GOP REVOLT MAY BE HEADED BY SENATOR BORAH

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4. (UP)—A revolt from republican leadership similar to the Bull Moose movement twenty years ago appeared possible today as republican leaders stood firm against efforts of insurgent members to liberalize the party. Henry P. Fletcher, chairman of the national committee, refused to resign. Senator William E. Borah of Idaho was expected by some to take the leadership of a rump movement to attempt to wrest the party from the Hoover-Mills-Hilles group of ultra conservatives.

Variety Offered In Exhibits at The Court House

BY KATHLEEN EILAND This matter of displays is worth looking into. As usual there is an exhibit in the county library; there is now an exhibit of china, glass, and bronze in the children's room; and in addition there is a collection of interesting articles on exhibit in the tax collector's office. As is probably appropriate where men are wont to transact business, the display in the tax collector's office includes things which naturally take the eye of the stronger sex. There is, for instance, the pair of horns from Scotland (with Scotch cattle horns) which challenges the old-time Texas longhorns for supremacy in size. This particular pair measures five feet 11 inches in length (or width, as you wish to state it). A pair of beautifully-polished horns of the much-famed Texas Loughorn is also on display, with a spread of 7 feet four inches. A nine-point mule deer head from the Davis mountains looks down serenely on the tax payers. A collection of Indian and Mexican blankets is shown, including two Navaho blankets from Arizona, two from Oaxaca, Old Mexico, and from Tezoco, and a Hopi rug. One of the blankets from Old Mexico is woven with the design of the Aztec calendar stone and another shows a predominance of yellow proving that it was made by an old woman. Included in an exhibit of Mexican and Indian pottery is a curiously-wrought figure of a bird which proves that beauty as well as utility can be found in even such an ordinary thing as a cow horn. All articles exhibited are privately owned.

Grady Is Manager Lubbock Theatres

Hal B. Grady, former manager of the Yucca theatre here, has moved to Lubbock where he has been made manager of the Lindsey and Palace theatres, Griffith Amusement company houses. Grady had been transferred from here to Ada, Okla., only a few months ago, which was a substantial promotion. Upon the death of the company's general manager, C. E. Akers, manager at Lubbock, was given that position. Grady, then was transferred to the Lubbock post, one of the highest in the organization. He and his family have been there for several days. Grady's transfer to Ada was made when J. Howard Hodge, who had operated the Ritz theatre here, acquired the operation of both playhouses.

Independents to Meet at Ft. Worth

Worth next Friday and Saturday in the fifth annual convention of the Independent Petroleum Association of America. According to Wirt Franklin, president of the organization, matters to be discussed at the meeting, in addition to routine business affairs, will include suggestions for limitation of withdrawals from storage, balancing production with consumption, and the inclusion in any federal legislation which may be enacted of a provision for the authorization by congress of an interstate compact between any two or more oil producing states excluding them from federal legislation so long as they keep their total production within the combined federal allocation for the member states.

From Mayor to Governor of N. M.

By NEA Service ALBUQUERQUE, Dec. 4.—They laughed when Clyde Tingley, mayor of Albuquerque, visioned a bathing beach in the desert, a scenic drive over the city dump, a beautification program that would literally make the town an oasis in the desert. Today they stand up and applaud. And thousands of those who scoffed at his dreams remained to vote for him last month to make him the next governor of New Mexico. Today the man who for twelve years has guided the destinies of Albuquerque as its mayor, a colorful, dynamic figure, promises to do for Mexico what he has done for Albuquerque. They said it couldn't be done when he got the nomination for governor. No man had ever been elected from Albuquerque to the governor's chair. The countryside and the small towns would stand for a governor from the biggest town in the state. But the rough and ready, outspoken mayor, shook things around and today he has kissed the babies and collected an 8,000 majority of votes. In politics Clyde Tingley is the Horatio Alger character of real life. Born in a log cabin on an Ohio farm, he had little education except what he picked up in the school of hard knocks. He learned farming, then railroading, then became a machinist's apprentice, and a pioneer in the motor car game. When he left Ohio 27 years ago to come to New Mexico, he was superintendent of an automobile manufacturing company. Serves as Mayor Without Salary From New Mexico he operated farms in Ohio by remote control, entered politics at the bottom and was elected alderman in Albuquerque a few years after he arrived. Income from his investments didn't make him wealthy, but it gave him enough money to devote his entire time to his hobby—politics. And for the past several years he has devoted all his time to being mayor of Albuquerque, a job for which he doesn't receive even a dollar a year. "I got my animals stimulated him to build a road and today Albuquerque zoo ranks among the best small town zoos in the country. The city dump along the Rio Grande at the western edge of town was an eye-sore 10 or 15 years ago, but the mayor promised that some day he would make it a scenic drive. Today it is a hard surfaced road and one of the most popular drives of the city. When the Middle Rio Grande Conservancy district started his project of flood control and drainage in the Rio Grande valley the mayor visioned the possibilities of establishing an artificial lake by storing the drainage water before it emptied into the Rio Grande. Even Has Speedboat Course on Lake The lake, bathing beach and conservancy district started his project of flood control and drainage in the Rio Grande valley the mayor visioned the possibilities of establishing an artificial lake by storing the drainage water before it emptied into the Rio Grande. Outstanding Speakers on Program at Convention of Teachers at Galveston

