Sick and Discouraged, Joe Palmer Returned to Texas

Spite House

If this structure becomes famous as an architectural freak, a quarrel between landowners in Men-dora, Egypt, is the cause. Neighbor No. 1 erected a high wall to fence his property off from Neighbor No. 2. But Neighbor No. 2 got even. He built himself a cozy three room, flat smack against the wall, as you see here.

Two years ago, 3,000 Denver citizens flocked nightly over a period of six weeks to the arena at 5th Ave. and Broadway to listen to the eloquence of Dr. Theodore M. Hofmeister, famous evangelist of Pittsburgh, Pa., who once held a revival at Midland.

Once a newsboy on the streets of that city, a son of a mill worker, he rose from obscurity into the ranks of leadership in the field of evangelism until he is considered by thousands as "The Billy Sunday" of this generation.

Weighing Peace or War in Nation's Basic Industry

In the hands of these 200 delegates assembled in a fifth-floor room of the Elks Hall in Pittsburgh, rested the answer to the question "to strike or not to strike." On their decision hung the possible tying up of the nation's basic industry, steel, and perhaps the whole future of labor relations under the New Deal. The delegates are shown at the opening session of their convention, each man representing a local lodge of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

DEBUNKING GOES A STEP TOO FAR

Debunking has been carried too far. A recent publication, The Modern Thinker, places many old historical legends in the same category as Santa Claus—intriguing as an idea, but no more.

Historians say they have investigated and have found many discrepancies in history, citing some of the following as examples:

The famous Damascus blades that were fabled to cut through iron bars were not superior to the Toledo blades of the present time.—Richard III was not a hunch-back.—Seneca was not a half-Christian philosopher but a grasping money-lender, who died leaving a fortune of $3,000,000.—The Pass of Thermopylae was not defended by 300 but at least 7,000 and perhaps 12,000 Greeks.—The Siege of Troy was largely myth.—Witches were never burned at Salem, Mass. In the outbreak of the anti-witch fanaticism of 1691-92, 19 persons were hanged but not one was burned.—Louis XVI was not the pink of dignified propriety at his execution but screamed for mercy.—William Tell did not shoot an apple from the head of his son.—Alexander the Great did not weep for more worlds to conquer. There is reason to believe that his army met with a serious reverse in India which induced him to retrace his steps.—Horatius never defended the bridge.—Constantine was not the saint history terms him. He murdered his wife, one or two sons and a goodly number of his relatives.—Columbus did not make an egg stand on its end.—The Blood of Rizzio, Marie Stuart's favorite, cannot be seen on the floor where he was murdered. What is visible is a dab of red paint, annually renewed.—Sappho did not throw herself from the Leucadian Cliff for love of Phaon. She was a matron of the highest character, the mother of a large family.—Phillip II of Spain was not roasted to death by a fire, because the red tape of royal etiquette forbade anyone to touch the royal person. He died a natural death.—The Hanging-Gardens of Babylon did not hang and they were not gardens. They were terraces supported by arches and overgrown with trees. They were erected for the amusement of a Babylonian queen who had come from a mountainous country.—Pocahontas did not save the life of Capt. John Smith. It is now considered a romantic yarn.—Columbus did not, on his fourth voyage to the New World, move the superstitious savages by predicting an eclipse of the moon. There was no lunar eclipse at anywhere near that particular time.—Nero was not the monster as most of us have come to believe. His mother, Agrippina, was not put to death by his order, nor did he play the harp or the fiddle while Rome burned, nor did he sing "The Burning of Troy" on such occasion. The stories originated from Tacitus, who cordially hated Nero, and from Petronius Arbiter, who was put to death for a conspiracy against Nero.—Queen Elizabeth was not the divinely sweet creature that the historians of her time present her. Her temper was as red-hot as her hair. She sometimes drank too much and at the slightest provocation showed by her actions in anger that she forgot she was a lady and a queen. On occasions she struck and kicked her maids.

The active life of an oyster is said to be 10 years. How long it lasts after that only the taste of your stew can tell.

Dr. Dafeo has stopped giving the Canadian quinquettes their diet of rum, but the father can't get over it yet.

