups scalded milk, 3 egg yolks beaten with 1/4 cup cold milk, one-third cup of sugar and 1 tablespoon of flour. Add the cold mixture to the hot and cool.

Add a pinch of salt and one teaspoon of vanilla. Pour over two sliced bananas. For the meringue the following directions were given: beat the whites of two large or three small eggs until stiff, add two level tablespoons of sugar for each egg white used, beating constantly, arrange on top of pie filling which has been placed in cold, cooked pie shell.

In order to have flakey, crisp pie crust, Mrs. Warren suggested that the shell be placed in the refrigerator for several minutes before it is baked so that part of the excess moisture will be dried out.

Irregularity prevailed during the two-hour session and many questions were asked the food authority. Asked for a good icing recipe for the lazy lady cake on the program, Mrs. Warren replied that she usually used a fudge icing. The following recipe, she said, will never fail: four tablespoons butter, 2 or 3 tablespoons cocoa, 2 1/2 cups powdered sugar, enough hot coffee to give the mixture the right consistency, pinch of salt and vanilla.

A request for a lemon sauce recipe was also received and the following one was given by Mrs. Warren: 10 cups of sugar add two or three cups of lemon juice and one 1/4 cup boiling water and cook, stirring the mixture until it is clear and of the right thickness. Add two or three tablespoons of lemon juice, the grated rind of one lemon, two tablespoons of butter and a dash of nutmeg to the cooked sauce. Cornstarch, she said, could be substituted for the flour used.

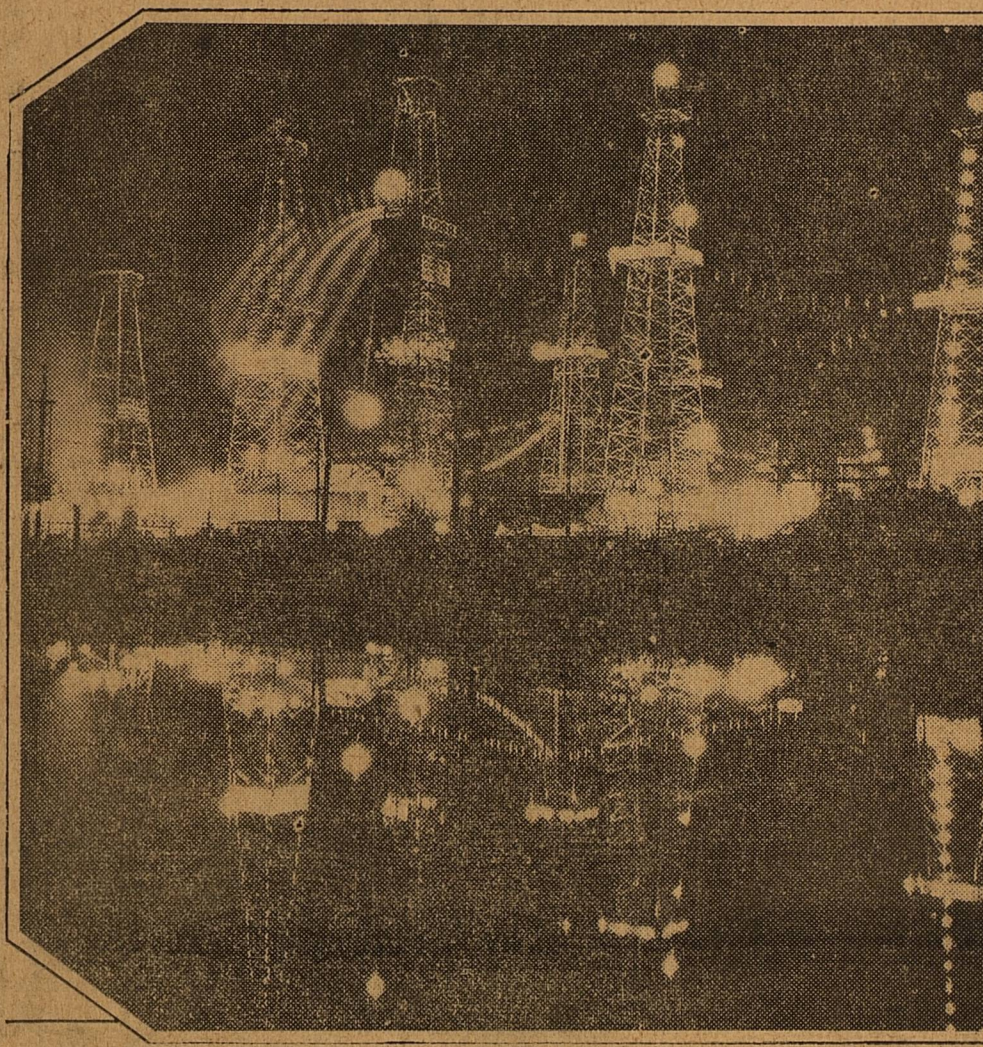

Regarding the cooking of cream and thickened sauces, Mrs. Warren said that when cooking on an electric range, it is not necessary to use a double-boiler. The sauce may be cooked directly over a surface burner if low heat is used.

Excellent cooking hints presented by Mrs. Warren during today's lecture are:

Eight tablespoons of butter equal one-fourth pound of creamery butter. Rice should be washed first in cold water, next in hot water and again in cold. If it is to be used dry, it should be placed in the refrigerator, where the moisture will be quickly absorbed.

