Kin of Midlanders Gets New Church

MONAHAN, —The Rev. Ira Harrison, pastor of the First Baptist church of this place for the past 16 months, has resigned as pastor of the local church and accepted the pastorate of the College Avenue Baptist church of Lubbock.

Mr. Harrison is a forceful speaker and is conscientious in his work. Since he became pastor of the local church, many changes and improvements in the church building have been made, and as a result of his leadership, 104 new members have been added to the church rolls.

Improvements include the addition of 12 Sunday school rooms, a pastor's study and the auditorium being remodeled recently. A sum of $3,500 has been raised for all purposes for the church, $1,000 of which was spent on the church building. All bills are paid and there is still money in the church treasury. Practically every dollar of this money was raised from church membership, no public drive being made to raise money for the improvements.

A move is now on to build a pastor's home. The church is in fine fellowship and all of the church organizations are functioning. The Sunday school attendance is over 100 each Sunday.

Mr. Harrison will preach his farewell message to the people here tonight. He and Mrs. Harrison will leave Monday for Lubbock, where he will take up his duties as pastor of the College Avenue Baptist church immediately, being a revival meeting there on Wednesday. The church has a membership of 300.

Mr. Harrison is a second cousin of James P. Harrison and Mrs. Clyde Y. Barron.

Return from Visit On the South Plains

Mrs. J. Howard Hodge, Mrs. Bob Gregory and Mrs. Johnny Miller returned Sunday from Lubbock, where they went for a visit Thursday.

Mrs. Hodge visited with her sister, Miss Alma Wells, who will receive her master's degree from Texas Technological college this summer, and attended the Seventh Southern Journalists' congress held there. She said the address of the University of Colorado journalism department head, Ralph L. Crossman, on "Freedom of the Press" was of exceptional merit.

Mrs. Hodge also attended class lectures two days. Miss Wells is majoring in English, and will complete her thesis on "The Mechanics of Swinburne's Poetry." Mrs. Hodge said Tech's graduate school is continually growing, that there are 20 students this year as compared with 12 last year. Two new dormitories are going up on the campus, marking the first ever erected by the school. A degree from Tech in the near future will be as accredited as one from schools "more noted only so far as tradition is concerned," she believes.

RED CROSS MEETING

MIDLAND WINS LEAGUE OPENER FROM CRANE SUNDAY BY A SCORE OF 12-6

Midland's nattily dressed Colts opened the Permian basin league Sunday afternoon with a 12-6 win over Crane. Heads up ball was played in every inning except one, when two runs were scored by Crane on one hit and three Midland errors.

Rose, Midland pitcher, accounted for 12 men via the strikeout route.

About 350 fans attended, attesting to a new local interest in baseball, a sport that had showed evidence of waning over the past few years.

Red Hill led the hitters with three safeties in four trips. Hanks, Crane pitcher, collected two hits in three trips, and Lewis and Baumgarten of Crane hit three times in five trips. Mills and Richter, Midland, hit twice in five times up.

Midland was accredited with five errors, Crane with three.

Ray Clutter and Sammy Timmons called the game, and their decisions, for the most part, were satisfactory.

GOVERNOR OF CHIHUAHUA AND HIS PARTY HERE EN ROUTE TO MEXICO

The governor of Chihuahua and his party, en route home from Arlington Downs, where they saw the running of the Texas derby, stopped over briefly in Midland to check boxer city newspapers of Sunday.

Governor Rodrigo M. Quevedo, through his interpreter, spoke briefly of his trip and of his satisfaction in meeting so many Americans en route from and to home.

There are no unemployed in the state of Chihuahua, the governor said at Fort Worth.

Due to the recent increase in the price of silver, many old mines have been reopened and thousands of miners have been placed at work, while the advance in cattle prices also has greatly benefited his state, the Mexican executive stated.

When the hard-surfaced highway from Juarez to Chihuahua, the capital city of the state, is completed, great numbers of tourists are expected to visit that city, Quevedo said. The 228-mile highway will be completed in September. Another road under construction is from Chihuahua to Cuahemoc, center of the Mennonite colony, a distance of 100 miles. The Mennonites, a religious sect, migrated to Mexico from Canada, and have one of the most flourishing agricultural regions in the silver republic. They do not believe in war and do not own automobiles, radios or other products of modern inventions.