By W. W. LACKEY At request of The Reporter-Telegram, together with similar requests from a number of friends, and as a semi-official report, especially in the interest of the young people of the city and of the faculty of the city schools, I am pleased to give a more or less brief account of my trip to Galveston and of the meeting of the Texas State Teachers' association which convened there November 29 to December 1 of last week. This account will necessarily be limited to brief mention of the places and schools visited and of the themes, the speakers, and the nature of the program of the association. With Dallas Schools The Texas State Teachers' association is composed of members from the 39,000 superintendents, principals, teachers, and supervisors of the State, and holds its annual meetings during the Thanksgiving holidays. Many school superintendents and other school officials take advantage of this opportunity to visit schools in the larger and better school systems. In superintendents from Dallas on Wednesday, spending the greater part of the day in the administration building and studying the organization of the Dallas system, and the location of the buildings of the system. The administration building of the Dallas system occupies one entire three-story block, and contains all the offices of the administrative organization, including the offices of the superintendent and his secretaries, the office of the assistant superintendent and his secretaries, the office of the business manager, the office of the direct supervision of the superintendent of schools, and the offices of the bureau of statistics, etc. While I was in the superintendent's office, some one telephoned him for permission to announce a dog-and-pony show through the schools. The permission was not granted. Two features of the Dallas system were particularly impressive. The first was the manner of making and placing blue prints of the buildings of the system. The blue prints of each piece of school property and of each school building are kept in a large and complete set of access and showing complete pictures of the various properties. The first page on each building would show a blue print of the block, from which the blue prints of the individual buildings are filed in the office of the superintendent, but not bound in book form as in the Dallas system. The second striking feature of the Dallas administration was the bureau of census and statistics. The offices for this department occupy more space than that of all the offices in all the buildings of the Midland system. (See CONVENTION, page 6)

AUSTRALIANS OFF COURSE ON FIRST LEG OCEAN TRIP

Had Expected Reach Honolulu This Morning HONOLULU, Dec. 4. (UP)—The liner President Coolidge reported this afternoon through army radio that the plane of Capt. T. P. Ulm, down at sea in an attempt to fly from Oakland, California to Honolulu, had been located 374 miles from Honolulu. The message did not indicate whether the Coolidge had picked up the men from the plane or how near the liner was to the plane. The Coolidge is about 350 miles east of Honolulu. HONOLULU, Dec. 4. (UP)—The attempt of Capt. Charles T. P. Ulm and two companions to fly from California to Honolulu ended at 11:38 a. m., Pacific Standard Time, today when their plane, lost and out of fuel, came down on the surface of the Pacific near the Hawaiian Islands. Since 9:15 a. m., army and navy planes, shore stations and commercial wireless and naval and private shipping had joined in a frantic search. Something was wrong with the plane's radio and the flyers were unable to pick up the radio beacon which had been running all night. HONOLULU, Dec. 4. (UP)—The United States coast guard cutter Itasca was ordered today to search for Captain Charles T. P. Ulm and his two companions, George McC. Littlejohn and J. Leon Skilling, Australian round the world flyers, who started their flight from their plane, lost and out of fuel, came down on the surface of the Pacific near the Hawaiian Islands. Since 9:15 a. m., army and navy planes, shore stations and commercial wireless and naval and private shipping had joined in a frantic search. Something was wrong with the plane's radio and the flyers were unable to pick up the radio beacon which had been running all night.

