Howard-Glasscock Field Gets Increase

The Howard-Glasscock field has received a material increase with new test, two re-tests, and a deepened well. Merrick & Lamb have completed the Orlis Chalk No. 11, section 125, block 29, W&N Railway Co. survey. The well tested at the rate of 811 barrels daily with no evidence of water. The total depth of the hole is 1838 feet. The California Co. has deepened the Dora Roberts No. 3, and the test after the work showed the well capable of making 351 barrels daily from the new depth of 2985 feet. This test showed no water, either. The American-Maraeabo Oil Co. has re-tested the W. B. Seibles No. 3-C, and the well shows a potential production of 811 barrels. The Schermerhorn Oil company of Tulsa has tested the Kloh No. 8, section 13, block 33, the second time, and the well shows 677 barrels on the pump. Total depth is 2436 feet. The lack of water in the new wells being completed in the field is encouraging for a large quantity has been encountered in most of the wells so far.

The Atlantic Oil Producing company has completed another of the wells on the Johnson lease in the south Ward county field. The new well, No. 16, is flowing at the rate of 256 barrels daily. The operators have been developing this lease rather rapidly, and to date the lease has 15 wells, not counting this last well, with a total potential production of 4,578 barrels.

200 Visit Exhibit of 'Year-old Painters' Here Saturday

About a year ago, Mrs. F. H. Lanham and a student were sketching in the back yard of the Clarence Hale home. Mrs. Hale occasionally walked by the easels while doing her work. Each time she spent more time watching and eventually she had a moment of leisure.

She telephoned Mrs. N. W. Bigham, and Mrs. Bigham, after watching the painting of Stanton, Big Spring, and Odessa, being then in the city, had her hand at it. She remembered where some tubes of paint were, once used by her daughter Leola. She telephoned a friend and the friend telephoned another friend, etc., until the class now numbers more than 20—men, girls and boys, none of whom have painted longer than a year.

Solicitation Racket Hit at by Merchants

Many complaints were heard from business men this week because of a new "solicitation racket" in which the telephone is used. Out-of-town solicitors invade the city, sell some local organization on the idea of a percentage of the profits, then in the name of charity, religion, civic work or some other appeal, proceed to operate their "racket," indignant merchants said.

The method is for the solicitor to telephone the victim, then send local parties to get the money. The Ministerial association has been asked to disseminate these "rackets" by which Midland people are asked for a good deal of money, merely so local organizations may get a small percentage.

Names of two business men were used recently in a civic enterprise in which the "telephone racket" was employed. Both indignantly had use of their names stopped as soon as they learned of the method. It is held by investigators that anybody who permits these "outsiders" with church calendars, cook books, and other advertising "rackets" to use them as fronts for collection of funds on a percentage basis, weakens the causes of the benefiting organization in the long run.

Hunt was apprehended by George Lane at Rosenberg, three miles west of Richmond, after Lames' small daughter had watched a burglar prowling through the house. As the man left she ran and awakened her father who seized his gun and caught Hunt.

"I'LL TELL THE WORLD"
 The Romance and Thrills of Newsgathering for the United Press—From Universal's Screenplay.

SYNOPSIS: Discovering that his "Jane Hamilton" of Baltimore actually is the Princess Helen and that she is about to be restored to her throne by royalists, Stanley Brown, dashing young correspondent for the United Press, sets out for Crau, on the frontier, believing that he'll find her there. He is in love with the girl. Briggs, of the Confederation Press, his rival, has just scooped him on "Jane's" true identity, and he is out to get even with Briggs.

CHAPTER IX
 Crau, a picturesque village in the hills at the frontier, consisted of a few narrow, cobbled streets, and oddly and grotesquely shaped residences and stores, their upper stories jutting over darkened thoroughfares. It was after midnight the hamlet was just a few hours away from world prominence, due to the machinations of Count Strunsky.

Strunsky had brought Princess Helen and her uncle, Archduke Ferdinand, to the outskirts of Crau. After hours of debate, and indecision on the part of Helen, who was not as yet completely persuaded that she should become queen, the Confederation plan for the revolution was in jeopardy.

Strunsky, Helen and Ferdinand were in the reception room of the villa, a massive estate at the edge of Crau. It was heavily guarded by men as well as by high walls and grated windows.

