Navy Dirigible Changes Course and Misses City

The USN Macon, the navy's great dirigible, was believed to have tied up safely late Saturday at her mooring mast at San Antonio.

Radio men at the U. S. army air-drome on Sloan field were allowed to quit their posts at 6 o'clock, which was an indication the big bag had safely completed the Sunvale to San Antonio leg of the journey to Miami. Contrary to expectation, the ship did not fly over Midland, establishing a new course when it reached Pecos, which led it in a south-easterly direction, over Grandfalls towards San Antonio. It had been following the T. & P. railway to that point. The ship proceeded leisurely, and few radiograms were received at the army station here, operators said.

Bands Disclose an Interesting Story

WASHINGTON (AP)—A female mallard duck, known from the Pacific coast and Texas clear across the continent, as 555,414, forecast an early northern spring by returning to the Rainbow's end game refuge, near Antioch, Neb., February 4. F. J. Keller, owner of the refuge, reported to the bureau of biological survey of the department of agriculture. This bird has a history. The bureau states that since 1927, the end of winter has been heralded by the arrival of the duck at the refuge. The bird's records show that it set a new record this year for an early flight. In November, 1927, Keller placed a biological survey band on the bird's legs and the number, 555,414, identified it on subsequent returns. Last year the band was found to be so worn that Keller put one on the duck's other leg which, incidentally, gave it a second number—A604,109. Each season since 1927 this duck has nested in a box on the roof of Keller's barn. It has produced more than 100 mallard ducklings and last year when it laid only abnormally small eggs it was given a setting of pintail eggs which it hatched.

Restricts the Crop To Much Lower Figure

The measure restricts the current year's crop to 10,000,000 bales by levying a fifty per cent tax on production in excess of that amount. Big Shot Coast Rum Runner Is Ahead in Feud

GALVESTON (UP)—When George Mosey, once chief of the gulf coast rum runners, returns from the federal prison at Atlanta in June he will find his excess profits selling the high for which he lost his liberty. In at least a dozen places cocktails, highballs and bottles of bonded whisky are sold over bars in the island city of the dry state of Texas. For two years, the Big Chief, as Mosey was known, ran his liquor cargoes into gulf ports. Secret messages, cheap airplanes, and fast boats brought the liquor to the speakeasies behind blind fronts. The same state laws regarding hard liquor exist now as then but Mosey will see a different Galveston. National prohibition has been repealed, however, and some cities in dry Texas are ignoring state statutes. Galveston and San Antonio are two of the most openly wet.

Does Woman Dress To Suit Herself?

FORT WORTH.—Does the modern young woman select colors in clothes for her own satisfaction or to please friends—especially the "important" masculine friends? "It's a toss-up," says Miss Bonne Enlow, head of the department of home economics at Texas Christian University. "Circumstances alter cases, of course, especially where the young woman wants to please the boy friend. You know women are quite clever at doing things as a means to an end. However, it is rare to find a young woman who will consistently wear an 'off' color for anyone. The girl of today is desirous of wearing colors which create a slenderizing effect. But about the married woman? "The married woman," says Miss Enlow, "is more independent than the unmarried one. However, she, too, will listen to her husband's wishes—probably to get him to change some hideous piece of clothing he is wearing. A means to an end, you know. And what colors are proper for the blonde and brunet? "There really is no accurate classification," is her answer. "Women place too much stress on colors to match the eyes or hair. The complexion is much more important than either and should be considered first in the selection of colors. The best rule to go by is to try on the articles. If the color improves the appearance, then it is correct for that person."

POSTMASTERS BY MERIT

Some time ago Postmaster General James A. Farley announced that he would ask congress to pass a law putting all postmasters under civil service. Since then nothing further has been heard from him on the subject; and now a republican, Representative Albert Carter, has taken the postmaster general at his word and has introduced just such a bill.

"This business of carrying and servicing the mails," says Representative Carter, "is one of the most important functions of the government. I am at a loss to see why anyone would object to having this service placed on a merit basis."

The ordinary taxpayer will find very little to quarrel with in this view. Whether Mr. Carter, Mr. Farley, or some other statesman eventually puts the reform through, it is a thing that is badly needed in the interest of the nation as a whole.

WHEN A JOB IS FOR SALE

Testimony of former Judge William B. Harley of New Jersey before a legislative committee at Trenton contains about as striking a sidelight on politics as one ever gets.

The judge declared that he paid $25,000 to a political leader to get his appointment to the bench. Afterward, he said, the man to whom he paid the money made repeated efforts to influence his decisions in various court cases, and threatened him when he refused to obey orders.