Thinking, says a Harvard professor, caused the depression, but it wasn't so much what we thought as how.

Any light but white will make a person nervous, says New York University scientists—red especially, if it stays on too long.

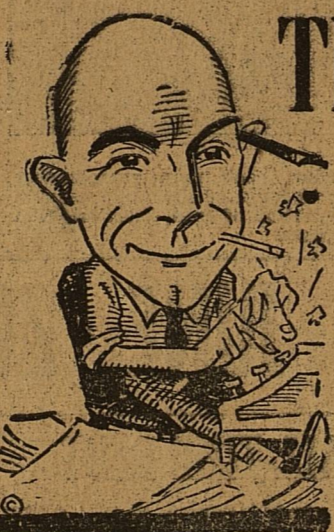

Joan Crawford says radio stars should not marry. But if they don't marry, how then can they get divorced?

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything.)

Addison Wadley, making a sales talk to his employes, is quoted as saying, "I want to see a pair of these Knee-High hose on practically every woman in Midland." All of these politicians who break into print with so much ballyhoo soon fizzle out. Even Alfalfa Bill Murray seems to have gone to seed. The case of Clarence Darrow investigating Hugh Johnson started off like the old theory of the irresistible force striking the immovable object. The small boy is nagged by his older brother. The older brother is nagged by his older sister. The sister is nagged by her papa. Papa is nagged by mamma. It's a world of nagging. A worried man: "I do not long to become rich. I merely long to get out of debt. It must be heaven to be out of debt, though poor."

Commercial Deep Water Diving at Angelo Increases

SAN ANGELO, (P).—Commercial deep water diving in West Texas! What would have been thought impossible by the pioneers who drove cattle from one shallow water hole to another is now a reality on Lake Nassworthy, near San Angelo. The commercial angle entered when young Milton Ragsdale, Jamie Hardgrave and Edwin Kiltrel went down 27 feet to the bottom of the lake to locate a 5,000 pound concrete block used to anchor a swimming and diving raft. The boys received $2 for their services. The young divers built their own helmets complete to air hose, pump, outfit and electric signaling apparatus. They can stay under water from 5 to 15 minutes. The weight of the apparatus is so balanced that the youths can use their own motive power going down and coming up, which they do slowly because of the changes in pressure. A big future is forecast for the divers. They have recovered a bunch of keys lost at the Bailey boat-house and have received numerous orders for the recovery of rods, reels, wrist watches and other articles lost at the bottom of the lake. They are boy scouts. Flying a sailplane of his own design, "Heinie" Dittmar of Germany recently set a new altitude record of 12,500 feet at Rio de Janeiro. The Russian government has assigned 14 more planes, featured by modern sanitation and medical equipment, to the Soviet Red Cross for utilization in sanitation work. Airline pilots in Germany are given a base pay depending on their years of service with the airline and the number of children in their families. En route to racetrack and exhibitions, many wild horses die of heartbreak, due to captivity, according to W. R. Adams, rodeo promoter of Oregon. Helpful Health Suggestions

EDITOR'S NOTE: Material in these articles was taken from Park's "Public Health and Hygiene" and the state department of health pamphlet "Typhoid Fever." The ineffective agent in typhoid fever is the Bacillus Typhosus, or the typhoid bacillus, which is constantly present in the intestinal ulcers made by the activity of the disease. It probably always enters the body by way of the mouth, passes to the intestines, and then invades the system. The bacillus leaves the body chiefly in the feces, less often in the urine and occasionally in other discharges. The typhoid bacillus is very small; in fact, twelve thousand placed end to end would probably measure the length of an inch. They are colorless and contain no disagreeable taste or odor. Consequently, water or milk may appear quite clean and taste sweet, yet be teeming with typhoid bacilli derived from a minute particle of human excreta. The typhoid bacillus as compared with other disease producing bacteria is easily killed. Boiling will kill any typhoid germs contained in water. Milk heated, as in pasteurization, to 145 degrees Fahrenheit, and held at that temperature for 30 minutes will be safe from live typhoid germs. (Dead typhoid germs are not harmful to the body when taken into the digestive tract, unless they are present in unreasonable quantities.) Freezing does not kill typhoid bacilli. Although the germs do not multiply outside the human body, milk affords a very good culture medium for the typhoid bacilli, when it is introduced on a small particle of infected human excreta. Under favorable temperatures the bacilli may multiply in a short time to such proportions as to afford infection sufficient to scatter over a large territory. Most typhoid epidemics are either milk-borne, or water borne. Milk-borne epidemics occur at any time of the year, and cases are found chiefly among those who are large consumers of milk, or on the track of a given milk supply, being mostly confined to those who are used to one case is apt to occur at the same time in a family. The disease shows a shorter incubation period, probably due to the greater amount of infection taken. Water-borne epidemics occur somewhat more frequently in the spring, fall or winter when the water is cold, and freshets are apt to wash infection from its sources and convey it rapidly to the consumer. They usually have a sudden onset, the number of cases rising to a peak and then declining rapidly. The pollution is usually near by indicating the direct transmission of fresh virulent infection. Other ways in which the typhoid bacillus is spread are through unpasteurized milk products, raw oysters, and other sea foods, fruits and vegetables, flies, and any objects contaminated by contact with discharges of a typhoid patient, and the healthy carrier.