Strunsky, in an effort to fire Helen with at least a little enthusiasm, led her to a window and pointed out the boundary line to her country. He explained that he, Ferdinand, and himself, in two powerful armchairs, had spent many years ago under a hail of machine gun fire and rifle bullets, Ferdinand really was taking the wrong path toward winning Helen's cooperation because she wanted to know if the country was still machine-gun minded.

Strunsky, out the aged royalist short by telling Helen for the hundredth time that her subjects would welcome her, that many years had passed, and that they had time to think, and to regret their actions in driving her and her family from the country. He said he was sure that the citizens had been happier when her family had ruled.

"I hope you're right," she replied, hesitantly. "If all sounds incredible to me, why should I become queen of a country I barely remember?"

"Slightly, you've ruled since the day your father was assassinated," pointed out Strunsky.

"The world isn't run like that any longer," she protested. "There is only one right now—the right of people to choose their own government."

"I assure you that they are ready to choose you," replied Strunsky. "The girl's attitude alarmed him."

"He became even more distraught when he heard a banging on the front door. He summoned Josef, a battle-weary servant of military bearing, and ordered him to investigate. Josef hurried to the door. He discovered that Brown, who had arrived by plane only a short time before, was doing the banging.

knowledge. He also knows a good deal about electricity. When he was out at a ranch, way out in the sand, he rigged up a generator and had electricity there. It was Ohm made.

A man named William Wart, of Warsaw, Washington, has failed as a burglar, according to a clipping from Warsaw.

The clipping states that William was alone in a mansion, and was about to take $50,000 worth of diamonds, when the lady of the house returned home, and discovered him. "Don't scream, or I will bump you off," William said.

"I won't scream—but I must laugh," said the woman.

"Why you wanta laugh?" William asked.

"Because those diamonds are from the ten cent store," the woman said. "I bought them for a children's party. You are welcome to them."

At that William looked cheap, and departed, and did not take the diamonds, which were real.

The Warsaw newspaper called William the prize clump.

"You must go away!" he ordered through a peep-hole.

Brown, desperate in his desire to get the great news story which was breaking, paid no attention to the command.

"I tell you I'm coming in," he persisted. "I've got to see Miss Hamilton."

Kurtz, another servant, also of military type, joined Josef, Josef, ready for action, drew an ugly automatic pistol.

"No—that will not do!" cautioned Kurtz. "Not yet—"

"If you don't let me in, I'll yell!" threatened Brown.

He proceeded to do so, his shouts bringing Strunsky on the run to the door. Strunsky, recognizing Brown as the newspaperman of terrace episode, ordered the servants to let him in, to keep him quiet. He was afraid he would wake the countess.

"You see that kindness pays," Brown told the servants, with a grin of triumph as he entered the villa. They leered at him. He said to Strunsky, "I've got to see Miss Hamilton immediately!"

"You will sit down and be very quiet," commanded Strunsky.

"I will not!" Brown barked.

Two more servants appeared. He decided to sit down after all.

"Take him to the cellar!" ordered Strunsky. At this point, however, Helen, having heard Brown's voice, entered the corridor.

"What are you doing?" she asked angrily, eyeing the ex-Prime Minister and his servant.

"Abating a nuisance," replied Strunsky, sternly, pointing to Brown. "He—"

Helen exercised her royal authority.

"Let him go!" she commanded.

Brown turned on the guards.

"How'm I doing?" he asked.

They gave him dirty looks as Helen ordered them and Strunsky to leave the room. She stood alone with Brown. She eyed him questioningly.

"Why'd you cross me?" he asked evily. "You could have told me the truth."

"I'm sorry," she said, sincerely.

"Yeah, sorry," he scoffed. "But think of the United Press!"

Strunsky impatiently returned to the room, remonstrated with Helen for talking with Brown. He turned to the newspaperman.

"What are you doing here, anyway?" he demanded.

"So you're Strunsky?" Brown said, half to himself. "Ex-Prime Minister—leader of the opposition—with Princess Helen at the frontier. Quite a party you're having!"

Strunsky, enraged at what he considered Brown's insolence, and at the same time realizing that the newspaperman had guessed his plans, summoned the servants.

Helen protested.

"We must silence this man immediately, Your Majesty!" he exclaimed. "Secrecy is imperative. Publicity at this moment would ruin everything."