Groceries and meats used in today's lecture were donated by Pig-Wiggly grocery and Conner (See COOKING SCHOOL, page 6)

CHURCH OF CHRIST MINISTER PREACHES

Melvin J. Wise, minister of the Church of Christ of Big Springs, spoke at the Midland church last Wednesday night on "The Church Is the Pillar and Ground of the Truth."

Mr. Wise first showed what "the truth is, not—politics, science, theology or philosophy." He used scripture to show that "the truth is the unadulterated work of God," and cited several characteristics of the truth. Mr. Wise impressed upon each member of the church his individual responsibility to uphold the truth.

A large number attended the meeting in spite of the weather.

Pyron Urges His Club to Report

Last practice will be held this afternoon beginning at 5 o'clock, before Midland and Odessa tangle in an exhibition game at 4:30 there Friday afternoon, announced Manager Joe Pyron.

"We want everyone out so we can get in a good, long practice session," he asked.

The manager plans to use three pitchers Friday, Frank Rose, D. D. Shifflet and Fred Girdley. Another pitcher, Richter, may see a bit of warming-up service.

Odessa roundly walloped Midland in the only other game played this season.

A. Wadley Is Vice-President, Pratt Secretary

Fred Wemple received the unanimous vote of the Midland Rotary club today as president of the organization, to take effect July 1. The election was held early in order to have the president-elect and secretary-elect attend the district conference at Abilene May 7, 8 and 9.

Addison Wadley was elected vice president of the club. W. I. Pratt was re-elected secretary. John P. Howe, retiring president, will continue as a director. Hal Grady, Joe Pyron and Percy Bridgewater were named as additional directors. The nominations were made by a committee appointed two weeks ago.

On today's program, Willie Mae Riddle played a piano solo. Dr. K. F. Campbell gave a classification talk on dental surgery and dentistry, being questioned in the form of an interview by Paul T. Vickers.

Wemple was elected voting delegate from the Midland club at the Abilene conference and Pratt was named alternate. Announcement was made that Pratt had been chosen to make one of the five principal addresses in the community service group meeting at the conference. The Sweetwater club having charge of the group.

BOTH DILLINGER AND BARROW ARE AMONG SUSPECTS

No Arrests Made by Hastily Formed Posse

PANA, Ill., April 19. (U.P.)—Four bandits robbed the First National bank here today and escaped with an estimated $30,000. It was believed that John Dillinger organized the robbery.

BETHANY, Okla., April 19. (U.P.)—Three men robbed the Farmers' State bank here of an estimated $1,000 loot and escaped today. A posse was in pursuit. C. R. Wallace, cashier, and two assistants were threatened by the robbers.

EDWARDSVILLE, Kas., April 19. (U.P.)—Two men and two women robbed the Edwardsville State bank of approximately $1,500 today and escaped.

They kidnaped K. H. Beach, vice president, and Arthur Knight, laborer working at the rear of the bank, but both were released unharmed outside the city. The bandits used a Ford V-8 and were believed to be the Barrow gang.

VANDERFORD GETS 2-YEAR SENTENCE

The case of Stable vs Tom Vanderford, which rocked its way through two court sessions, was brought to a conclusion Wednesday when a hung jury caused a mistrial when the case was heard in September, and the case was continued in the December term.

The killing was an outgrowth of domestic trouble caused by a cow-cropping grape vines over a fence belonging to Bowers.

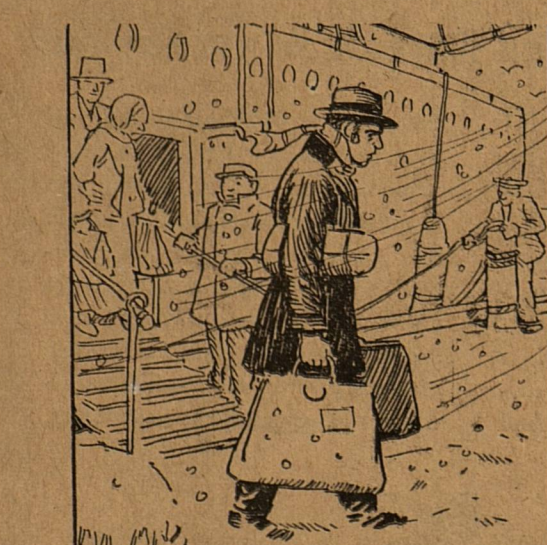

Vanderford must serve a two-year term in the state penitentiary. A hung jury caused a mistrial when the case was heard in September, and the case was continued in the December term.

New Chapter Soon to Be Written in the Rise and Fall of Samuel Insull, En Route to U. S.

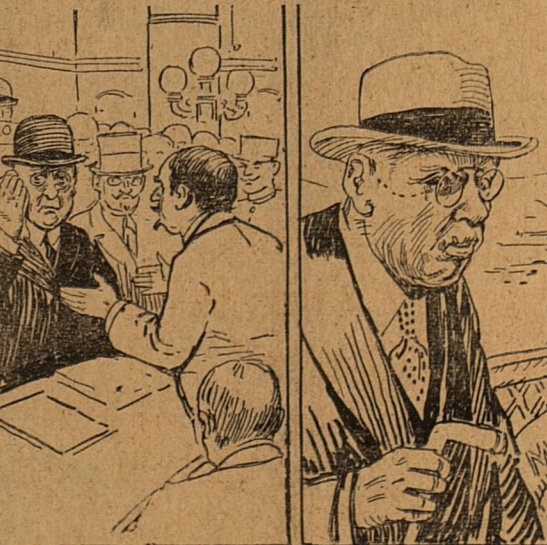

Fifty-three years ago, Samuel Insull stepped to the dock in New York from a steamer which brought him from England to act as a secretary and business assistant to inventor Thomas Edison. Though it was nightfall, young Insull went direct to Edison's home and worked until 4 a. m., setting a pace that led him to dizzy material success.