The second anniversary of the Naomi class was observed Sunday, when 62 members and 12 visitors met at the class room to hear a special program. Mrs. A. E. Horst opened the meeting, reading a class history which told of the progress of the organization, its work and its aims. After a special oratory played by Mrs. O. A. Lamar, Mmes. S. M. Warren and Don Quarles sang "Pearly White City" accompanied at the piano by Miss Lydia Watson. Mr. Ned Watson played his violin obligato. Mrs. J. M. White, regular teacher, discussed the lesson topic, "The Road, Lord and the Great Commission." Also celebrating the class anniversary will be a basket picnic at Cloverdale Tuesday evening for class members and their families. All who attend are asked to meet on the west side of the court house at 6:30. Ways will be provided for all who come.

WILSON SAYS IT MUST GO!

Like a clap of thunder comes the startling news that the entire stock of Wilson Dry Goods Company, Midland, is to be placed on bargain block at unheard of prices. The Wilson Dry Goods Co., is moving to their new building two doors north of their present location. Remodeling of the entire building is fast nearing completion. The new store when completed will be one of the most modern, up to date stores in the state of Texas, modeled completely after plans furnished by the State Engineering Department of Ely and Walker Dry Goods Company, St. Louis. Mr. Wilson stated today that his present stock of clean, seasonable merchandise would be thrown out at close-out prices. He said: "We positively refuse to move this stock in bulk to our new location! All odds and ends must be cleaned up, and surpluses of standard, staple lines must be reduced—fully one half of our huge stock MUST GO! We have forgotten costs—we have thrown profits to the winds—we are going to sell the goods, and sell them QUICK!"

Only Old Songs to Be Heard at Reunion

STAMFORD—Times such as were popular at cowboy square dances in West Texas in early days will resound from a score of violins in the old fiddlers contest to be held on Tuesday, July 3, the second day of the Texas Cowboy reunion.