HAD HOPED REACH HONOLULU EARLY

BY PAUL OSBORNE Expecting to reach Honolulu sometime this morning, Capt. Charles T. P. Ulm and his two companions took off at 3:41 o'clock yesterday afternoon from the Oakland, Calif., airport on the first leg of their transpacific flight to Australia. Though nearly two tons overweight with extra gasoline loading the craft to 9,300 pounds, the Stells Australis, English Air Speed Envoy low-winged monoplane, experienced no trouble in taking off, and quickly gained altitude to circle the field and nose westward over the Pacific, according to reports. Navigation of the flight is being plotted by J. Leon Skilling with the aid of a multitude of modern devices and specially built radio equipment, while George McC. Littlejohn is co-pilot to Capt. Ulm. All three are from Australia, and it is reported that their venture is to chart a course for commercial aviation between their homeland and the Hawaiian Islands. The three intrepid fliers were grounded at the Midland airport a week ago today when high winds made it advisable not to attempt to raise the heavy ship. While here, Capt. Ulm and Navigator Skilling demonstrated their prowess at their hobbies, innerick, writing and cartooning respectively, and commented that such would be their entertainment during the long overnight flight, providing, of course, that they were not too "bussy."

MARINE TRANSPORT HERE

A marine transport plane landed at the airport today, a report as noon showed. It was flown by a machine gunner Wodarzcyk en route from Norfolk, Va., to San Diego, Calif. A Stinson 4-place cabin commercial ship which landed last week ago today when high winds made it advisable not to attempt to raise the heavy ship. While here, Capt. Ulm and Navigator Skilling demonstrated their prowess at their hobbies, innerick, writing and cartooning respectively, and commented that such would be their entertainment during the long overnight flight, providing, of course, that they were not too "bussy."

Basin Oil Developments

By PAUL OSBORNE Flowing at the rate of 240 barrels an hour or nearly 6,000 barrels per day, the Texas Company No. 1 Everett yesterday made another major addition to production in the southern part of the Cooper area in New Mexico. The Everett is a west offset to the same company's No. 1 Ogg, which established recently the theory that production will probably be continuous between the Cooper field proper and the Jal area to the south, there remaining now only a half mile of untested territory between the two. The producer was flowed open for only ten minutes, pay horizon having been capped at 3,426 feet with total depth 3,443 feet in sand and limestone. The north offset location, Amerada Petroleum Corporation No. 1 Everett topped pay at 3,429 feet with total depth at 3,453 feet, and yesterday was reaming to retest. Location of the Texas well is in the center of the southeast quarter of the northwest quarter of section 35, township 24 south, range 36 east. Another Lea county test, the Atlantic Oil Producing Company No. 1-F Texas, southeast outcrop of the Emice pool, is scheduled to test shortly. It is located on a corner of seven inch casing at 3,896 feet and drilled ahead to 3,932 feet. In the Winkler sand area, present.

AMONG "AMERICAN INSTITUTIONS"

The mayor of a large middlewestern city has announced that soapbox speakers of radical persuasion will no longer be allowed to make speeches from rostrums in a downtown park, as has been the custom in that city for many years.

Defending this action, he declares that "we must respect American institutions," and that speakers who do not respect them will not be permitted to air their views.

The chief flaw in this attitude is that one of the most sacred of all American institutions is the right of free speech. It is hard to inculcate a respect for American institutions by outlawing one of the most important of them.

There is, also, the added consideration that such action simply plays into the hands of the malcontents and gives them something to talk about.

First Tuberculosis Sanatorium for Modern Treatment Of the Disease Was Only a One-Room Cottage

ONE of the milestones of American medicine is a red, one-room cottage at Saranac Lake, N. Y. Here, in 1885 the modern treatment of tuberculosis was begun by a young New York City doctor who had cured himself of the disease. The results he obtained in treating others were so striking that a movement for the construction of sanatoria soon swept the country and today hundreds of modern institutions stand as monuments to his work.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

Here is a lot of news about fashions:

Plaid tweed is favored for golf and hunting; tailored suits with fringe; and red velvet for evening.

As to Christmas gifts, here are a few things we've snipped pertaining thereto:

Navy blue towels with red and white squarish, rather large initials, are among the special Christmas designs. White and peach are the shades most favored for face towels—and they nearly all have initials in the long, slim, lower case, sometimes covering two-thirds of the towel, sometimes embroidered, sometimes applied on the material.