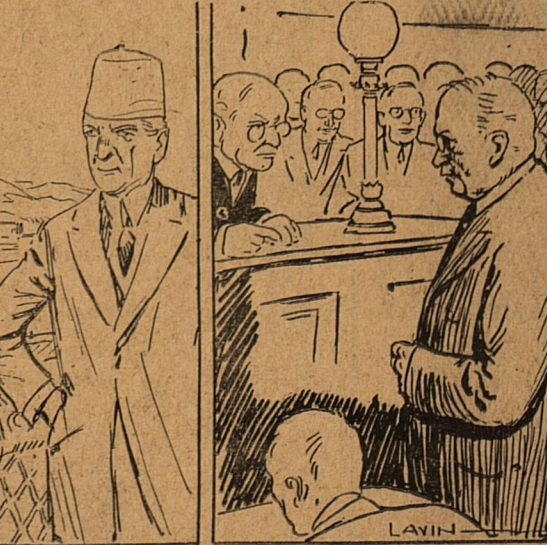

The business resourcefulness Edison lacked was Insull's to a marked degree. When, after 11 years with the inventor, a new president was needed for a Chicago electric company, Insull was chosen. On the old Chicago Edison Co., he built the Commonwealth Edison Co., which became the base company for a spreading utility empire without parallel.

Pyramiding new companies on old ones with money raised by selling stock to the public, Insull came to control a family of utility ventures which served 10,000,000 people in 5,000 communities from Maine to Texas, interests estimated at $3,000,000,000. At the climax of this career he built the 42-story City Opera House, became Chicago's first citizen.

When the depression deepened in 1932, Insull's empire toppled for the same reason many another smaller venture did: income fell off until it could no longer carry debt, and borrowing became impossible. Insull slipped quietly out of Chicago for a four-month stay in Paris, sailing from New York, and leaving behind an angry horde of stockholders.

Warned by a mysterious code message of his coming indictment in Chicago, Insull slunk out of Paris and made his way to Athens, where he successfully defied extradition for months. Then, his pension shorn away, and a legal web slowly tightening about him, he chartered a small steamer and fled Athens, seeking a more secure hideaway.

When his ship anchored in Istanbul harbor, Insull was arrested by Turkish authorities. They gave him into U. S. custody for return to Chicago to face federal charges in connection with the collapse of his utilities empire—a tragic climax to the career of the man once ranked among financial giants of the nation.

IT'S GRAND TO SUBMIT TO SPRING FEVER!

Spring fever is a malady that spares no one. Most of us, thought, don't dare surrender to it. Therefore, it's fun to read a story about one man who did surrender to it—who surrendered all the way, and let the disease run its full course unchecked.

This man was a farmer living near Hiram, O. The other morning, he left home in the family car with $12 worth of maple sirup which he was going to take to town to sell.

He disappeared down the road and for two days he didn't come home. His wife and children got pretty worried.

Then, finally, he showed up, without any car and without any money, and he told them he had been kidnaped. Three men in a big sedan had taken him from his car, taped his mouth shut, board his hands and feet, and carried him clear across the state, over the line into Indiana, before turning him loose. He'd had to borrow money to get home.

This was all right until his family insisted that he tell his story to the police; and the police speedily picked it full of holes, until at last he admitted that the whole story was a fake.

He hadn't been kidnaped at all. He'd just been wandering around, enjoying the spring.

He'd driven to town and sold his sirup, it developed, and had just started home when the spring breeze and the warm sunlight got the better of him.

So he parked his car at a crossroads, hid the key, and set out hitch-hiking—to nowhere at all.

Without any goal, he had wandered clear to Indiana. There, at last, he realized that he was going to have a lot of explaining to do at home. Besides, his $12 sirup money was all gone.

The wanderlust had left him. So he made his way back home as best he could, and cooked up the kidnaping story to avoid embarrassing questions.

"It was just that feeling of spring in the air and having $12 in my pants pocket," he explained, when asked why he'd gone roving.

And that, to anyone who has ever suffered from spring fever, is all the explanation that's needed. The feeling of spring and having money in the pocket—it's a combination very, very hard to resist.

To wander just for the sake of wandering, without a goal and without a purpose—who, on a sunshiny April day, hasn't had to fight down the impulse?

I'LL TELL THE WORLD

The Romance and Thrills of Newsgathering for the United Press—From Universal's Screenplay.

SYNOPSIS: Brown, staff correspondent of the United Press, world-wide newsgathering association, has been sent by airplane to get the story of the pearls encountered by Naval Officers in a dirigible which has been disabled in a storm. He has left a "date" to take the assignment. In the Naval dirigible is Brown's arch-rival, Briggs, of the Confederated Press, who has the tale of the tragedy well in hand. Brown and his pilot have been flying through a storm into Northern Canada, where the dirigible is expected to land.

