Eight Jurors Accepted in Ward Murder Trial at 2:30

Only eight jurors had been accepted by 2:20 this afternoon, when a 10 minute recess was declared by District Judge Charles L. Klapproth, in the case of State vs. John F. Ward, charged with murder in connection with the death by shooting of George W. Tom, Midland-Marlin ranchman, at Stanton on the morning of Feb. 3, 1934.

Taking of testimony late this afternoon was expected.

Jurors accepted were: W. V. Jones, farmer; W. R. Upham, furniture dealer; N. B. Lash, oil man; Dewey H. Pope, utilities employe; Neal Hornsby pipe line company employe; George McDonald, hotel manager and J. D. Bartlett, farmer and Robert Lytle, hardware company salesman.

Three days have been allotted for trying the case.

Defense Question Unusual Questions asked by the state and defense attorneys, in examination of veniremen, were the usual type asked in a murder trial with one exception. The defense propounded a question as to familiarity of the veniremen with a law governing an act of violence when under a false impression.

State's attorneys objected to the question as asked, in that the full law was not being quoted. The objection was sustained, after which the law in its entirety was read. The law declared that an act of violence committed because a person believed a fact to be true, when in reality the fact were not true, was excusable; but the act must be one which is excusable under the law.

G. W. Dunaway, questioning for the state, asked each venireman if he believed in the death penalty in murder cases, if conditions warranted. Joseph A. Seymour, for the defense, questioned veniremen as to acquaintance with principals in the case, also with lawyers representing, as to holding the defendant to be innocent until his guilt was established beyond reasonable doubt, and as to whether the law is charged by the court would be followed in reaching a decision.

W. V. Jones, Midland county farmer and the second venireman to be examined, was accepted as the first juror at 10:40 o'clock this morning. W. R. Upham was the second juror accepted.

Court opened at 10 o'clock. District Judge Charles L. Klapproth called the case of the state versus John F. Ward, asking District Attorney Bob Hamilton to state the nature of the case, which involved the shooting of George W. Tom, at Stanton on February 3, 1934. The case, it was explained, had been transferred to Midland on a motion for change of venue.

Names of the state and defense witnesses were called, both sides announcing ready, after which names of special veniremen and those on the regular jury panel for the week were called. Those not accepted for service in the case were instructed to report at the court room Thursday morning of this week at 9 o'clock.

MIDLAND WINS GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP IN AN UNUSUAL MATCH AT STANTON

Using only seven men, Midland Sunday afternoon won the championship of the Sand Belt Golf association by beating the shotmakers of Stanton, 21-18.

By a misunderstanding, Midland arrived on the Martin county links shy one player, but went ahead. It fell on the shoulders of Frank Johnson to play two men—and he won the low ball match against them, as well as taking his individual match!

Midland needed only two points to clinch the championship, or Big Spring could have given the locals the flag by dropping two points in their Sunday match.

COMPARE NEW DEAL WITH WAR IN COST

It is only natural that right now, almost midway through the New Deal, the people of the United States should be taking a thoughtful backward glance to see how much the surprising new things they have been doing are going to cost them.

The two-year budget for the first half of the Roosevelt administration runs to a total of approximately $16,000,000,000, of which a little more than half has gone or is going to recovery agencies.

It is a sum to stagger the imagination, no matter how used you are to big figures. No wonder people are beginning to ask, "Is it worth it?"

There are two ways of approaching the answer. One is to see just what we are getting for our money; the other is to compare this expenditure with other extraordinary expenditures in the past.

Right at this moment, the second way is quite illuminating.

Seventeen years ago this spring, the United States got into the World War. That little venture cost us $23,400,000,000. In addition, we loaned to various nations $12,000,000,000 more—most of which we will never see again.

It is impossible, then, to make an instructive little comparison.

For a war out of which we stood to gain nothing, and did gain nothing, we sent something like 35 billions down the chute. There is no way of putting a monetary value on the sorrow and suffering went along with this money, but they are desolating even to think about.

For a struggle to break loose from a depression which has wrecked homes, taken lives, destroyed hope, and caused hunger, disillusionment, and great despair, we have committed ourselves so far to spend 16 billions—a little less than half of what we put into the war.

Thirty-five billions for destruction—destruction of men's bodies and of property; half of that for construction.

Is this second sum out of line?

All of this, to be sure, does not prove that we are getting the best possible results for our money, or that these reconstruction funds are being spent in the wisest possible manner. That is a question which should and will be aired thoroughly in the congressional campaign.

But it does show that the mere fact that we are spending $16,000,000,000 to get out of the depression is not, in itself, anything to frighten us. We spent twice that much on a war that almost wrecked the world.

MORE MEN IN THE AIR

Recommendation by the Baker committee, that the United States proceed to build and maintain an army air force "second to none" and that it begin at once by acquiring 1000 new fighting planes, points us in the direction of a state of military preparedness such as we had not previously thought necessary.

It is still a little early to tell just how big a role the air force will play in any future war. Nevertheless, it does seem certain that a nation protected by a navy as large as ours, and by an army air force as powerful as the one called for by this committee, ought to be as secure from attack or invasion as any nation can be.

And there is an odd thing about this aerial defense; it can be built up and maintained without bringing with it the evils of "militarism" such as would inevitably accompany a corresponding growth in the land army.

We can have the world's premier air fleet without actually increasing the number of men under arms very substantially. If the army were being increased in proportion, the country would be over-run with men in uniform, just like pre-war Germany.

The next time we do or say anything wrong, we'll ask Secretary of State Hull to explain us out of it, as he did General Johnson.

Hix, McKee Decide Crabs Preferable To Cuban Bullets

It wasn't hard for John Hix and Roy R. McKee to make up their minds whether they'd rather gamble on the beach at Biloxi and dodge sand crabs—or go to Havana's beach and duck bullets and swipes of the machets.

Both won trips to the Biloxi convention of the Jackson Life Insurance company and the cruise to Cuba. Some salesman with a leaning towards safety submitted a question as to whether the insurance company would give the cash equivalent of the Cuban trip instead of subjecting the salesman to the pent up ire of Cubans, inflamed against Americans since the Marines took a hand in insular politics. A vote was taken.

McKee left Saturday by automobile, going by way of Homer, La., where Mrs. McKee will join him. Hix was to leave this morning by train. McKee completed his eligibility for the trip by 40 days and nights of insurance writing, Hix by steady writing throughout the year. Both wrote consecutive policies during the last 48 weeks. Hix writing at the minimum rate of two a week, and both received cash prizes as a result. Both have taken several trips with their company agents, Hix 10, McKee six.

The outbreak of malarial fever in Cuba also figured in agents' turning down the cruise. 6,000 cases having been reported last week.

COLORADO, July 30. (P)—George Mahon of Colorado late Sunday was far out in front of the field in the congressional race of the new 19th district, having a total of more than 17,000 votes to approximately 9,000 for his nearest opponent, Clark Mullican of Lubbock.

For attorney general: William McCraw 251,737; Walter Woodward 242,312.