"Publicity? What would it ruin?" interrupted Helen, turning on him. "You told me the people wanted me. Why be afraid to tell them I'm coming? If I must sneak in like a thief, I'm not going!"

"Sure," flipped Brown. "Let's give it class!"

"But this will be awkward," said Strunsky. "The plans—"

Abruptly he caught himself. He decided to change his tact. He dismissed the servants and turned to Helen.

"Your Majesty is right," he said calmly, as if admitting defeat. "I have kept your plans secret for so long I've not realized it is time for the world to know."

"Through the United Press," added Brown. He turned to Helen, anxious to get his story while he had the chance. "When are you going back?"

"Within the hour. By motor car," she told him.

"What a story!" he exclaimed. He raced for the door. Strunsky shot a quick look of command at Kurtz, who acknowledged it. He turned back to Helen while Kurtz hurriedly left the room in the wake of the newspaperman.

"Prince Michael will be here at any moment!" said Strunsky. "As soon as he arrives, we will leave for the capital."

"Oh—Michael!" she said absently. "So he's going with us—"

"Of course. It will make a better impression. We can tell the people you will marry as soon as you are on the throne."

"Does he look like his picture?" she asked, as if Michael was just one more unpleasant feature of her new job.

"He's very handsome," Strunsky assured her.

Brown, meanwhile was racing toward the tiny village to find a telephone. As he passed a wall a shadowy figure rose from behind it, holding a club.

A sixth sense warned Brown to dodge. The man swung, but missed. He ducked behind the wall, and Brown took to the middle of the street from this point onward. When no telephone seemed available, he found a telegraph office

Brown raced from the office. As he ran down the street a knife flew past him nose and stuck in a wooden wall. He did not pause to investigate. The story was at this moment the most important thing in the world. His next stop was at the village saloon. He woke the bartender.

"Say, is this whole town under ether?" he asked. "Where's your phone?"

"Gone!" he exclaimed. "Somebody must have stolen it!"

"Things aren't very permanent in this town are they?" jibed Brown. "Where can I find another?"

"This is the only one in the village," was the disheartening reply. "Then get me a car," Brown ordered.

"No car. Bus comes in the morning."

"I don't believe it—somebody will have stolen it by then!" He stormed out.

"What a rotten note!" he growled. "Biggest yarn of the year—and I can't even tell my Paris office about it."

Make 'Prevention' Byword of Child Health Week

The secret of sound and robust adult health begins in the cradle. It is only "by making each little body strong, by means of an educational campaign to run persistently on through the years" that the rising generation can be emancipated from illness and disease.

By Olive Roberts Barton

"If you waken call me early, call me early, mother dear, for I'm to be Queen of the May."

We have always associated May first with children, and now more so than ever ensue the first week of the magic month each year is designated by national authority as "Child Health Week."

All over the land on the First of May there will be held special meetings of groups interested in the promotion of child health, because fortunately we do not endorse the theory of the survival of the fittest, allowing the weak to die so that the stronger strain may be transmitted to posterity—but rather that all be made fit.

As Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur expressed it well at the White House Conference in 1930, "We cannot stop for a moment to argue with those who would dodge the responsibility of care for established human life." It is the supreme gift to us humans and we must preserve it at all times. The wretched name of a little body may have in it the brain and spirit of a Caesar, a Cicero, a Keats, a Washington, a Schmeizel, a Shelley, or a Stevenson. It is not for us to foretell the potentialities of a baby.

This is true. We are trying to canonize health, but not by elimination. We are trying to build a race for the future, and a heritage of good bodies, but not through the death of the unfit. By making each little body strong, by means of an educational campaign to run persistently on through the years the work will be done.

Health for children consists of two things—prevention and cure. As each year wings by we find the preventive theory accentuated more and more. It is amazing to hear some of the new scientists explain how they are unearthing facts to prove that much of the illness of adults is directly attributable to "uncured" diseases in children.

It is no longer thought that when a child has some high-powered germ disease, he gets over it when his convalescence is ended. Do not be alarmed—in most cases he does. But many vague and elusive troubles in adolescence and middle life are fast being pinned down to earlier illness, and the time is approaching when tests will be made to prove that a child carries on "Old Man of the Sea" with him, or in him, to devil his later years, even after he is pronounced well.