Now this whole business leads one to wonder what on earth any man would expect to happen, when he paid $25,000 for his appointment to the bench. Would he expect that he would be permitted to go ahead and be an upright and unbiased jurist? The man who sells a job usually likes to keep a string on it; the man who buys one automatically surrenders his independence, whether he realizes it or not.

REASSURING MANEUVER

There is something exceedingly reassuring about the United States fleet's departure from the Pacific coast for Atlantic waters.

During the last year or so we have heard a great deal about the danger of war in the Far East. We have been asked to spend a huge sum in putting our navy in tiptop shape, the idea being that times are so unsettled that we can't tell just when we may have to use it.

But this movement of the fleet is a pretty good sign that the situation isn't as bad as it was painted.

The government would not pull the entire fleet around to the east coast if it had any reason to believe that it might at any moment be called on to fight in the Pacific. The movement ought to do a great deal to quiet our fears—and, incidentally, to help quiet the fears of other nations as well.

MORBID HUMANS

It is almost impossible to understand the power that morbid curiosity can have over human beings.

When that poor, kidnaped baby was buried in Chicago recently a mob of 10,000 people tried to get into the chapel where the services were being held. Thousands of them, according to press dispatches, swarmed up on nearby autos and house-tops to get a look at things. Many of the funeral wreaths were torn in pieces.

Women, according to one dispatch, "fought, scratched, and pulled hair, attempting to reach the entrance. Friends and neighbors of the dead baby's family were shoved to the rear."

A display of this kind is just about enough to make one disgusted with the whole human race.

It is too bad that the people who were in this mob cannot get an understanding of the horror and disgust with which all decent people look upon them and their antics.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

There is a woman here in town who is so accustomed to having her husband tell her about tedious business trips that she believes all of them. A short time ago he told her he had to go over to Monahans to see an eclipse of the sun and she believed him.

'I'LL TELL THE WORLD'

The Romance and Thrills of News-gathering for the United Press—From Universal's Screenplay.

SYNOPSIS: Brown, correspondent for the United Press, world-wide news-gathering agency, is constantly trying to scoop Briggs, correspondent of a rival organization. He accomplishes this when he finds a runaway dirigible, but has no chance to rest on his laurels. Briggs is transferred to Europe. Brown is ordered by Hardwick, his boss, to find out why attempts are being made on the life of the old royalist, Archduke Ferdinand. He is forced to accompany Ferdinand to Paris. He is now heading for a royal reunion in honor of Ferdinand at Vichy.

CHAPTER VI Stanley Brown left the taxiab on the broad ramp of the Gare de Lyon, the railroad station serving southern France, intent upon getting a ticket to Vichy and boarding the first train for that point, or anywhere near it. He pushed his way through hustling and bustling tourists, looking about him for a ticket booth. He saw the one he wanted, raced for it amid the bedlam of moving bodies, the shrill whistles of stationmen, and the even shriller peeps from the departing trains. There were several persons in line waiting to purchase their tickets when Brown reached the booth. Amid the foreign-looking travelers was a tall, thin chap wearing nervous housewife to think about poodles: That night she made her husband barricade the front door with two book cases, an old piano, the dining table and eight chairs, then place the rest of the furniture against the back door. And then she made him spread a rug before the cellar door and sleep on it all night.

Up at Lubbock they have been having a journalism week, or something to that effect, having learned editors, publishers and journalism teachers lecture the budding young reporters at Tech.

That reminds me of a brief address a certain editor made to some high school journalism students once.

"Young ladies and gentlemen, when you become active in the field of actual journalism, have high ideals. Write learned editorials. Glorify the people. But for the love of Mike, realize that paid locals are vital, and a good bill collector is the most essential member of the staff. I thank you."

One of our staff members confesses his reading to True Detective and other similar types of literature. He was told by a friend that he should read more of the classics, but the staff member said he tried that one night and wound up by going to sleep, leaving his pen slipping out of his mouth and burning a hole in his shirt.

clothes of unmistakably American cut. Brown's eyes were arrested by the figure, and he fell a growing apprehension. He got a side view of the face of the man by careful maneuvering, and learned the worst: The chap was no other than William Briggs, of the Confederate Press.

Easily and yet stealthily, Brown moved close to his rival just as that worthy reached the ticket booth. Brown was all ears. He heard Briggs demand:

"One to Vichy." It was just as he had suspected, Briggs, assigned to European duty after being scooped by Brown on the dirigible story, had been sent on the same assignment that Brown had been. Brown beat a hasty retreat, assumed a gay and carefree manner and dashed up to Briggs just as his rival was turning away from the window. He pretended that he had just caught sight of him. Briggs was surprised at seeing him, but although he tried to conceal his emotion, showed that he wasn't delighted by having Brown in such proximity. He gave an insincere greeting. Brown returning it.