CHAPTER II As Stanley Brown, frozen to the bone, wrapped in an inadequate blanket, fell in dinner clothes, wondered what the outcome of his strange adventure would be, the pilot fought to keep the small cabin monoplane on a reasonably even keel. The ship rocked and bumped and pounded northward over Canada through the storm. Brown spent miserable hours trying to figure out where he was and where the drifting dirigible might be. He was just wondering if Frank Hardwick, his boss, had sent him on either a useless or a fatal assignment, when the pilot turned around in his seat and motioned forward. Brown looked out the window to see a small log building, in front of which was a flat, cleared space. The pilot asked him if he wanted to land.

"I'll say!" he managed to declare through chattering teeth. The pilot banked, eased back on his throttle and made a precarious landing. Brown dragged his cramped body from the ship the moment it landed. He ploughed through the snow to the log cabin, almost broke down the door to get inside. He discovered, on entering, that the place was a fur post and store. He found a grizzled, aged trapper seated in front of a cheering, roaring fire with his back to him. "Who's there?" asked the trapper, without looking around. "Well, it isn't a Frigidaire salesman!" snapped Brown, slapping his hands and looking over the combination living room and store, lined with equipment for hunting, snowshoes, canned foods, clothing and a thousand knickknacks. "Where's everybody?" "Gone. I fetch th' balloon. I'd a gone, too, if my feet weren't froze. It came down at Loon River 'bout forty miles away."

"when my fingers thaw out." Brown went to the pilot's side. The pilot sat down. Brown scrawled a note on a paper message pad sewed on the thigh of the pilot's flying suit. It read: "UNIFIED PRESS, MONTREAL, DIRIGIBLE DOWN FORTY MILES NORTH OF LOON LAKE AT LOON RIVER. RESCUE EXPEDITION ON WAY FROM HERE. BROWN."

He gave it to the pilot with instructions to send it immediately, then made a bed of two chairs. Assured by the trapper that the rescue party must return to the post, as there was no place else to go, he went to sleep, a benign smile on his tired features.

He was awakened in a short time later by a station call which the radio picked up. The pilot had by this time moved the portable set inside the fur post. Brown watched him take the message. It was:

MONTREAL — DIRIGIBLE YEARS BIGGEST STORY. TELL BROWN MUST COVER EVERY DEVELOPMENT. DON'T UNDERSTAND NO WORD LAST THIRTY-FIVE MINUTES—HARDWICK

Brown was irritated by having his nap disturbed. "Get this, Hardwick—New York. Cooler Tuesday, probably followed by Wednesday. Wish you were here." Sign my name.

He tried to sleep again but before he had dozed off the barking of dogs disturbed him, causing him to ask the trapper: "Can't you make those mutts pipe down?"

"That's the gang comin' back from th' balloon," was the non-committal reply.

"Oh!" Brown was on his feet, tense and alert. He turned to the pilot.

"Tell Montreal to stand by for a flash!" he ordered. A few minutes later the rescue party and the rescued arrived, stamped into the post. Most of the men wore fur-wrapped trappers and Indians. Three, however, unwound themselves from blankets and disclosed Naval uniforms. The fourth of the rescued, in civilian clothes, was Briggs.

He was tall, a few inches above medium height, with black, curly hair and sparkling eyes. He was handsome, even with his hair mussed, his clothing soiled, and his face lined with fatigue. Like Brown, he was lean, and had a wild, almost fanatical expression on his face. He was thoroughly engrossed with the thought that he must get his story to the Confederated Press, rival organization of the United Press. So worried was he that he didn't see Brown or even his surroundings.

He turned to one of the trappers. "I've gotta have 'em," he fumed. "I want the best dog team you "Simple. Listen!" He turned to the pilot. "Flash! Loon Lake, Canada. Dirigible down. All hands safe!" Briggs gasped again. "Well, I'll be doggoned!" he exclaimed.

Brown sent his story while Briggs stormed, cajoled, threatened. The New York offices of the United Press got the flash, relaying it to newspapers in Chicago, Los Angeles, London, Cairo, Hong Kong and hundreds of other cities throughout the world.

Brown then decided to add insult to injury by dictating to the pilot: "The Naval flyers were none the worse for their adventure but their passenger, William S. 'Types of Christ' Read Before Club By Mrs. R. Miller

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following paper was read by Mrs. R. L. Miller before the Wednesday club, which met Wednesday at the home of Mrs. J. P. Butler.

When asked to talk about the Bible our thoughts naturally turn to Christ, because Christ is the central theme of the whole Bible. In the Old Testament we have the preparation for Christ, in the Gospels we have the manifestation of Christ; in the Acts we have the propagation of the Gospel of Christ; in the Epistles we have the explanation of the Gospel of Christ; and in the Revelation we have the consummation of all the purposes of God in and through Christ.

Since the Old Testament was a preparation for Christ, it is filled with interesting types of Christ. A type is a divinely purposed illustration of some truth, so when we speak of the types of Christ we mean some illustrations or foreshadows that God has given to reveal more clearly the work and character of Christ.

For example, the ark is a perfect type of Christ as the refuge of His people from judgment. In the sixth chapter of Genesis, we are told there was much wickedness in the earth. God warned man of approaching judgment but wickedness continued and God said, "I will destroy man whom I have created from the face of the earth..." But Noah was a "just man" and found grace in the eyes of the Lord. We all know the story of how God told Noah to build the ark and how when the flood came Noah went into the ark and was saved. Faith took Noah into the ark, but it was the ark that kept Noah safe. Faith takes us to Christ, but it is Christ that keeps us safe.