McCAMEY INVITES WEST TEXAS TO FREE BARBECUE, FETES THIS WEEK

BY BILL COLLYNS McCAMEY, April 23.—Oil-flowing gold that substance which has brought wealth to counties and individuals of West Texas, and which has caused numerous towns to spring up over the great wood flats, changing the sparsely populated ranch country into a fairly thickly populated area, is recognized as the direct factor in the great development of this vast area commonly known as West Texas, and many of the towns of this section look to the oil business as a means of existence. The discovery of oil there would be no need for some of the towns.

Although small quantities of oil had been produced in the Wheat well in Loving county and the "Wonder Well" in Pecos county as early as 1919 and 1920, the real development of this section came after the discovery of oil in the Santa Rita No. 1 well in the Big Lake field in Reagan county in May, 1923.

Seven years ago this month, the city of McCamey was organized, incorporated and received its charter and on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 27, 28 and 29, this city which has been transformed from an oil boom town into a thriving and well established city serving as a trading center for the entire Permian basin, will celebrate the seventh anniversary of the receiving of her charter with a three day celebration to which the entire citizenship of West Texas is cordially invited.

As many as 10,000 visitors are expected to join local residents in the festivities during the three days. The celebration will really mark the eighth anniversary of the city since the town was started more than a year before the charter was received.

A special invitation is being extended to all West Texans. (See CELEBRATION, page 4)

Mrs. R. D. Scruggs, head of the commercial department of the high school, expects her team to make a strong bid for second place at the state meet, both members having in the district meet held here established speeds which last year would have given them that rating.

An Abilene girl is virtually conceded first place, if reports of her speed are not exaggerated. Reports here say she makes almost 80 words a minute.

Mrs. Scruggs is working with her typewriting team every minute possible, and says both girls are improving each day.

MUST WE STILL RULE OUR SCHOOLMA'AMS?

The big worry of most school boards these days is the question of when and how they are going to be able to pay their teachers.

There is an older worry, though, which has exercised a good many school boards in the past; and Dr. John Carr Duff of New York University called attention to it the other day by taking time off to denounce "outmoded, Puritanical traditions" that require school teachers to be goody-goodies.

This older worry has to do with the way the schoolma'am shall behave when she is not in the classroom. In many localities, as Dr. Duff points out, teachers "have to live up to a moral standard that would put a strain on a thirty-second degree saint."

Dr. Duff cites a pledge required of all teachers in a certain North Carolina town: "I promise not to fall in love, to become engaged, or secretly married."

In another case applicants for teaching positions had to sign such promises as these:

"I promise to abstain from all dancing, immodest dressing, and any other conduct unbecoming a teacher and a lady."

"I promise not to go out with any young man except in so far as it may be necessary to stimulate Sunday school work."

Attempts to regulate the private lives of school teachers in this way are not exactly uncommon in the United States. There are towns where prim and priggish behavior seems to be valued even more highly than teaching ability.

And it is hardly surprising if educators like Dr. Duff demand that a halt be called.

The request that a school teacher lead a model life arises naturally enough, of course. If parents want to be sure that their children are entrusted only to young women of high moral character, that is easily understood.

The point is that in many cases the school board does not stop there. It goes on and erects standards of conduct which, as Dr. Duff complains, turn the teacher either into a hypocrite or a goody-goody.

Compared with the issues of the day, all this is a minor matter of course. But our school system as a whole will be a lot sounder when we give up some of this unwarranted meddling with the private lives of our schoolma'ams.

TAXPAYERS AROUSED

Mob violence is a thing nobody can condone, of course. Yet that incident at Pottsville, Pa., where more than a thousand irate taxpayers stormed the courthouse, dragged two county commissioners out by force, and demanded explanations of recent county tax increases, is a thing which one could deplore altogether too much.

The taxpayer is ordinarily a pretty docile sort of specimen. He pays and pays and pays, and his elected officials squander his money for him and boost his tax rates, and he goes on paying and never whimpers.

And that docility, when you get right down to it, is one reason he continues to get misused.

If elected officials everywhere knew that taxpayers would come down to the office with blood in their eyes, demanding explanations, when the tax rates went up, we might have a little more care and economy in the spending of public funds.

MODELS OF SERVICE

Dr. R. A. Millikan, famous scientist, took occasion in a speech at Little Rock, Ark., the other day to pay tribute to the men who operate the nation's filling stations—and said publicly something that a great many motorists have already said privately.