There is much sympathy for the sick child and it is a grand and glorious thing there is, because where there is sympathy there is help. But there should be cultivated still another kind of sympathy, or co-operation, for the well child so that every means may be employed to keep him well. Someday we shall have, I hope and soon, regular examining stations where all children will have to go at least once a year for a thorough check-up; and if they are carrying in their blood streams or intestines any trace of "uncured illness" it will be traced down and eliminated from their bodies entirely.

So far this line of experimenting has not reached perfection, but the time is coming. Then shall we really be emancipated.

Kentucky, Massachusetts, Pennsylvania, and Virginia are the only commonwealths in the United States; Vermont is called a "commonwealth or a state" in its constitution.

National Music Week May 6-12

The 11th National Music week will be held May 6-12. Originating in Dallas 12 years ago, Music week has been observed each year for one week beginning with the first Sunday in May. American music is always emphasized.

The keynote of this year's observance is expressed in the slogan: "A more fruitful use of increased leisure through music." Plans are being made in more than 2000 participating communities for a greater observance than ever before—for music is now more than ever recognized as a national

What better start can you give the baby for a happy, healthful and successful life than a bank account?

It's surprising how a little savings account can grow into a substantial sum within a few short years.

Small accounts, as well as large, are welcomed here and are given the same careful and efficient attention.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK

PROCLAMATION

In recognition of the fact that the president of our great America has designated May 6-12 as National Music week and as Music week is to be a reminder to the American people that music and the other arts are essentials and not to be curtailed in a time of stress such as the present, we therefore urge the people of Midland to cooperate in all musical activities, think music, make music, enjoy music and let us all unite in making the coming Music week more potent for community good than any of the preceding ones.

M. C. Ulmer, Mayor.

The Fine Arts club will sponsor National Music week in Midland, and has appointed the following committee: Miss Lytle G. Watson, chairman; Miss Leona McCormick and Mrs. Paul T. Vickers. Miss Watson has been chairman of Music week here for the past 11 years.

Each Midland church is requested to feature music in their Sunday services and ministers to emphasize music in their sermons.

Other Midland organizations will also observe Music week. The Watsonson School of Music will give a concert Sunday afternoon at 3:30 at the Methodist church, in which musical novelties will lend added attraction to the program. The Fine Arts club will entertain in the form of a musicale on Wednesday afternoon at 4:30 in the Crystal ballroom of Hotel Scharbauer.

Several other musical programs are being arranged, complete programs to be published later.

J. Frank Dobie Says Farmers to Regret Killing of Coyotes

AUSTIN (P)—Farmers and ranchers of the "brush country" in years to come will rue the extermination of coyotes, in the opinion of J. Frank Dobie, nature expert, writer of Southwest lore and University of Texas English professor. Coyotes are an economic asset in Texas' sheep and goat but in the "brush country" are helpful scavengers and not to be destroyed wantonly, declared.

The gatherer of Southwest ends also deplored the extermination of "the Southwest's endary animal."

"Legendary tales of the coyote are manifold," he said. "The coyote is a 'stute' and 's' and the smartest beast of the state."

Dobie protested the extermination of coyotes in some sections of the state. He said that coyotes in those sections where there is no economic value for their extermination, waste the expenditure of government funds, he asserted.

Coyotes are nature's agents against an over-abundance of certain obnoxious wild life. Their merits outweigh their faults in most sections other than sheep and goat country, in his opinion. They are, he related, of jack rabbits, which men culture in some sections of the state. They delight in grasshoppers and similarly five insects.

"And it is only once in a while that a coyote will be shot for cattle are not a them," Dobie said in his opinion. "They delight in grasshoppers and similarly five insects. Poisoning of the coyote is a method of extermination that has given way to trapping. Use of airplane latest method in coyote

RED HILL'S CIRCUIT SMASHER WITH ONE ABOARD BESTS COAHOMA CLUB

BY JESS RIDGERS

The Midland Colts spotted the Coahoma baseball club one run in the first inning Friday afternoon, but lost little time in getting it back when "Red" Hill hit a home run with a mate on base in the Midland half of that inning. One more run was added in the fifth by the Colts to make the final score three and one.

The visitors put together three hits in their first appearance at bat for their lone tally and thereafter were able to get only one hit off Cub Heaton, Midland import from Stanton.