Very gay is the wooden lunch-cup service with small plates, salad bowl and spoon handles painted in bright blue lacquer. Theoretically wood is the big note in luncheon dishes. As a result, much of the newest table linen has been designed for the wood set-up.

Rose organdie ones and gay little sports mats and cloths with napkins to match, done with fleecing foxes, pursuing hounds or galloping horses, go particularly well with the natural wood dishes. Another luncheon set has red and white dollies alternating, with a white napkin for the red dolly and vice versa.

Something else that's so new it's unlikely even the woman who has everything will have heard of it is the tea cloth and napkin set made to order and decorated with wood block designs from her own china service.

CHAPTER XII
Love Conquers All
WHAT HAS HAPPENED BEFORE
Despite Sonia's intercession at his trial, Danilo, by his own testimony, convicted himself of treason. Execution is imminent in Marshovia and King Achmed and Queen Dolores prepare for their exile. The King's spy announces that Sonia has gone to visit Danilo in jail. Achmed is fired with a brilliant idea. He will lock them both in the same cell and let true love take its course.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
Sonia trotted timidly down the long, gray corridors of the old jail. The Chief Jailer, well rehearsed in his role by King Achmed and Ambassador Popoff, seemed reluctant to let her pass.
"Are you a friend of the Captain, Madame?" he questioned.
"Not exactly," she answered.
"A relative?" His tone implied an official question.
"No," said Sonia shortly.
"But you knew him before."
"Yes."
"Well," observed the jailer, "you wouldn't recognize him now. He's a changed man."
They walked in silence for a few moments.
"Did you hear the story about the warden's daughter, Madame?"
Sonia's tone was anxious. "No."
"Last night," he whispered, confidentially, "the warden's daughter brought his supper personally into his cell."
"What happened?" questioned Sonia.
"Nothing," said the jailer sadly. "I tell you he's a changed man."
The jailer shook his head to himself as they continued down the corridor. Eventually they came to a cell, walled up on all sides. No bars permitted the inmate to look out upon his visitors.
The single aperture in the wall was a small peep-hole which, however, could be opened only from the outside. A narrow door gave entrance into the cell and a small revolving window in the wall next to it permitted the passing of food to the prisoner.
Sonia shivered as the jailer shoved her in. "Well, here we are!"
He unlocked the narrow door.
Inside all was gray. Sonia's eyes accustomed themselves to the dimness. A couch was the cell's only furnishing. She looked around her in surprise.
"Why, he's not here!" she exclaimed.
The jailer's tone was non-committal. "Looks that way. Well, don't worry about it. He always comes back. Make yourself comfortable."
He left her, leaving the door slightly ajar. Sonia stood in the center of the cell at a loss. Just then a little mouse ran over her foot. She screamed and leaped on the couch, which was strangely comfortable. She half sat, half reclined in fright when a woman's voice called outside the cell.
"Danilo!"
Sonia looked up in astonishment. "He isn't here," she answered.
"When do you expect him?" whispered the voice.
"I don't know." Sonia's tone was furious.
"Well, anyhow, tell him there's a big party going on in the woman's ward." Light footsteps pattered down the hall.
They died away and were followed by the heavy tread of a man. Danilo appeared in the doorway.
He stared at her in amazement. At the same moment she remembered that she was still on his couch. She arose quickly in dismay. Danilo turned on his heel and strode back up the corridor. The jailer came running, keys in hand.
"No, no, no, Captain!" he insisted. "That's your cell!"
He showed Danilo into the cell and banged the door closed, locking it securely.
Sonia looked up in embarrassment. "I'm very sorry," she offered weakly. "I was chased by a mouse."
Danilo smiled cynically. "From your estate all the way to the prison? What a mouse!"
Sonia looked at him sharply. "You don't think I came here?"
"To see me?" interrupted Danilo.
"Yes, I came to see you," she answered. "And to deliver to you one message. Tonight there is a party going on in the woman's ward. Goodbye!"
She ran to the door to open it. She pulled violently at this knob. She pushed her heels against it. Danilo joined her. For a few moments they stood silently digesting the fact that the door was locked, and from the outside.
That's the trouble with the jailer, observed Danilo—"bad service."
Sonia redoubled her efforts at the door.
Danilo came to her rescue. "Jailer!" he shouted.
"All was quiet outside the cell. Down the corridor crept a group of men: King Achmed, Ambassador Popoff, Guardsman Gabrilowitch, Secretary Zilpoff, the Chief Jailer, two violinists and an attendant carrying champagne and glasses. They peered their ears to the wall of the cell as the banging on the door continued from the inside.
"That's Marshovia," Sonia's voice rose in anger. "Prisoners go to parties and innocent people can't get out."
"You're not so innocent," observed Danilo.