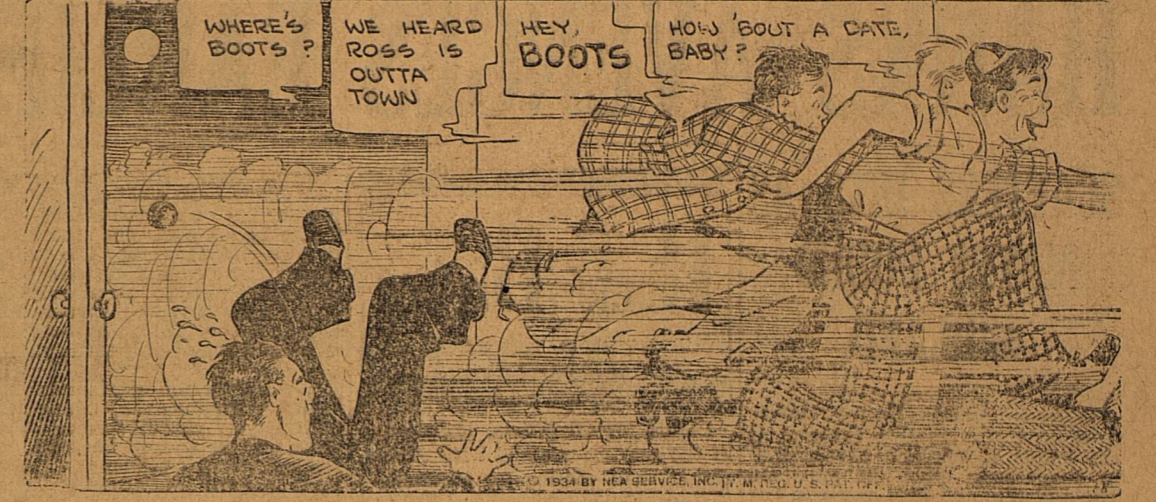

H. F. Jackson, who manages the contest for the fiddlers each year, has announced that only breakdown tunes can be used in the 1934 contest. Each contestant is allowed to select the two tunes he plays.

year and Jackson expects as many as 25 entries this year. Another feature of the Texas Cowboy reunion which revives past times of the old West is the cowboy square dance for cowhands and others which will be held each night of the reunion. These dances this year will be held in the new Pioneer Cowboys' headquarters building just erected at the reunion grounds.

HANKS AVENGES EARLIER DEFEAT, CRANE WINNING BY 16 TO 6

SCATTERS HITS AS MATES POUND MIDLAND

Crane's willow hurler, Hanks, avenged a 13-6 beating suffered at the hands of Midland here earlier in the season, when he scattered Midland hits and bore down in the pinches there Sunday and, ably supported by heavy hitting from his mates, emerged with a 16-6 win. Midland batsmen nipped the Crane hurler for plenty of hits, but were ineffective when hits meant runs. Twice Midland filled the bases before any one was out, only to see three men go down in a row once and being able on the other occasion to push across only two tallies.

In the meantime, Cramer and Heaton, Midland flingers, were having trouble with some of Bill Orchard's heavy clouters—Pipkin, Van Landingham, Blackman, and "Dutch" Baumgarten. Midland's head coach for next year) leading the parade with extra base blows. Estes, Surratt, White, Richter, Heaton and Girdley were able to hit consistently for Midland, but were not allowed to bunch their safeties.

Crane started off in the first inning with six runs and scored six more around the fifth inning.

The win made Midland and Crane stand a game each over each other in official standing, each club having a win at home. Crane, however, beat Midland in an exhibition game there, 11-5. Hanks and Park Allen pitched in the first two games for Crane, Hanks handling the Sunday affair without help.

Home Brewed

Plains for an official christening of the new grandstand here Friday, rather than waiting for McCamey's arrival Sunday, took a brisk forward step this morning with the invitation of Odessa to become the party of the second part in the transaction. It is believed by Manager Joe Pyron the natural, reinforced by the recent rather specific, rivalry between the clubs would make for large attendance. Midland recently protested a game won by Odessa here, lost the case in a local meeting of league directors, and would like nothing more than to take a decision over the Ector county club at its christening ceremony. Manager George Elliott of Odessa, who regularly treks with his club to various corners of the western and southwestern Texas map, is different about the matter, claiming Midland's protest of his admittedly ineligible players was not justified because of the rather general habit of all clubs to use ineligible.

Without going to great length in explanation, George's case was presented something like this: He said Midland had used ineligible players, therefore, he should be allowed to do the same. Sounds logical, so far. However, Manager Pyron explained that he used ineligible players in a "swap-out," only after he and McCamey's manager mutually agreed to play uncertified men in order to make the game better and to see what new men "had." Pyron told the nabobs at the court of inquiry that he protested Elliott's use of three ineligible, that Elliott used them in spite of protest. Elliott is presumed to have played the nabobs at the court of inquiry that he controlled the votes he would betake himself with his club to the farthest environs from league association if he were ruled against. And that, gentle reader, is of it in baseball strategy, depending on whether a win at table may be counted with as much value to all concerned as one win without protest in the ball park.