Brown asked him what his destination was. Briggs, wanting to shield this very point, told him with studied carelessness that he was going to Monte Carlo on a little vacation. He in turn asked

Brown where he was going and, in answer, Brown turned to the ticket agent and ordered passage to Chateaux-Thierry. He then told Briggs he was on a vacation, too. Briggs showed he didn't believe him: He hesitated a minute, as if to challenge the statement.

"Well, I'll be seeing you!" he said finally. "Gotta run—that's my train."

Brown looked after him, hurled a parting jab: "Why don't you take a balloon?" he taunted.

The agent held out the ticket. Brown brushed it aside, reached inside the cage and seized a telephone. While the clerk protested and prospective passengers fumed, Brown called Marshall and asked him to hire a plane.

"Have it ready to go places immediately," he ordered.

Briggs, late as usual, alighted from an ancient bus in front of the equally ancient and venerable Hotel Europe at Vichy. For a very good reason he didn't notice Brown, who had arrived ahead of him by plane. Brown was seated in a wheelchair. In order to outwit his rival, he had donned an old man's cap which he had pulled low over his forehead, a pair of dark glasses, a large muffer, which he had wrapped around his neck, and a heavy ulster. His legs were covered by a steamer rug. He looked and acted like an elderly invalid, trying to regain health in the dignified and quiet surroundings of the famous watering place.

His disguise was perfect—so perfect that he was having his troubles. First of all, there was plump, bustling Adolph, who insisted that he drink several glasses of invigorating mineral water every five minutes.

"You must have your water," said Adolph, appearing from nowhere at one of the regular and too frequent intervals. "It's the best. You're three glasses behind now."

"What did I tell you was the matter with me?" Brown asked, beleaguered by the too-frequent assaults of the insistent German.

"You said you had acute quiver of the liver, sir," said the humorless Adolph.

"All right—I'll—" began Brown. However, at this moment Briggs hovered near, and Brown was forced to drink the water so that his rival would not penetrate his disguise. As soon as Briggs was out of the way, Brown managed to hit the water tray with his elbow, spilling the contents of the glass and pitcher. Adolph set off for more, and Brown got up full steam in his wheel-chair, heading for the open air. He breezed into the flower-lined garden, which was drenched in sunshine, under full power. However, his chair became wedged in a crack just as Adolph appeared with fresher and stronger water. He bobbed to Brown's side.

"Get me out of this, will you?" Brown ordered.

"Not until you drink your water, sir!" The unimaginative writer was implacable.

Thus, Brown was forced to absorb another pint. Adolph, true to his bargain, pulled the chair out of the crack.

"Have you ever suffered from a faint, painful feeling around the throat?" Brown asked him, grinning malevolently.

"No, sir," Adolph was puzzled. "Then, it's going to be a new experience for you," Brown threatened. He went for the fat servant's throat, but the frightened man retreated. At a safe distance, he said, stubbornly:

"I'll see you again in fifteen minutes, sir!" Brown was about to launch another attack when something far more interesting caught his eye. He forgot all about Adolph and his vicious potions. He saw a girl, blonde and beautiful, riding a bicycle near the hotel. He immediately decided that he never before had set eyes on such a fascinating bit of femininity. He saw that she wore a tight-fitting sweater and a pair of shorts which enhanced her many charms. He gazed delightedly as she passed and then, further intrigued by the sight of such loveliness, set out in an effort to keep her in sight. He wasn't fast enough. The girl turned a corner and passed from view. He sighed his disappointment.

But, persistent as usual, he doubled back in hopes of seeing her again. Hidden by one of the many hedges which fringed the garden he lurked abruptly around a corner into another path. As a result of this maneuver, he found himself directly in front of the girl's oncoming bicycle. Before he could retreat, the vehicle had struck his chair, upsetting it. Brown found himself entangled with the chair. The girl fell free. She got to her feet to help him. Indignant, he sat up. He assumed the attitude of a hurt and angry old man.

"Say—what's the idea of trying to—" he rasped.

"Oh—I hope you're not badly hurt!" she exclaimed, ignoring his ill-sustained retort. She knelt down beside him, very much alarmed at his evident pain.

"I'm so sorry!" she apologized. "Where does it hurt most?" He grimaced. Unthinking, he blurted:

"We'll skip that one." He leaned back and moaned. She felt his right leg.

"Does it hurt here?" she asked. Her solicitude intrigued him. He decided to take every advantage of it.

"O-o-oh!" he howled. He looked over the top of his duck-lensed glasses, to see her better. She felt his arms and legs. She lifted a hand and let it go. He allowed it to fall back limply. She was a very frightened young woman.