"Will you love me forever?" Danilo asked. In answer, she raised her lips to meet his kiss.

there was a royal sigh of relief and with overwhelming happiness the King kissed the Ambassador on both cheeks.
Danilo and Sonia faced each other in a toast.
"To our strength," said he. "May our indifference carry us through the long hours of the night into dawn."
They sighed as they clicked their glasses.
Suddenly the little peephole in the door opened again. An atomizer was thrust through it. Perfume was sprayed lightly and dexterously into the cell. The peephole closed quickly.
Danilo and Sonia looked at each other with new resolution. Perfume, too! How stupid! How ridiculous! How, unutterably childish! How—
Their expression changed as the notes of their waltz trembled sweetly on the strings of a sighing violin.
Danilo walked to a corner of the cell to collect himself. Sonia turned away her face to the wall. The violin sang clearer, seductively clearer.
"Shall we dance?" Danilo asked softly.
Sonia gilded in his arms as the music played on. He clasped her close and kissed her. She stiffened in his embrace. He looked toward a corner of the cell.
"A mouse!" he cried and his face broke into a broad smile as Sonia, with a shriek, leaped from his arms to the couch.
In a moment Danilo was at her side. Both stared at each other, a little frightened. Their eyes grew tender. Their glance melted to one of love.
The peephole grinded open to reveal the head of the royal Archbishop. He smiled down upon them. He looked towards Danilo.
"Captain Danilo, do you take?"
Danilo seized Sonia in his arms. His voice was vibrant with love.
"Yes! Certainly!"
Sonia didn't wait for the question. She raised her lips to meet Danilo's kiss as she answered:
"Of course."
The Archbishop's voice rang through the cell:
"I herewith pronounce you man and wife."
But the lovers, lost in the rapture of their fervent embrace had already forgotten he was there.

STOCKTON PANTHERS MEET ROCK SPRINGS SATURDAY TO DECIDE SUPERIORITY OF 12-B OR 17-B

FORT STOCKTON, Dec. 4.—Fort Stockton will be the scene Saturday of an inter-sectional game which will determine the bi-district champion of Districts 17-B, represented by the Rocksprings Bulldogs, and of District 12-B represented by the Fort Stockton Panthers.
The Panthers achieved a seemingly impossible feat last week in their defeat of three powerful teams in seven days, beating Crane 19-0 on Saturday, November 24; Iran 25-7 on Tuesday; and Wink 14-7 on Saturday, December 1.

Rocksprings is not only the champion of District 17-B for this season, having defeated Eldorado, Ozona, Senora, Junction and Menard; but has not lost a game. Neither has the Bulldog goal line been crossed this entire season.
Both teams have all it takes to make the game a close one and one which will prove of interest to football fans of the entire Trans-Pecos. Fort Stockton school and city officials, as well as the Lions club and other organizations, are making plans for entertaining a mammoth crowd here Saturday.

WINNIPEG, Man. (UP)—A 65,000-year-old prehistoric monster, a relic of the days when semi-tropical waters covered most of Manitoba with their ooze, has been placed on exhibition at the museum here. It took museum workers 18 months to assemble the bones.

GAME PRESERVE PLANNED

MAUSTON, Wis. (UP)—Forty-five hundred acres of tax delinquent land in the heart of Wisconsin are to be leased to the state soon for the establishment of Wisconsin's largest game preserve. The final step in the proposal was made recently when the Juneau County Board voted approval. County boards of Jackson and Wood counties, also involved in the vast program, already had approved the measure.

efficient in any school in the south. The Midland system has for a number of years followed a plan similar to the one in the Dallas schools, which avoids duplication in enrollment and in census enumeration, but it lacks the complete permanent filing system in the census department of the Dallas schools. Incidentally might be mentioned the fact that the Dallas school officials went to Galveston Thursday morning by means of a large thirty-passenger chartered bus.