At any rate, you can get the idea how much of a drawing attraction the Odessa-Midland game would be if played here as an official christening of the new Midland park. Midland has some new ball players available, two of whom have been in Odessa suits until recently, White and Surratt. Moreover, there's Cramer, a flashy player who fits well into the combination. Midland avowedly is pointing for the second half, Odessa already having taken a firm hold on the bear's tail for the first time.

Manager Pyron releases some welcome news to this agency, informing he has matched games here July 5 and 4 with San Angelo. Moss

George Raft Ably Supported by Adolph Menjou In Matador Picture at the Ritz

George Raft came to the screen of the Ritz theatre yesterday in his most colorful role to date, that of a swaggering matador, in Paramount's "The Trumpet Blows," which continues its showing there today and tomorrow, unfolding a story of drama, romance and adventure below the Rio Grande.

In addition to Raft's portrayal of the Latin youth determined to gain fame in the bull ring in spite of the influences of American universities, interest attaches to Adolphe Menjou's appearances as his elder brother in the role of a retired bandit turned cattle baron, and to Frances Drake's delineation of an alluring dancer whose charms make the brothers rivals in love.

The conflict thus established, augmented by Raft's pursuit of a bull fighter's career in defiance of his brother's dictates, reaches a thrilling climax in the arena.

"The Trumpet Blows" was directed effectively by Stephen Roberts and photographed by Harry Fishbeck. The screen play was written by Bartlett Cormack.

Other Sport Scribes

BY BARTLET CORMACK
Crane County News Staff

First business of the Permian Basin league representatives, assembled in formal session at Crane on June 11, was not pleasant work. Unpleasantness came in the nature of a protested game (Midland-Odessa, June 9) the first important question tap for decision this season. Sensing a bit of oratorical fun, all clubs, for the first time in two years, were well represented including a score of onlookers when the August meeting settled down to work.

Joe Pyron, manager of the Midland club, stated his club's case briefly, politely, accurately. Based on the participation of the ineligible players (Under league rules a player must be on the bench at least one game prior to being permitted to play) for the Odessa club in a game at Midland on June 3 which Odessa won, he rightfully felt within the league rules, asked for adjustment.

W. K. Ott, Odessa spokesman, loud-voiced, even boisterous at times, admitted the ineligibility of the players in question, countered by crying that all clubs had broken the "bench" rule. (See above), cited cases of such violation, did not like the idea of becoming a goat when other clubs were also guilty, finally threatened to walk out of the league.

Midland representatives, more courteous, level-headed, stood squarely on their case as presented, made no threats, said they would take any decision sportingly.

Midland finally did not want to vote on the protest, pleaded uninterest, finally threw the job into the lap of gentleman Bill Collyns, league president.

Three-base Error!
Gentleman Collyns ducked, sidestepped, looked neither to right nor to left, chose the middle course, stared at a sheaf of papers in his hand, softly announced his decision. All present sensed the words before they were audible. All knew that gentleman Collyns was about to commit what, in baseball lingo, is known as a "three base error!"

Collyns found for the defendant Odessa; denied Midland's protest, and in hastily searching for ground on which to stand, pounced upon the evidence of other violations of the "bench" rule. That he grabbed at a straw is no secret. Everyone knew, as did gentleman Collyns, that what other clubs had done without the necessity of facing a protest, had absolutely no bearing on the problem in question.

Precedent
The decision, while it shattered no hope, set one precedent. It valiantly stamped an O. K. on all

Dramatic Power in Gable-Powell-Loy Vehicle at Yucca

Moving with dramatic power through a series of unusual situations, "Manhattan Melodrama," opened yesterday for a three day run at the Yucca theatre to take the place among the hit pictures of the year.

Clark Gable, William Powell and Myrna Loy are the stars. From the opening scene, the picture is absorbing entertainment. One of the most thrilling scenes ever filmed is the prologue which re-enacts the fire and panic aboard the extension steamer, General Slocum in New York harbor in 1904—a tragedy in which more than 1,000 were killed.

CINCINNATI (UP)—A valuation of $4,217,984 was placed on the estate left by the late Col. William Cooper Proctor, chairman of the board of the Proctor and Gamble company in a report filed in probate court here. Real estate was valued at $204,490. The balance was made up of securities, with the largest single item 73,840 shares of Proctor and Gamble stock, valued at $2,635,440.