It is interesting to notice the instructions God gave Noah for building the ark. There was only one door, one way of entrance. The window was in the top, the light came from above. And God told Noah to cover the ark with pitch. The word pitch in the Hebrew is the same as "atonement" in Leviticus and numerous other places. It was the pitch that kept the people in the ark safe from the waters of judgment, just as it is atonement that keeps believers in Christ safe from judgment.

Nothing may be dogmatically asserted to be a type without New Testament authority. Let us use the rock as an example. When Moses was leading the children of Israel through the wilderness there were in need of water and Moses appealed to God to provide it for them. He told Moses to smite the rock and that water would come from it. Now we know the rock was a type of Christ because we have New Testament authority for it. In I Cor. 10:4, Paul tells us that rock was Christ. In some cases Bible scholars say that a person or a thing is a type of Christ when there is no New Testament authority for it. In such cases they merely have the authority of analogy, or spiritual congruity. For instance, let us take Joseph. While it is nowhere asserted that Joseph was a type of Christ, Bible scholars say the analogy are too numerous to be accidental.

They were both special objects of a father's love. Joseph was sent by his father to see about the welfare of his brethren. Christ was sent to seek and to save. When Joseph came to his brethren they rejected him and sold him. Christ came to his own and his own received him not, and Judas sold him. In Egypt false accusations were brought against Joseph and he was put in prison. Christ was charged falsely and put in prison. Joseph was taken out of prison and exalted. God hath made that same Jesus whom we crucified, both Lord and Christ. Pharaoh transferred all his power to Joseph; the Father committed all judgment to the son. Joseph returned good for evil to his brethren; Christ died for his persecutors.

We have many other personal types of Christ. So manifold are the distinctions of Christ that many personal types of him are needed. Moses was a type of Christ as the divinely provided deliverer. If you are interested in types you will enjoy a study of the tabernacle. When Moses was leading the children of Israel through the wilderness God told Moses to build the tabernacle, which was the place where God was to manifest Himself as dwelling in the midst of His people, there causing His glory to abide.

God gave Moses instructions as adorned. There was no natural it was full of types. Even the materials and colors had typical meanings. They are believed to be as follows: gold, deity; silver, redemption; brass, judgment, etc. As far as colors are concerned, blue represented things of heavenly nature or origin; purple, royalty; scarlet, sacrifice.

The outside of the tabernacle was

Wednesday Club Observes Bible Day with Service

Bible day was observed by the Wednesday club at the meeting yesterday with Mrs. J. P. Butler and in connection with the program, Mrs. R. L. Miller read a paper on "Types of Christ" which is published elsewhere in this issue.

Roll call was answered with scripture verses. A memorial service held by club members for the late Mmes. Homer Rowe and Russell Lloyd was very impressive. Mrs. Andrew Fasken, president, spoke briefly, referring to the late members, incidents of their lives and what they meant to the club. Mrs. J. M. Caldwell read a poem that was written by Mrs. Claude Duffey in memory of the women, and Mrs. J. M. DeArmond read a copy of the resolutions sent each family. After Mrs. M. R. Hill read "From Shadow to Sunshine," Mrs. Foy Proctor sang "There Is No Death," accompanied by Mrs. E. B. Cowden.

Invited guests for this service were Mmes. Duffey, Fred Wright, Proctor, Cowden and Mrs. Clarence Scharbauer.

During a brief business meeting, reports were heard. The club voted to buy a dictionary for the children's library, since it has completed all dental work for needy children. Announcements were made that the last meeting of the club will be a social to which members of the Junior Wednesday club will be guests, and that the Wednesday club will be guests of the Play Readers club at a tea to be given at the country club May 2.

Refreshments were served to Mmes. DeArmond, Caldwell, O. B. Holt, Frank Cowden, Wallace, Paul Ryan, Andrew Fasken, Hill, Miller, Frank Elkin and the hostess and the following visitors, Mmes. Murray of Toronto, Canada and Mrs. Dinger of Fort Worth.

plain, but the inside was richly adorned. There was no natural light, the only light came from the candlestick and without it the glory and splendor could not be revealed. The "candlestick" was a type of Christ, without the light of Christ we cannot see and enjoy the glory of God.

In making a study of the Bible we must remember that spiritual things are spiritually revealed. There must be meditation and prayer, prayer such as the Psalmist prayed: "Open Thou mine eyes that I may behold the wondrous things out of Thy law."

O'Neil Play Is Read Before Club

The following review of "Days Without End" by Eugene O'Neil was prepared by Miss Leona McCormick after she read the play at a meeting of the Play Readers club, held at the home of Miss Stella Maye Lanham.

"Days Without End" by Eugene O'Neil has set off more varied opinion than any other play this season.

If you recall the hocus-pocus which usually surrounds representations of religious experience on the stage, you will appreciate what O'Neil has done in his honest and skillful play. This hero is a modern skeptic who discovers for himself the need of man for religious faith. The play is no tract, it is as free from dogma as it is from the trumpery conflict between science and religion. It tells with complete honesty one man's experience.

This man, John Loving, is programmed merely as John—which doubtless is intended to tip us off to the fact that he is just a You or I, a sort of Mr. John Anybody. But behind him, throughout the action, stands a grotesque figure, made up too disturbingly like a death-mask. He was John's baser nature, or his real self. This other John was merely the fellow who uttered John's conscious thoughts when John found it in appropriate to speak up in meeting.

John had lost both his parents at the age of fifteen. His mother's death, in particular, caused him to curse the God whom he had believed in, and to become a violent, resentful atheist.