"Why—you're paralyzed!" she exclaimed, horrified.

"I haven't had a drop for a month!" he countered. He covered his slip with more moans and groans. She bent over and attempted to lift him. He was happy as he found himself leaning against her shoulder.

"Oh, what shall I do?" she gasped, weakly, looking about for assistance.

"You're doing all right!" he commented. She did not seem to understand his double meaning.

"I'm afraid I'll have to leave you here and get help," she said. This made him apprehensive.

"No—let's work it out together," he proposed quickly.

"Then let me help you to your chair," she suggested. She began working with a will.

She helped him to his feet, got him steadied and started moving him toward the wheel-chair. He, without her seeing him, managed to kick the chair hard enough to knock it over again.

"How awful!" she exclaimed, almost distraught. "Now I'll have to get you over to the bench!" Brown grinned and peered at the girl over his glasses again.

"This," said he, "gets more and more interesting."

But he didn't say it loud enough for his helper to hear. She was busy getting him upright—and he was busy enjoying the close embrace. (To Be Continued)

Woman's Day at Yucca Thursday

Mrs. Harvey Conger, chairman of Woman's Day at the Yucca theatre April 26, will name her committee this week and ticket sales will start. The women hope to sell as many tickets to men and boys as to women, for the picture to be shown April 26 is a man's type of picture—a show everyone will enjoy, critics say.

The tickets will be good for either April 26 or 27 but next Thursday is Woman's Day at leading theatres throughout the state. All funds coming from the percentage sales go toward paying off indebtedness on the beautiful women's building at Austin, which belongs to Midland women as well as other women of Texas.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Herbert King of Midland Elected Vice President at Abilene PTA Meeting; Mrs. McWilliams Delegate from Here

ABILENE.—Three-day annual conference of the sixth district, Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers, which drew more than 150 visiting delegates to Abilene, closed at noon Saturday.

Mrs. Thomas Head of San Angelo Friday was re-elected president of the district for the two-year term, and Mrs. Estes Hewitt of McCombs was retained as secretary.

Mrs. Maud S. Kincaid of San Angelo was elected corresponding secretary, succeeding Mrs. G. I. Dorance of the same city.

Mrs. W. P. Wiley of Junction and Mrs. Holland Holt of Abilene were re-named as first and second vice-presidents, respectively. Other vice-presidents were chosen in the order named: Mrs. Early Louder, Roscoe; Mrs. Albert Kay, Ozona; Mrs. Joe Simmons, Ballinger; Mrs. Herbert King, Midland; Mrs. Roy Pearce, Big Spring.

Mrs. C. E. Roe of Washington, D. C., national field secretary of the national organization, and Mrs. A. C. Surman of Post, third vice-president and director of extension of the Texas congress, were chief speakers at a meeting held Friday night at the high school auditorium.

At conclusion of the meeting, diplomas were presented to 42 women for completion of a home study course offered by the state organization.

Distinction went Friday afternoon to the report of the San Angelo city council, cleverly presented in the form of a dialogue by Mrs. R. R. Chase and Mrs. Ralph Gill. Declaring the report outstanding, Mrs. Roe invited council members to present it at the national convention in Des Moines, May 13 to 19. Mrs. Maud S. Kincaid is president of the council.

Report of the Pulliam club, a rural district organization in Tom Green county, also received honorable mention. Organized in February, 1933, the unit has already achieved the superior standard rating. Mrs. John Yancey, president, and three associates, presented the report.

Reports of local units are to be presented this morning, preceding installation of officers, presentation of life membership and invitations for the next meeting.

Mrs. Roe, after extending greetings from the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, called upon adult leaders of children to walk through the "stairgate and in the narrow way" of character education to give children more abundant life through "four wells—well bred, well fed, well read and well led."

She emphasized the importance of parents and teachers being "physically fit, mentally alert, emotionally stable, socially balanced and spiritually prepared," if they are to give to their children and students the fullest training through the "four wells."

"The first objective of the Parent-Teacher association is to promote child welfare in the home—the child's first community," declared the speaker, whose formal subject was "The Child and His Community."

Importance of understanding the individual child was stressed. "Learn the child first and then be able to teach him," she admonished parents and teachers.

Teaching of the social sciences to enable persons to live well together, of arts to contribute to their happiness and of crafts for their economic welfare was advocated.

Mrs. R. E. McWilliams represented the North and South Ward organizations at the Abilene meeting.

Midland-Martin Co. Women Study Pattern Fitting

Women of Martin and Midland counties met here Friday to attend a school in foundation pattern fitting. Mrs. Dora Russell Barnes, clothing specialist of the extension service of Texas A. & M. college, conducted the school.