We arrived in Houston Wednesday night, and found it pouring down rain Thursday morning. Leaving Houston for Galveston via the Interurban Thursday morning, we encountered a rather unique experience. The car was crowded, and general conversation being rather free, several young teachers told where they taught. When inquiries were made about the superintendents and other school people in some of those towns, these young teachers became rather interested in who the writer was, where he was from, and when he would appear on the program. One other man told them they were talking to Lawrence Tippet, and that he would sing on the program in Galveston that night. The young interrogators were not told who the "Lawrence Tippet" was until he met them at the registration booth and in the hall of convention.

The theme of the program was "Building New Eras," and consisted of five general sessions and forty-five section meetings. Among the famous speakers on the program were: Dr. J. Frank Dobie, who was introduced as the "best known Texan out of the State"; Dr. Geo. Willard Frasier, President of Greely Teachers' college, Colorado; Dr. L. A. Woods, Texas state superintendent; Marshall R. Diggs, executive assistant to the Comptroller of the Currency at Washington; Dr. Edwin A. Lee, superintendent of schools, San Francisco; Dr. E. E. Oberholtzer, president of the N. E. A.; Douglas Malloch, author and poet; Governor elect James V. Allred of Texas; and Governor Paul V. McNutt of Indiana.

J. Frank Dobie spoke to one of the largest and most enthusiastic audiences of the convention. He asked about many Midland people personally, and mentioned the pleasant visits he had had here. His recent story in the Saturday Evening Post on "The Spanish Cow Pony," for which he received $750.00, has doubtless been read by many in Midland.

Dr. Frasier, discussing curriculum revision and those subjects of the most value, said the mother tongue would come, music second, and art third in importance. The various school exhibits from the hundred Texas schools emphasized training in these subjects. Governor elect Allred said "Uneasy lies the head that wears the crown", as he spoke of the power of the teaching profession and of his respect for the members in appearing before them. He congratulated the teachers on successfully defeating the tax-limiting amendment, and advised them to continue to fight for their rights.

The distinct feature of the program was the address of Governor McNutt of Indiana. The profound thought of his address, the literary diction of his style, and the force and grace of his masterful delivery, I have never seen or heard surpass. Two significant things about his address were: His wonderful understanding of the school system of his State for a layman, and his plea for the present generation in giving to it the best educational opportunity. When it was learned that he had once been a school man, it was easy to understand his grasp of the school system in his own state and his attitude toward the problem of educating the present generation.

Speaking of "Bargain Hunting" in education, he made two great statements: (1) "Economy consists in spending wisely rather than in not spending at all," and (2) "If sufficient funds are not obtainable for all purposes, the roads and the buildings can wait; the present generation can not wait; with the present generation it is now or never." Governor McNutt was introduced as the next presidential candidate after Roosevelt, and all who heard him were ready to vote for him when the time comes.

Special Features

Special features of the program were the musical numbers at the beginning of each general session. These consisted of: Two pianos, by Miss Wilkins and Mrs. Ross; negro chorus directed by J. W. Coleman; a thirty-minute concert by the Beaumont high school symphonic band; the men's glee club from Kingsville college; the Southwestern University choir; a violin ensemble; and "Excerpts from Elijah," by 150 trained voices and a 50-piece professional orchestra, possibly the best thing ever brought to the Texas State Teachers' association program.

Excursions

One afternoon during the convention a friend took the writer for a brief excursion of the city and outlying points of interests. We thoroughly inspected the famous sea wall, the U. S. Reservation army post for port protection, and drove out to Jean LaFite's house, and the home of his sweetheart, saw the place of his buried treasures, over $100,000.00 of which have recently been dug up, and went out to Sterling's Bayside million-dollar castle. We also visited the Jim R. million-dollar home where the entire State legislature once spent the night. These, with one ocean tanker from Tampico, over a block in length, were among the sights of interest on the brief excursion.

Barry Visited

One of the most pleasant visits of the convention was the one with former coach L. K. Barry, now of the San Antonio schools. He came over with the superintendent in a new Buick sedan which the school board there had recently given to the superintendent. Mr. Barry manifested his usual keen interest in the schools and the people of Midland, and sent his and Mrs. Barry's best wishes to their many friends here. He and Mrs. Barry are nappy in their work in San Antonio, but claimed they were not fully "weaned away" from Midland, stating that they would always love Midland, her people, and her schools. Mr. Barry has worked in the Sidney Lanier high school, largely foreign in population, where emphasis is placed on citizenship, while Mrs. Barry is teaching public speaking and auditorium work in the technical high school.