John ultimately felt that he had found the certainty which he sought in the love of his new wife, Elsa. He loved Elsa devotedly, and as for her, she never had any God—until she met John. They passed for the happiest married pair in all Bronxville.

What happens next concerns John's projected novel, with his curious uncertainty as to how it should end; John's sole infidelity, to Elsa; her apprehension of it by oblique means; the consequent near-tragedy whereby she becomes identified with his mother. By imagining Elsa's impending death, he sees that he clearly needs the consolations of religion.

This is the matter of the final scene, which takes place in a church. John praying beneath the Crucifix, and his other self uttering blasphemies and looking very much like Mephistopheles in the third act of Faust. John's prayer seems to be one of O'Neil's best speeches: "O Brother who lived and suffered with me—I believe." No need to add that Elsa forgives him and passes the crisis of her disease.

Earle Lorimore as John Loving acts with a reserve which was never noticed in him before. Selma Royle is lovely as Elsa. Stanley Ridges plays John's other self. Robert Loraine is the Irish priest, John's uncle, and for the purpose of the Famous Women of Dance World Visit With Teachers Here

Ruth Eleanor Howard, publisher of the American Dancer, and Lucille Marsh, famous dance critic and author, were in Midland Wednesday afternoon as guests of Mrs. Paul T. Vickers and Miss Martha Louise Robinson.

The meeting which they were to have conducted at Big Spring Wednesday night was called off, and the two were on their way to the West coast.

At the Vickers studio, Misses Howard and Marsh saw 25 students in classwork. Miss Marsh, a specialist in physical science, said that she will be one of the teachers at the Dancing Masters of America class this summer. Miss Robinson has attended two of these classes which are held in New York.

Mrs. Wolcott Hostess To Mothers Self Culture Club

Members of the Mothers Self Culture club met at the home of Mrs. Frank Wolcott Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. J. W. Day was leader and read two reports, "Frontier in American Literature" and "Humor of the West and Social Life as Revealed in Literature." Mrs. J. M. Haygood presented a resume of the sixth district convention.

Guests included Mmes. R. C. Crabb, J. R. Martin, Frank Johnson, S. S. Stinson, J. S. Noland, W. E. Whitcomb, Fred Turner, Jimmie Green, Paul Barron, Haygood, Day and the hostess.

Play Readers Club Have Meeting

Miss Stella Maye Lanham was hostess to members of the Play Readers club Wednesday afternoon at her home, 107 S. Popos. Miss Leona McCormick read "Days Without End" by Eugene O'Neil. Fifteen members were present and guests included Mmes. J. M. White, F. H. Lanham, and Walker; Mrs. Erynn Henderson's mother who is visiting here from Dallas, and Miss Lovvorn.

The Country Club Bridge club will hold its regular party at the club building tonight at 8 o'clock instead of Wednesday night as announced in Wednesday's paper.

play, his confessor. "Days Without End" is not an outstanding achievement in O'Neil's literary career. But it is an honest and able attempt to explore material which has been almost taboo to playwrights since the middle ages.

'Hi, Nellie'

An ELECTRIC refrigerator makes a LOT of food cost LITTLE

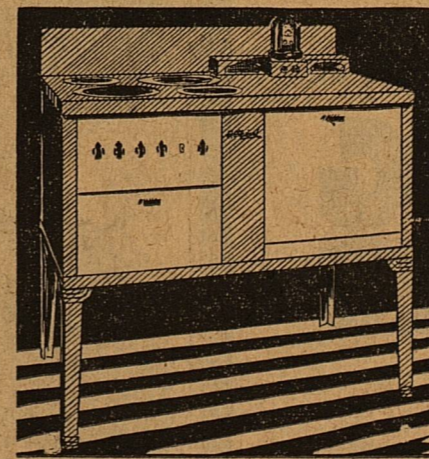

You know of the CONVENIENCE of electric refrigeration... the safeguards it places around the HEALTH of your family... but don't overlook the ECONOMY of electric refrigeration. Convenience and health come first, of course, but ELECTRIC refrigeration enables you to save a good portion of your food bill each week.

Here are a few ways you save with an electric refrigerator:

1. Take advantage of "specials" on perishable foods and buy enough to last a week.
2. Buy in larger quantities when the signs say "10¢... 3 for 25¢."
3. Make inexpensive frozen desserts instead of serving expensive purchased desserts.
4. Confine your refrigeration costs to just a few cents a day on your electric service bill.
5. For around $100.0 you can own a 1934 model electric refrigerator, and your electric refrigerator dealer will arrange terms to suit your convenience. Choose the make and size you want and then notice the many ways in which it saves you money.

And these are just a few of the savings. That half-bottle of milk, the left-overs from yesterday's dinner and other foods often thrown away because of spoilage are saved in an electric refrigerator and can be made into appetizing dishes.

TOMORROW IS THE LAST DAY OF THE REPORTER-TELEGRAM
ELECTRIC COOKING SCHOOL

Newest cooking methods and other useful kitchen hints will be explained Friday at the Reporter-Telegram Electric Cooking School. This will be the last day of the cooking school, and if you have missed the first three days, you should make every effort to attend this final day to hear Mrs. Warren and see her cooking demonstrations, using an electric range.

You will be particularly interested in the automatic features of the electric range, the ease of cooking electrically, the uniform results obtained day after day because of the constant temperature, and above all, the time that can be saved by cooking electrically.

"Keep it a year—two years, and if you aren't satisfied bring it right back here and get your money."

It's the preliminary report to Naval headquarters," he suggested, holding out a paper.