Mrs. Barnes made a demonstration using Mrs. O. M. Tyner's foundation pattern for the work. The patterns had already been cut under instructions of the Martin-Midland home demonstrator. The club women demonstrators and cooperators will carry the information back to their clubs. It is pointed out that once a foundation pattern is made, any kind of a dress imaginable may be made.

Midland women who attended the session were hostesses to the visitors from Martin county at a buffet luncheon.

Demonstrators who attended the school were: Mmes. Floyd Counts, E. D. Ward, J. D. Bartlett, H. L. Baker, J. E. Wallace and Miss Ruth Norton, all of Midland county; Martin county women were: Mmes. S. P. Myrick, B. Foreman, Lee Eubanks, J. R. Wheeler, W. H. Fulkerson, D. Donham; cooperators who came in the stead of demonstrators were: Mrs. D. A. Ray, Mrs. Bill Counts and J. L. Bond.

Women Expect a Great Success at Their Benefit Show

The local women's clubs representatives working in conjunction with the Texas Federation of Women's clubs in celebrating "Woman's Day" at the Yucca theatre here on Thursday are looking forward to great success of their enterprise by which a liberal portion of the receipts of the show will be turned over to federation representatives.

In a statement today Mrs. Harvey Conger lauded plans of Manager Hal Grady and his organization.

"The plan whereby we are to receive a share of the day's receipts of the theatre is a splendid one," said one club executive. "It strikes a new note in community work and I believe is the first time a theatre has entered into such co-operation."

"As nearly everyone knows, the clubhouse of the Texas Federation of Women's clubs—an imposing structure in which are centered the activities of 30,000 Texas club women—bears a mortgagee indebtedness and the funds realized from today's theatrical activities in our behalf throughout the state will materially reduce this debt, thanks to the efforts of Earl Hoblitzelle of Dallas, who besides contributing a share of the receipts from his theatres, interested theatre owners through-

PIONEERING A SERVICE TO FORD OWNERS

When the time comes for the engine to be overhauled—that will be normally after 40,000 or 50,000 miles—the Ford owner simply gets from the local Ford dealer an engine that has been completely reconditioned in the Ford Motor Company plant at Dearborn, Michigan. The cost is far below the usual cost of overhauling—and there is a great saving in time, as your car is tied up for only a few hours instead of days. Besides that, the price is not guesswork—it is a fixed, known price.

This reconditioning service is further extended to such units as the distributor, carburetor and brake shoe assembly. Worn or obsolete parts are replaced with new ones. Every reconditioned unit installed by the Authorized Ford Dealer has passed the closest factory inspection. In every detail it is ready for thousands of miles of trouble-free service.

Ask any Ford dealer about this new money-saving service for owners of Models A and B and eight-cylinder Ford cars and trucks. This is an exclusive Ford service. It is one of the important reasons why you should own a Ford V-8—the only V-8 under $2500—the car which hundreds of thousands of owners say is the most economical Ford car ever built.

OFFICIAL OPENER OF PERMIAN BASEBALL LEAGUE TODAY AT 3:30

TEAM PREXY ASKS FOR A GREAT CROWD

Midland's official Permian Basin baseball league opener will be played with Crane City this afternoon at 3:30 on the diamond immediately south of El Campo Moderno.

Rose, former West Texas league star pitcher, will be on the mound for Midland.

The manager Joe Byron, and the president, Fred Wemple, frankly admit the team has not trained long enough to be in top condition. However, it will play the best ball it can serve up and customers are promised as good a brand of ball as the present personnel of the home club can give against the strong Crane City team.

Directors of the new Midland baseball club and business men interested in seeing Midland have a good team are specially urged to attend the game today so they may better assist in councils of war the proxy may call this week. Old time fans expect to limber up enough to get out to today's game, though they haven't personally cast their votes on the national pastime since Old Heck was a pup.

Several hundred people are expected to attend the opener. Manager Bill Orchard will bring a sizeable gallery of Crane City fans to bolster up the courage of his

Paul Muni Great Success in His First Comedy on Screen "Hi, Nellie" Is Riot

A new Paul Muni will be revealed today and tomorrow on the screen of the Ritz theatre where this star's latest Warner Bros production "Hi, Nellie" is showing.

Not only a new Paul Muni—but an astonishing one. This forceful dramatic star whose former pictures, such as "I Am a Fugitive From A Chain Gang," "Scarface" and "The World Changes," have been sensations in the realm of the serious and the tragic, has at last turned to comedy. And what comedian he is, you'll have to discover for yourself. The same dynamic and powerful qualities are there—the qualities that made "I Am a Fugitive," for example, an unforgettable emotional and cinematic experience. But the light, drill touch which Paul Muni brings to the humor of "Hi, Nellie" establishes him securely as one of the most versatile stars of either stage or screen. He is truly a remarkable performer.