Mills, first man up for the Col's, hit the first reached first on an infield error, went to second on Wynne's sacrifice bunt and scored ahead of Hill on the latter's circuit blow. The tally in the fifth came when Mahoney, Coahoma pitcher, walked Wynne with the bases already loaded. He was relieved by Cramer who retired the side without further scoring.

Each pitcher gave up only four hits and Heaton struck out seven while Mahoney whiffed four of the locals.

Midland used four new men in the game. Heaton, Wynne, infielder from Palestine; Salmon, outfielder from Palestine, and Williams, an infielder from Lamesa. Heaton and Wynne showed enough to believe they will stick around for a while, but Williams lacks the polish necessary to last on the infield. Salmon looked very good in the outfield but whether he can hit is yet to be proven.

Powder Puff Golfers To Wage War on Par When Invitational Tourney Begins

Members of the lipstick golfing fraternity will start their assault on Old Man Par at country club Tuesday morning at 8 o'clock—fair sex entries having been invited from 16 towns of the Permian basin.

The occasion is the first invitational medal handicap tourney ever conducted here for women, and marks the new interest being taken by women in the game.

There are 16 members of the Midland Women's Golf association, and this week's tournament is likely to bring in others.

Golf will be played during the morning; luncheon will be served at 12 o'clock at the club house; driving, approaching and putting contests will be held soon after the luncheon, and all have the option of playing golf or bridge in the afternoon. Trophies will be presented.

Mrs. Joe D. Chambers is chairman of the reception committee, made up otherwise of Meses. W. T. Welsh, Arch Thomas and Bill Simpson. At the head of the refreshments committee is Mrs. Frank Aldridge.

Sandy Auchterlonie, club professional, will assist the women.

In this connection, a whole herd of boys will be required—whether experienced or not—for use as caddies. The boys are asked to report at the club at 8 o'clock on the stroke of the gong. Those who usually serve in that capacity will be at school, which makes for an emergency never experienced here before.

Notice the papers and you'll see where Miss Aniela Gorezyca has done it again—which means she successfully defended her position as Fort Worth golf queen. She beat

Mrs. C. E. Stanfield by the astounding score of 12-11! After the match a reporter dropped by and asked how she felt about defending her Southern championship at New Orleans in a few days. She said she felt on her game. A look at her score card should have convinced him of that. She shot a 79, including a 37 for the first nine—or two over men's par. An eagle was scored on No. 16. She like another great Texan in the golf ranks, Gus Moreland, gets a lot of following because of her pretty face and trim figure. She not only plays like a queen; she is one.

BONURA IN STRIDE

Happ Morse, former manager of the Dallas Steers, is the "I told you so" man of the hour. For two years Morse claimed that Zeke Bonura, former Steer first sacker now playing with the Chicago White Sox, belonged in the major leagues. Morse was firm in his belief that Bonura, once he got a chance in the big-time, would be a better major than minor league player.

"Bonura is a rare specimen in baseball," Morse said. "You see many players who can burn up any minor league but can't make the grade in the majors. Well, Bonura is different. While he was an A-1 first sacker with the Steers he would have been even better with a major league team. He simply is that type of ball player. Now that he is first sacking for the White Sox, I believe he will hit better and show a vast improvement in his fielding."

Bonura started his first American league campaign in stride. He gave an inkling of what Chicago fans could expect when he hit in twenty-three consecutive spring exhibition games. After going hitless the opening day of the pennant race, the giant Italian from New Orleans breezed back the second day to hit two home runs and the third day got a double and two singles in five trips to the plate.

"For Bonura's sake I am glad he got out of the Texas League because another season of night baseball would have ruined him," Morse said. "Zeke is a big league daytime baseball player without a single weakness at the plate. At night, like thousands of others, he is just a man in a uniform. Flood lights have ruined more major league prospects than anything I know of. Night ball would have ruined Bonura but not now for that."

You want the huskiest, sturdiest front-end you can buy. And, of course, you want shock-proof steering. You pay for them all—but you get them all, in the low-price field, only from Chevrolet. The reason is simple. Fully-enclosed Knee-Action wheels are costly to build—so costly that only Chevrolet, world's largest builder of cars, can afford to make the necessary huge investment in new machinery—and still keep prices among the lowest of the low. Only Chevrolet has the resources and the assured volume of sales that permit this extra production cost. Chevrolet does it because Chevrolet believes that, to KEEP ON SELLING THE MOST CARS, YOU MUST KEEP ON BUILDING THE BEST.