Brown took the message, scanned it eagerly, leaped to the radio.

"Add dirigible!" he dictated to the pilot. "Here follows Lieutenant-Commander Anderson's official report of the disaster—"

Briggs, at last goaded beyond reason, jumped forward.

"So you think you're going to work in the official story!"

Brown warned him back. He said, easily:

"Skip it, Briggs. We'll get around to you."

Briggs blew up.

"Well, I've taken all I'm going to—"

He tipped over a chair, lunged at the radio transmitter, grabbed a handful of wires and jerked them out of the set. The pilot and two officers grabbed him, but too late. The damage had been done.

Brown rose, smiled, shook his finger at Briggs.

"What a temper!" he exclaimed. "And now you won't be able to use it. My, oh, my! Tut, and two more tuts!"

Then he played his trump ace.

"Mr. Anderson," he said, "there's room for just one more in my plane. You can ride back with me. We'll be back in Montreal in an hour or two. We can relay your report from there."

"Oh, thank you!" Anderson said, gratefully.

Brown turned to Briggs.

"Well, son," he said, "you ought to have a swell story—for the monthly magazines!"

He turned, left the post with the Naval officer and the pilot. Briggs glared after him, inarticulate with rage.

Exciting Murder Drama Mystifies And Surprises All

If you suffer from a weak heart, don't go to see the "Mystery of Mr. X" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's new thriller showing today and Friday at the Yvonne theatre.

For the new film is packed with more excitement and hair-raising elements than this reviewer has seen for a long, long time.

Adapted from Philip MacDonald's sensational Crime Club novel, "Mystery of the Dead Police," and directed by Edgar Selwyn, the picture reaches a new high in this ever-popular type of entertainment.

Robert Montgomery stars as Revel, suave gentleman thief who sets the pace at the outset by stealing the famous Drayton diamond. But the horrors enter with the introduction of "X"—or rather his shadow—Robert Montgomery stars as Revel, suave gentleman thief who sets the pace at the outset by stealing the famous Drayton diamond. But the horrors enter with the introduction of "X"—or rather his shadow—

The unanimously popular Lewis Stone is the super-sleuth who pits his cunning against that of Revel and of "X." Henry Stephenson, Ralph Forbes, Forrester Harvey, Ivan Simpson, Leonard Mudie, Alice B. Francis and Charles Irwin are all happily cast and excellent in their parts.

"Mystery of Mr. X" is the most exciting picture you will see for many years.

AKRON REPORTS IMPORTANT TIRE DESIGN CHANGES

Reports from an authoritative source in Akron, Ohio today were to the effect that the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co. within the next few days will announce a new product in the tire market that incorporates design and structural improvements of major importance.

The information indicates that the new product will be in the form of a tire for passenger automobiles that is expected to give greater average mileage and non-skid performance than any tire yet introduced.

It was understood that the Goodyear plants in the United States have been working on the new tire for several weeks in anticipation of a heavy demand from both the original equipment and renewal markets.

Laboratories and proving grounds of the Akron concern are said to have been working on the new product for almost two years, during which it was subjected to the most severe tests that could be devised definitely to establish its merits.

Description of the tire could not be obtained, but there is said to be no question as to the reliability of the informant. Further inference is that a newspaper advertising campaign of national scope would be used shortly to introduce the new tire to American motorists.

Sales of automobiles in Germany during February of this year were double those during the same month in 1933. This large increase is said to be due to abolition of government tax on new cars.

Paul Muni's Latest 'Hi, Nellie,' Coming To Ritz on Sunday

Paul Muni, veteran of innumerable stage and screen successes, comes to the Ritz theatre Sunday and Monday in his latest Warner Bros. picture, "Hi, Nellie!"

The story by Roy Chancellor, a newspaper man, deals entirely with newspaper work and newspaper characters in their contact with the outside world in the gathering of the sensational stories of the day.

Muni has the role of a managing editor who is sentenced to write the Heart Throbs column because he has displeased the publisher. The manner in which he accepts his bitter pill, after writhing under the gibes of his fellow workers, and works back into a stronger position than ever, is one of the most hilarious, as well as thrilling, dramas ever to be screened.

Glenda Farrell plays opposite Muni in the role of a woman reporter and the sweetheart of the managing editor. Others in the cast include the Russian ballet dancer, Kathryn Sergava, Robert Barrat, Ned Sparks, Hobart Cavanaugh and Berton Churchill.

First Canyon Co. Nester Is 90 Now

CANYON, (P).—Ninety years of living, 47 of them near the center of Randall county, is the experience of W. F. Heller, the first "nester" of this county, who tilled his fields for two years with his rifle beside him because cattlemen did not want their grazing lands turned into farm land.

Heller has had a constructive part in the creation of the town of Canyon from the building of the first homes in the late '90's.

A native Texan and a veteran of the Confederacy to which he gave more than three years, Heller came to the Panhandle in 1886 and for a while engaged in freighting. Colorado City, 225 miles away and Wichita Falls, 250 miles southeast, were the nearest rail heads. Only two houses had been built in Randall county, these being on the T. Anchor ranch. Mail came to Tascosa, 45 miles to the north, and was brought over with that of the T A boys.

When Randall county was organized about four years after his coming, Heller became the first county and district clerk. Later he helped organize the first Presbyterian church in Canyon and earlier he had been a charter member of the Presbyterian church at Amarillo. For more than a decade he served as superintendent of the Sunday school of his church and was an elder until he was retired in 1930.