Filling station employees, says the great physicist, "have improved the manners and the courtesy and the consideration of the American public more than all the colleges in the country."

'I'LL TELL THE WORLD'

The Romance and Thrills of Newsgathering for the United Press—From Universal's Screenplay.

SYNOPSIS: Being a correspondent for the United Press, a world-wide newsgathering organization, is a lot of fun, decides Stanley Brown as, in the guise of an old man, he leans heavily on a beautiful blonde in the gardens of the old Hotel Europa, at Viechy. He has come to Europe to find out why efforts are being made to kill the Archduke Ferdinand, an ancient royalist. His rival, Briggs, of Confederate Press, is out to learn the same thing. Brown has forgotten Briggs, however. The stunning girl, attired in shorts and riding a bicycle, has collided with his wheel chair, and is now trying to help him recover from shock. He has disguised himself as a helpless old man to outwit Briggs.

CHAPTER V The beautiful, blonde young woman was all solicitude. Brown continued to simulate entire helplessness and to revel in the situation as she managed to drag him to a bench in the sunny, flower-scented garden. Here, she held him with both her arms about him. He pillowed his head on her shoulder, taking full advantage of her good-nature. And he kept thinking that what he was doing was far more interesting than gathering news, and that Archduke Ferdinand, target of someone who wanted to kill him, and his royalist dinner to be held that evening at the hotel, could go hang for all he cared. A beautiful titled companion. "He thinks I'm a locomotive," he said. Then to Adolph: "I won't want you until I start whistling at crossings." The girl by this time was convinced that Brown was at least fifty years younger than he pretended to be. She smiled to herself, came to a quick decision: "Oh, I'm sure Adolph is right," she said mischievously. "The water is just what you need." She took the glass from the servant and made Brown drink it. While she was occupied at this task, Brown kicked the tray out of Adolph's hands again. Adolph went to get some more water. Brown repeated his arm in a position of vantage. The girl suddenly decided to play a little game of her own. She made a grimace of pain and emitted one of Brown's famous "O-o-o-oh's". She swayed as if in pain. Brown completely forgot his role, leaned toward her. He was alert with solicitude. "What's the matter?" he asked. "My ankle. I'm afraid I sprained it," she said, assuming an agonized expression—and at the same time struggling to keep from laughing. Brown was off the bench like a shot and down on his knees examining it. "And you didn't say anything about it," he said, admiration for her stoicism mixed with concern over the supposed injury. "My ankle, I'm afraid I sprained it—" said the girl, with a scarcely concealed smile. "—of your age." "It hasn't started to swell yet," he said, absorbed in his examination. "By the way, stand up!" The ankle immediately came in. With a cry of pain, the girl dropped back on the bench. "Wait a minute!" exclaimed Brown, thoroughly alarmed by this "My ankle, I'm afraid I sprained it." He dashed to the wheel-chair, righted it, and pulled it beside her. "I'm going to tuck you home," he said, as he bundled her in it. "Where do you live from Baltimore?" "The ankle, I'm afraid, I've sprained it," she replied, faintly, leaned back and closed her eyes. Brown picked up the bicycle and started pushing it and the wheel-chair at the same time. In a few seconds he had switched from aged invalid to young athlete. Brown, during his perambulation, eyed the girl sympathetically. "I'm terribly sorry about your ankle," he said. "My ankle, I'm afraid you're so much better," she replied, innocently. Brown suddenly realized that he'd completely forgotten his role. He groped for an explanation for his sudden recovery. "The ankle, I'm afraid, I've sprained it," she repeated, "that water's wonderful stuff!" He leaned over her, trying to figure out the name which was embroidered on a handkerchief in the pocket of her sweater, as he pushed the chair and bicycle. "The name's Jane," he said. He stopped for a moment. "How long've you been over?" she asked. "You think I'm an American?" she asked. "I know it." "And who are you?" she demanded. "I'm Stanley Brown." "I'm Jane Hamilton—from Baltimore." "Baltimore! Well, well! This is a coincidence! And we meet over here! Well, it only goes to show!" "Jane, are you from Baltimore?" She was suddenly apprehensive. "No, I'm from Brooklyn. That's the coincidence," he explained. "You being from 'way down in Baltimore, and me being from Brooklyn. Isn't it odd?" He resumed pushing the chair. They were silent. Eventually, Jane said: "Here's where I get off." "Let me carry you in," he volunteered. He appeared highly enthusiastic over this idea. "No, thanks—I think I can make it," she said. She leaped lightly out of the wheel-chair. She started for the hotel entrance without the trace of a limp. It was his turn to be surprised. "Thanks for the buggy ride, Mr. Brown," she said, smiling. "They wait a minute—" he pleaded. "I—" "Maybe I'll bump into you again," was the unsatisfying rejoinder. She hurried into the lobby. "Yeah—come up and wreck me sometime!" he called after her. He stood for a moment, grinning at the thought of the way he had been out-generaled. Then he remembered his disguise, and quickly straightened out his great coat, muffler, goggles and cap. Briggs might be around, snooping. He climbed back in his wheel-chair and started back to his own quarters. Jane returned to her apartments in the east wing of the hotel. There she effusively greeted her aunt Louise. The aunt was stern-faced, almost regal in her bearing. "Who was that man with the wheel-chair?" the dowager asked, her voice sharp with disapproval and suspicion. "Just a coincidence from Brooklyn—his name's Brown," Jane replied lightly, as if to dismiss the matter. "What were you doing in his chair?" the elderly woman persisted. "Taking a buggy ride, Auntie." "Helen, how can you be so indiscreet?" rebuked the aunt. "Why, for the last hour we've completely lost sight of you! I've been simply frantic. After this, stay off bicycles. And in that costume—why, it's unthinkable! She was genuinely shocked at the scant modern apparel. "Not for Jane Hamilton, of Baltimore," Jane soothed. "Don't mention that ridiculous name to me again," she always told young Uncle Ferdinand that it was sheer madness to have you educated in America!" the old woman scolded.