Those entering these events were: Dewitt Carr, baritone; Val Borum, trumpet; C. A. Goldsmith, saxophone; Felix Halton, cornet; Bob Reeves, bass; and Russell Wright, trombone.

Three of these made the "superior" ranking before the Judge, Harold Woodridge, a former Sousa man. Those winning these medals are: C. A. Goldsmith, Felix Halton, and Bob Reeves. Ribbon awards are to be given for those making an excellent rating, above 87; these will be announced later.

The Midland band received a beautiful engraved cup as second place winner.

board. The general term "cancer" is often used to describe various kinds of malignant growths which, strictly speaking, are not really cancers in the sense that a physician may use the word. There are many kinds of cancers, differing widely in their make-up and behavior. Some are external, some internal. Some grow rapidly, some slowly. Some spread quickly through the body, others do not. Some are very dangerous, others are less harmful. All possess the common habit of disorderly growth.

Every cancer begins as a single body cell, or group of cells, which for some unknown reason starts to grow independently of the rest of the body tissues and serves no useful purpose.

The new growth, or cancer, is at first very small and entirely local, but it does not remain so. As it increases in size it causes trouble either by interfering with the function of important organs near it or by discharging poisonous substance into the system. If a cancer is not removed or checked in its growth, it finally becomes fatal, unless death occurs in some other way.

Authorities at present hold the opinion that cancers are caused, in a practical sense, by various forms of chronic irritation, to which the human body is exposed from the cradle to the grave.

Common examples of the casual relationship of chronic irritation to cancer are seen in cancer of the tongue, cancer of the lip and cancer of the skin. Cancers of the cervix are frequently associated with chronic inflammation of that organ caused by injuries due to childbirth.

Exactly how much irritation or inflammation of that operates to produce cancer or to favor its development is the great question in cancer research today. While it has not yet been proved that a person can directly inherit cancer, it does occur more frequently in some families than in others. There is reason, therefore, to believe that members of such families are more likely to have this disease. A few forms of cancer show a distinct hereditary tendency; but others show no apparent hereditary trace whatever.

Announce Schedule For the State Meet

AUSTIN.—Solicitation among Austin residents for free lodging for participants and faculty sponsors to the 24th annual state meet of the Interscholastic league, to be held May 3, 4 and 5, has been started by the University of Texas Bureau of Public School Interests under the direction of Mrs. Johnnie Fay Ashby, office secretary of the league. Young Men's Christian association. Results so far have been gratifying, and it is expected that accommodations will be obtained for the approximately two thousand official school representatives who will take part in the meet.

The tentative program for the state meet has been announced by Roy Bedichek, chief of the Bureau of Public School Interests. It is subject to change, however, he pointed out, and is to be supplemented by the official program which will be issued May 3. The general schedule of events is as follows:

Thursday, May 3.—Registration, rebate, breakfast tickets, and assignments to lodgings at Gregory gymnasium, east side of university campus. The League Bureau opens at 2:30 p. m. and closes at 10, and opens again at 6 a. m. the following morning.

Myrick Agent for Legal Reserve Co.

W. Clinton Myrick has been appointed local representative for the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance company, according to an advertisement from the company in this issue of The Reporter-Telegram.

The Connecticut Mutual is the oldest legal reserve life insurance company doing business in Texas. It was founded at Hartford, Conn., in 1846, and is the fifth oldest legal reserve company operating in the United States, now being in its 88th year. As a legal reserve company, all profits from its operations are returned to its policy holders in the form of annual dividends.

When the Connecticut Mutual entered Texas, officials of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company selected it as one of the strongest in which its employees could buy insurance through the company, the premiums being deducted regularly from salaries. Myrick handles individually the policies of employees of the telephone company in this district where W. G. Riddle is manager.

PALM BEACH WHITE

—And we have to hand it to these softly draped, superbly tailored Palm Beach Suits. They're the swankest white washable garments we have ever seen.

The new weaves certainly put wrinkling and mussing to flight. They stay smooth, fresh and clean so much longer than you'd expect. What's more, they're quick on the comeback . . . a hang-up over-night is almost as good as a pressing.

We're showing them in new distinctive models, both single and double-breasted.