As a matter of fact, "Hi, Nellie" is not comedy alone. This fast-moving film possesses a tight, well-knit dramatic story, as well as scores of laughs. But in the performance contributed by Muni and his supporting cast, and in the fine direction of Mervyn LeRoy, there is a crisp and breezy note which will endear the story to any audience.

The hard-boiled managing editor of a big metropolitan daily feels himself suddenly in hot water because he has "fallen down" on the publisher's pet story. From his ace position on the newspaper, he is abruptly relegated to the "Lovelorn" column, where he must turn out a daily stint of balm for broken hearts. Not only that, but his byline is "Nellie Nelson." How this unlucky fellow and good reporter, extricates himself from his difficulties by digging up the biggest news story of the decade provides a story of high entertainment value, told at top speed.

Glenda Farrell is seen opposite Paul Muni as a girl reporter with whom he is in feuds until the exciting climax. Others who turn up in the picture are: Ned Sparks, as a gloomy reporter; Donald Meek, Edward Ellis, Kathryn Sergava, Hobart Cavanaugh, Doug Dumbrille and Robert Barrat.

The Sports Horn

Lee's Contribution

Harrell Lee, Associated Press correspondent at Houston, furnishes the following survey of the Houston baseball club:

"With the rest of the team virtually set for the start of the Texas league season, candidates for the pitching positions on the Houston club are waging a merry battle.

"If the Buffaloes retain their two southpaws two promising right-handers will have to be cut drift to reduce the number of hurlers to six.

"Observers have ventured the opinion that the veteran George Washington Payne, John Chambers, who won 22 games while losing only eight in the Piedmont league last year, and Mays Copeland, strike-out king on the Western league, are right-handers who are virtually certain to make the grade.

"Ramon Sustaita, a Mexican boy from the Houston sandlots, has shown rare possibilities, and some of the Buffaloes give him an outside chance to stick. However, the consensus is that he needs a year of seasoning in a slower circuit.

"Al Fisher was retained by the Buffs last year and should be better this season.

"Henry 'Cotton' Phippen, gangling youngster from the Nebraska state league, has been so impressive that some who have watched the Houston intra-squad games insist he is a cinch to be one of the club's starting pitchers. Phippen incidentally is a native of El Paso and an all-around sports star at the Texas College of Mines at El Paso.

"The left-handers on the squad are the veteran Mike Cvangros and James Lyons, who was with Columbus last season. Lyons was bothered with a sore arm in 1933, but the soreness has not been evident this spring."

Favorite Indoor Game Is Planning How to Get Gangs

AUSTIN (AP)—The sensational return of Clyde Barrow, the South-west's No. 1 bad man, to the headlines has created another hot stove league.

Hot stove leagues confine their debates to pleasant topics. Not with the new one, however, because the members are incensed at the depredations of Barrow and his aids, Raymond Hamilton, and Bonnie Parker, his woman companion. Each new deed of the infamous trio is fuel to the flames of the hot stove.

Barrow's activities have aroused intense interest in the capitol where political rumblings normally occupy attention. Newspaper correspondents are queuing constantly on the tours of the capitol for news of the desperadoes. The inquisitors usually wind up with: "Well, I sure hope they catch those demons."

Exciting suggestions for the capture of the outlaws have been advanced.

One group suggested that the state highway patrol cease, at least temporarily, to give aid to stalled motorists and approach all automobiles with caution. This suggestion was conceived from the belief that two patrolmen were auto-down near Grapevine while going to the assistance of what they believed were distressed motorists.

Another proposed that the motorcycles of the patrolmen be equipped with machine guns mounted on the handle bars that could be fired automatically to relieve patrolmen of the necessity of steering while one hand and shooting at a fleeing automobile with an ineffective revolver with the other.

A plan to station experienced airplane pilots and policemen at strategic points where they could take the air at an instant's notice also was submitted. The planes would be equipped with radio so they could direct activities of ground forces when and if a contact was established with the outlaws.

Another idea offered was abandonment of the highway patrol of its motorcycles in favor of automobiles. This it was urged, would make patrolmen less conspicuous and reduce the chances of them being taken unaware.

Nearly all advocated establishment of a state police force of sufficient size with well trained personnel to cope with any criminal or set of criminals.

GIRLS PLAN GARDENS

By Nora Casheer

Prairie Lee 4-H club members planned 145 pounds each of these groups—leafy and green, starchy and other vegetables, and garden fruits for each member of the family to have a sufficient supply to be used fresh, canned, stored, dried and brewed.