Its importation will cost $2600.

PRIZE BROUGHT BAD LUCK

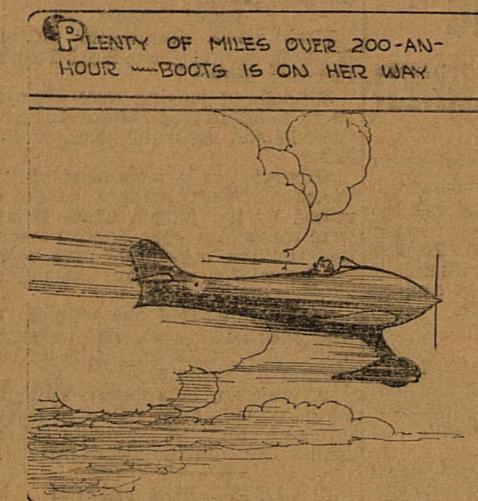

LONDON (UP)—The barber of Tarascon, M. Bonhoure, has become known as the unlucky fellow who won 5,000,000 francs. His misfortune dated from the day he drew first prize in the national lottery and virtually was mobbed as a hero when he arrived in Paris. Bonhoure celebrated his financial coup by buying a chateau and three automobiles. On one of his first excursions, the Paris correspondent of the "Manchester Guardian" reports, he ran over a boy whose leg was broken and soon thereafter he had a motor crash, in which his wife and daughter were injured.

San Angelo Boys Cause Different Version of Slogan

STEPHENVILLE (UP)—"Like elder brother, like younger," supplants the better known "like father, like son," in the Logan family of San Angelo.
 Ralph, older son of Mr. and Mrs. T. R. Logan, came to John Tarleton Junior college at Stephenville in the fall of 1931. During his first year he made the football team, played and won. He made the track team, worked as a reporter on the J-Tac, student weekly newspaper, and was elected handsomest boy in the college popularity contests.
 His brother John, eighteen months younger, entered Tarleton in the fall of 1932, played guard on the Blowhey football team, was a reporter on the J-Tac and served as assistant editor of the Grassbur, college annual.
 In his senior year Ralph headed the Tarleton cadet corps as student colonel, was sports editor of the Grassbur and was elected all-Tarleton boy by vote of the student body. He was graduated in the spring of 1933. This year he is studying law at the University of Texas.
 During the 1933-34 session John has been lieutenant colonel of the Cadet corps, the second-high ranking officer, and associate editor of the Grassbur. He was recently elected "most military man" at the college. He expects to complete his Junior college course at Tarleton in May and to enter the University of Texas next fall to study law.

Mesquites Leafing

-Cold Season Over

"You can't fool a mesquite" is a familiar adage among old-time West Texans who say that danger of cold weather returning in the spring never has definitely passed until the mesquite trees start leafing.

Mesquites now are coming out all over this section. Fruit trees have been blooming and some already are leafing fast.

Only a few wild flowers are out but recent heavy rains have assured a multi-colored blanket for the prairies during the early months of summer.

County officers to the east have reminded that there is a state law providing a fine of $1 to $10 for picking bluebonnets and many other flowers without the consent of the owners upon whose land the flowers grow. The law does not apply to persons under 17 years of age.

Wireless rays may be a mile long, while X-rays are shorter than atoms.

Sports Pot Pourri

Slated on Sunday

Two-ball mixed Scotch foursome handicap matches will be played beginning at 1 p. m. Sunday.

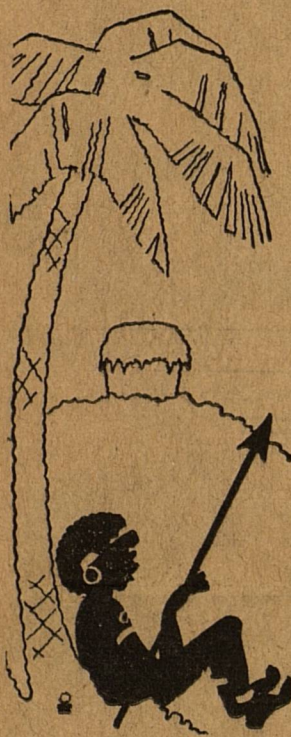

Selective driving and use of only two balls to the foursome are features. On the tee, for instance, partners are drawn. Partners alternately shoot the one ball allowed them. Score is figured by subtracting the handicap from the medal score.

The Boston mountains are in Arkansas.

If Your Toes Itch

You are probably suffering with ATHLETE'S FOOT. This disease is a form of ringworm that is deeply imbedded in the inner layers of the skin, causing small blisters that spread the disease when opened by scratching. BROWN'S LOTION will stop the itching instantly and heal any case of ATHLETE'S FOOT within fourteen days or your money will be refunded.

First place, Marguerite Adams, Stanton; second place, Hoyt Turner, Pleasant Valley.

Methods of judging were explained in a letter from Major Lang to the Midland superintendent, as follows:

"Herewith is a statement of the winners of essay contest as determined by the judges. These essays were ranked by three English teachers, working separately and without knowledge of where the papers came from.

"I have notified the winners of first place direct, so that they can make plans to attend the district meet if necessary."

The Midland superintendent mailed out copies of the report to league directors and to students whose names figure in the award selection.

COURTEOUS SERVICE

A smile, a cheerful word, an employee's unmasked willingness to go a little out of one's way to do a favor—these mean as much to the patron of a bank as they do to the customer in a store.