HOLDUP REPORT WAS FALSE

ELDORADO, Ill. (U.P.)—Rumors of a "holdup" of a Big Four passenger train spread through Saline county recently when a report was misconstrued. The report of the holdup spread after a telegraph operator messaged that the passenger train was held up by several CCC workers. Later, the operator explained that the CCC workers boarded the tender of an engine on a passenger train and the engineer refused to start the train unless they climbed off the engine.

COURT SAVED HUSBY

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah. (U.P.)—A husband cannot be imprisoned for non-payment of alimony, or separate maintenance, to his divorced, or estranged wife, when he is unable to make the payments, the Utah State Supreme Court ruled in releasing Parley F. Gerber from custody. Gerber had been ordered held in the county jail for 30 nights for failure to support his estranged wife, Bertha Gerber.

SAFETY MEDIUM

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah. (U.P.)—Anticipation of danger, alert driving and proper care would eliminate 90 per cent of automobile accidents, Sheriff S. Grant Young told the American Legion meeting here. He based his conclusion on the percentage of preventable accidents. Death toll from traffic accidents is steadily increasing annually, he said, despite education in schools and among adult groups.

Mr. and Mrs. Louie Douglas of Houston, who have been visiting here with relatives, attended the Arlington Downs races.

'Search for Beauty,' Contest Winners to The Ritz Tuesday

Paramount's "Search for Beauty" for which the studio staged an international contest embracing every English-speaking country in the world to find fifteen most perfect women is coming to the Ritz theatre tomorrow and Wednesday. The thirty winners have been given parts in the picture. The principal players include Larry "Buster" Crabbe, Ida Lupino, Robert Armstrong, James Gleason, Roscoe Karns and Toby Wing.

The story of the picture was based on a play by Schuyler E. Grey and Paul R. Milton. The screen play was written by Frank Butler and Claude Binyon. Eric Kenton directed. The original story was written by David Boehm and Maurice Watkins. It chronicles the amusing misadventures of two scheming crooks, just released from prison who immediately open their eyes for further "deals."

Rogers Pleased With Title Role
In 'David Harum'

Will Rogers was happy when Fox Film executives decided to produce "David Harum" with himself in the title role. The part has long been hailed as tailor-made for Rogers, though the only similarity between the real Will Rogers and the tight-fisted banker, David Harum, seems to be the wit and dry philosophy of both.

I find it interesting to most everyone in this area, and will thank you to favor me with a dozen of these prints." Hall now lives at Lubbock.