The plan is to be carried out under the direction of Miss Myrtle Miller, county home demonstration agent.

Leafy or green vegetables were selected from the following list: lettuce, spinach, Swiss chard, lettuce, cabbage, cauliflower, brussels sprouts, kale, endive, cress, asparagus and pork salad.

Two or more were selected garden fruits, tomatoes, starchy, and other vegetables, radish, onions, okra, squash, pumpkin, cucumber, shell beans and peas.

Two or more were selected garden fruits, tomatoes, starchy, and other vegetables, radish, onions, okra, squash, pumpkin, cucumber, shell beans and peas.

One herb was chosen from dill, sage, bay leaf.

One row foot of soil will ordinarily produce one pound of vegetable. If fifty pounds of mustard was included in the leafy vegetable group, fifty row feet would be written on the garden plan and planted accordingly.

The total number of pounds of vegetables and garden fruits needed for a family of five would be at least 2012 pounds. Lottie Mae Bryant is garden demonstrator for the group while others are cooperators.

Mrs. W. C. Pigg was elected leader for the girls on the south side and Mrs. Stanley leader for the girls on the north side of the school, during the business hour. Nina Lee Stanley was elected vice president.

The following girls attended: Lola Livingston, Iva Hart, Lottie Mae Bryant, Juanita Wren, Gladys Mills, Cleo Daney, Vera Butler, Nina Lee Stanley, Ruby Blanscott, Alta Blanscott, Nora Casheer, Fay Welton, Elizabeth Coats, Edith Hombree, Gracie Taylor, Dot Dawkins, and Ellen Patterson.

BUSINESS MEETING

A business meeting was held by the Junior B. T. S. at the First Baptist church Friday night under the direction of their leader, Mrs. George Halton.

Reports were read and approved. Following the business meeting, a picnic was spread on the church lawn. Ice cream was served to Kirtley, Elvanda, and Maxine Hays, Mary Helen Walker, Louise Cox, Lucille Arnett, Macl Scott, Helen Ruth Merle, Louise Bryant, Madine Chantant, Frances Palmer, Ruth, and Betta Reeves, Dorothy Brown, Howard Howard Palmer, Forest Howel, Pat McMullan, George Halton Jr., M. White, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Pader, Mrs. Halton, Mrs. Bobo and daughters, Harriett and Marion of Alpine.

At Yucca Today, Monday and Tuesday

Will Rogers and Louise Dresser are united again in family felicity in "David Harum," the new Fox film in which the famous humorist has his latest stellar role.

Fox Film's latest release, "David Harum" starring Will Rogers, will make its appearance on the screen of the Yucca theatre today, for a three day run. Because of the national friendly interest in the humorist-philosopher-star, letters pour into his home regularly, suggesting a particular story or theme of character for his next picture. More suggestions urging him to play all others combined. It was virtually in response to the command of the theatre-going public that Fox Film produced this story.

Its typical American theme deals with a shrewd horse trader. Because of the coldness with which he barter, and his uncanny methods of outwitting people in business dealings, his reputation is none too good in the small town in which he lives. A young man who has come to work in the bank owned by the horse trader, learns that his employer really has a soft heart, and that his hardness is only for those who deal unfairly.

The young man has fallen in love with a wealthy girl, but hesitates to propose marriage because of his poor financial standing. The horse trader, who is interested in the boy tries to help the romance along, but gets nowhere. When the young girl comes to him and requests him to enter her horse in a forthcoming race, he advises the boy to place all his savings on the horse. The hilarious method by which the horse trader brings the horse home a winner is said to bring the film to a happy and amusing conclusion.

The large cast in support of Will Rogers displays an array of impressive names that include Louise Dresser, Evelyn Venable, Kent Taylor, Stepin Fetchit, Noah Beary, Roger Imhof, Frank Melton, Charles Middleton, Sarah Padden, and Lillian Stuart.

James Cruze directed from Walter Wood's screen play, which was adapted from the novel by Edward Noyes Westcott.

duce the supply for the better grade alcohol.

In Lincoln open drinking still is taboo, but in Omaha, as in Kansas, beer gardens serve as a front for the sale of anything from near beer to whisky and gin highballs made from cheap ingredients.

In the Omaha hotels elaborate bars have been established and membership cards issued to the drinking gentry. There a foot may be placed on a bar rail and drinks downed at 50 cents each. The price in the less pretentious establishments ranges from 25 to 35 cents a drink.

Recent raids, however, have slowed the Omaha liquor traffic. Police aimed high when they started and the Hotel Fontenell bar was among the first to fall. A fine store of liquor and wine was confiscated.