Babson's Statement

The following statement from Roger W. Babson, one of the world's greatest authorities on economics, is significant as expressing the ideals of the convention, and in placing proper emphasis on curriculum building.

"Whatever social or political systems may be tried in the future, children will always be the greatest assets. Stocks, bonds, bank accounts, insurance policies and real estate holdings may easily pass out of existence. Our children, however, will always be ours. Whatever happens to bankers, manufacturers and merchants, the efficient teacher will always be in demand. Moreover, as leisure time increases, the demand for those who can train others physically, intellectually and spiritually will rapidly increase. Even today many families are looking for such persons to come into their homes and guide their boys and girls."

"Post" Carries Haley Article on Cattle Business

"Cow Business and Monkey Business" is the title of an article by J. Everts Haley, former Midland man, in the December 1 issue of the Saturday Evening Post.

Haley son of Mr. and Mrs. John Haley here, gives in narrative form a highly illustrative story of the government's cattle buying program and of the present condition of the cattle industry.

First hand information on operation of a "small ranch" of 500 cows, such as that operated by the writer's brother, John Haley Jr., near Poyce, was given in the article. Actual photographs of condensed cattle which were shot by government buyers at the Haley ranch, were shown.

Another photograph showed the J. E. Hill herd which was moved last year from his south ranches to his Figure 2 ranch in Andrews county, was titled "Last Round-up on J. E. Hill Ranch."

Denies Gave Name To "Peddled" Wares

Father Edw. M. Harrison told The Reporter-Telegram today that it had been brought to his attention that his name had been used by a person seeking to sell merchandise, namely Irish linens and laces, here yesterday, the statement having been made to several Midland residents that he was recommending the seller.

He said that although he had been approached by the solicitor he had furnished no reference and positively was giving no recommendation. He asked Midland persons who had been approached, with his name as reference, to be assured he knew nothing of the solicitor or the wares offered for sale.

Conference of Governors Ends

PONCA CITY, Dec. 4. (AP)—The oil conference called by Governor-elect E. W. Marland adjourned today until January 3, bogged down in a maze of conflicting opinions. Two governors said "nothing was accomplished."

"It was as great a step as could be taken at present," Marland said. Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas was for federal control. James V. Allred, Texas governor-elect, said "it won't be a party to any compact designed to raise the price of oil at present."

DeMille Film Is High in Grandeur

Cecil B. DeMille, motion picture director, and master of the spectacle, has turned to the pages of history in his newest Paramount film which is entitled "Cleopatra," and which is showing at the Yucca theatre for the last time today.

With Claudette Colbert, Warren William and Henry Wilcoxon playing the principal parts, "Cleopatra" brings to the screen all the talent of this pioneer director, who has come up from the beginning of motion pictures, more than twenty years ago, with each new film topping his previous one.

That his metier is the kind of film making shown here is beyond all doubts. In every lavish, glittering, fascinating sequence, the genius of DeMille speaks out in bold, clear strokes. "Cleopatra" is indeed the finest thing he has done.

Much Sanitary Work By Relief Laborers

Relief labor has achieved a substantial record in the field of sanitary work, according to survey issued by the state office to the local relief headquarters.

Through this program there have been constructed hundreds of miles of drainage ditches, 180 miles of sewer main extensions, several hundred septic tanks and their accompanying drainage lines, hundreds of feet of storm sewers, and 50,000 pit toilets. Several municipal watersheds have been cleaned up and numerous schools have been provided with more adequate supplies of drinking water, with proper faucets and fountains.

Midland county has shared in this work, especially in the construction of sanitary pit toilets in the rural sections and outlying parts of the city. Relief officials here said that anyone interested in securing such work, with labor furnished by the welfare office, should communicate with the office on Main street.

"Bucyrus" Shovel Operators Needed Men capable of handling "Bucyrus 37-B and Northwestern shovels" are wanted by the national reemployment service, according to a letter to W. V. Bennett, legion post commander, from the United States department of labor. Information requested includes the name of such operator, his age, the type of machine he is qualified to handle and the number of years as an operator and other, also the name of last employer and date of operations. Bennett said if such machinery operators are living at Midland and need employment he will forward the information to E. A. Elliott, district manager of the reemployment service, at Abilene. Bennett said openings also were reported from the same office for elevated steel tank erectors. Such men must be thoroughly experienced to be employed, he was advised. The office also pointed out that "elevated" steel tank erecting is not to be confused with oil tank erecting.