Oklahoma, so dry a doctor may not even prescribe whisky, shows little change under repeal. Prices have dropped, but a fine store of a quart on products distilled in the eastern hills section, and beer of the 3.2 variety is obtainable in most stores and shops.

Some liquor comes in through Missouri, and a few planes bring expensive stuff for the wealthy from Canada and Florida. Much of the whisky made in the Kiamichi Hills is sold under labels indicating it is bonded quality. The price is around $1.25 a quart. Bonded whisky brought from Missouri, retails at around $1.75-$2.00.

The bootlegger still brings the stuff around to the house on call, or if one isn't in a hurry he may leave an order with the milk man and get his bottle the next day with the cream.

There is a movement for repeal of the state dry laws, but it will take at least 100,000 signatures to get the matter on the ballot and sentiment is not great.

The Bootlegger Still Does Business at The Same Old Stand in the Dry States

DALLAS (AP)—The bootlegger still does business at the same old stand in the dry states of the Southwest.

Due to repeal the stand may operate behind a "beer and pretzels" sign with the hard stuff tucked behind barrels of 32 beverage but the disguise is slim. The gentleman with the bar swipe and the white apron very probably is the same party who brought the quart around to the door in other days.

Repeal also is responsible for a slight reduction in prices and a greater variety of choice. Bonded and blended liquor is obtainable in greater volume, and fine wines are available to those who have the price.

But old tastes are hard to break, and in the arid sections of Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska, the art of "thumping" bottles of near beer spiked with alcohol is not lost.

In Texas prohibition varies with the location. Many of the inland towns are dry and not all the large cities permit the sale of beer. Galveston probably is the wettest, untouched by prohibition and, but mildly interested when repeal came.

Paso also has made it easy to slake a thirst, but the city tax collectors served notice that taxes would be collected on liquor stocks the same as on other merchandise. Drink of Mexican manufacture and potency are featured.

Dallas remains outwardly circumspect, and while it is not easy to obtain liquor by the drink over the beer bars the hard stuff can be had by the bottle.

The taste of bathtub gin seems to have lost favor in Texas with so-called rum taking its place. The stuff is made from alcohol, distilled water and flavoring. The price is around $2.50 a gallon. There is, of course, no scarcity of moonshine liquor, rye or corn.

In Kansas, the state out of which Carrie Nation stormed around the turn of the century to plague bootleggers and demolish backbars with her flashing hatchet, drinking is taking on a sophistication unknown a few months ago.

Anything resembling a night club was practically unknown in Kansas before repeal, but today about the urban centers are numerous dine and dance places. Sale of 32 beer is legal and behind many a foaming sedit of beer lurks a whiskey glass.

Sale of bonded liquor and the numerous blends has not caught the fancy of the bootleg trade to a great extent in Kansas. Grain alcohol, selling for from $5 to $8 a gallon remains the standard drink base. It is used in spiking near beer or in making synthetic gin and whiskey at the kitchen sink.

Bootleg whisky also retains a following despite the ease with which commercially manufactured goods can be imported from wet Missouri. Whiskies made in the southeastern part of the state are so well known they are ordered by the trade names they have acquired. Favorite brands at Topeka are "Pittsburgh Deep Slick," "Cherokee," "Protagon," and "Co-Tona." In Wichita "Andover Tye" is the big seller.

Kansas will vote on prohibition this fall but observers who like their liquor, as well as the drys, predict the law will not be changed. One of the pioneer dry states, Kansas got along nicely for years before national prohibition and expects to continue doing so in the future. The liquor is available for those who want it.

In Nebraska a somewhat similar situation exists. The state will vote on repeal of the state prohibitory law this fall but sentiment for repeal appears to be diminishing.

Bootleggers still maintain their connections with the thirsty, and the price of alcohol and corn whisky remains around $5 a gallon for the better type and less for the second run stuff. The sugar beet fields in the western part of the state pro-

'Walled Kingdom' To Allow Public Road to Be Built

SARITA (AP)—The Walled Kingdom of Kenedy soon will have its first highway, the Duke of Duval, has promised, and in the Rio Grande valley the duke's word is his bond.

Kenedy county's barbed wire enclosed acres have never been traversed by a highway. Residents of the lower valley have fought for years to get a road through the county, which became known as the Walled Kingdom.

But, the owners of the King ranch, which spreads over nine counties, wanted their Kenedy county domain intact. Senator Archie Parr, the duke of Duval county, fought every effort to force a highway through Kenedy.

"I and the owners of Kenedy county are ready for the road to be built," Parr announced recently at Raymondville. "We wait it done
