VENUE CHANGE IN IBB BASS TRIAL THOUGHT LIKELY

All but Four of the 100 Veniremen Dismissed

CENTERVILLE, Oct. 10. (AP)—A change of venue was expected after dismissal of all but four of the 100 veniremen in a special panel after examination for trial of Ibb Bass, charged with murder in connection with the death of Charles Salsbery in August.

Seventy additional Leon county citizens were summoned for examination. Judge W. S. Dean said he would change the venue if the jury was not obtained. Salsbery's body was found in his burned home and the state contended that he was killed after he became jealous of alleged attentions of Bass to Mrs. Salsbery.

TREE LIMB MAY BE CLEW IN CASE

HILLSBORO, Oct. 10. (AP)—The broken limb of a tree was sought today as the missing link in the chain of evidence which officers believed would solve the slaying of Walter (Money) Jones, Cleburne bondsman.

Officers found a part of a broken limb wedged in the dustpan of the engine of his car at Fort Worth. The other half still was sought in the vicinity of a cotton field where the body was found. Officers said the car was said to have been loaned to Herschel Taylor, former convict who was charged with murder in connection with the slaying.

Pecos Booms as Dam Is Started

PECOS (AP)—Start of the Red Bluff PWA project on the Pecos river, on which $2,600,000 is to be spent in the next two years, has caused the dam site to boom as to become a hive of activity. The offices now occupy seven rooms atop a main building downtown. Formerly, and prior to approval of the plan, the PWA district office used a single room. The Santa Fe railway company has completed a siding at the point of its railroad nearest the dam site at a cost of $22,000. Materials for construction are unloaded there and transported by truck two miles over a rocky road to the lonely spot on the river where the dam will be located.

The Pecos and Northwestern Telephone company at a cost of many thousands of dollars, has started a telephone line from Pecos to the dam site, to afford communication facilities.

Power line from Pecos to the dam, under contract to L. E. Myers & Co., of Dallas, officers of the dam project are employing 50 men at work. Cost of this feature is $65,000.

A large lodge and cottages for engineers, construction projects in this section has caused the Illinois Power & Explosives Co. to construct a magazine at Pecos. The magazine will store about two carloads of explosives.

Carideo said that 3.2 beer is taboo, and that every team member must be in bed at 10 o'clock at night.

ASSASSINATION IS BASIS FOR FEARS

MARSEILLES, Oct. 10. (AP)—King Alexander of Yugoslavia, dictatorial ruler of the land where the world war was ignited 20 years ago, and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou, France's champion of peace, were shot to death by a Yugoslavian assassin five minutes after the king arrived here Tuesday.

From all the capitals of Europe came concern that the spectacular slaying would upset the balance of peace on the continent, although no immediate danger of war was foreseen.

To the Balkan throne in Alexander's stead will come the 11-year-old crown prince, but upon a regency will rest the shaping of policies that may lay the makeup of the western world.

The bullets of the 35-year-old Croat assassin, political enemy of the king, blasted the king and a French general riding in the official automobile with the king and the foreign minister, and wounded 12 others before the slayer himself was killed.

The assassin, a native of Zagreb named Petrus Kalemen, was armed with a repeating pistol of the sub-machine gun type, of German make, and a small bomb which he had no chance to use.

He broke through police lines leading back huge crowds cheering the king, whose visit had been hailed as an event calculated to smooth the path of peace, and leaped to the running board of the royal machine. He sprang the body of a policeman whom he shot from out of his path. A spray of bullets came from his special gun containing two high-fire charges of ten bullets each.

In the wild scene General Joseph Georges of the French superior war council was shot in the abdomen. He was pronounced in a grave condition in a Marseilles hospital. Police Inspector Perrier, five other men and a 14-year-old boy were struck by bullets. Later it was theorized some of the shots came from the weapons of the surprised crowd.

Two men found near the assassin were arrested but officials of the ministry of the interior said they were confined in a cell. One man, acting alone, several witnesses reported they saw five or six men with the assassin, with knives and pistols, but no formal evidence of this had yet reached authorities.

"Liberty or Death"
Out of the tumult police finally tore the assassin from the clutches of a mob whose cheers had suddenly turned to cries of anguish and fear.

Kalemen's arm was found tattooed a death's head with crossbones underneath and the initials of the words, "liberty or death." A Yugoslav journalist declared the design, which was enclosed in a diamond wreath about three inches in diameter, was that of the Macedonian Communist party, which has disturbed the peace in the Balkans.

President Albert Lebrun of France was rushing here from Paris. Premier Gaston Doumergue immediately took charge of the ministry of foreign affairs held so actively by his dead colleague, Barthou.

Queen Marie of Yugoslavia, widow of the king, is on the way by train from Belgrade, and was to have met Alexander at Marseilles. As her train crossed France the news of Barthou's death was delivered, and she was shocked and stricken by shock, and became so ill that a physician had to be called. Her special train was due here at dawn.

Struck Three Times
Forty-six-year-old King Alexander was shot three times, slumping to the floor by automobile. Two bullets struck his liver, his left boulder and his left lung. He died within an hour after the first shots rang out at 10 p. m.

The national secret police announced that examination of Kalemen's passport showed it had been delivered to King Alexander by the Czechoslovakian consul at Zagreb, indicating he was of Czechoslovakian nationality and not Yugoslavian.

He was of Hungarian origin, however, since Zagreb was in Hungarian territory at the time of Kalemen's birth in 1889. The passport was signed by a Yugoslavian authority. Barthou died believing his royal guest had escaped the assassin's bullets, it was revealed by surgeons who crowded around his death bed at the hospital.

They reported he murmured faintly, "Was the king hurt?" Wishing to spare him, they informed him the king was not hit. "I am so glad," breathed Barthou. "I am happy to know I was the only one wounded in the attack."

The foreign minister might have been saved but for the fact that the assassin, in which he was taken to the hospital, became blocked in a jam of traffic and was so long in getting there that Barthou bled to death from a severed artery. Barthou was shot in the left forearm and leg. The 72-year-old diplomat died within two hours of loss of blood.

A policeman named Galli, shot by Kalemen, died three hours later. The chauffeur of the king's car was wounded by a snapper cut when a colonel struck down the assassin. Coming as the second grave political assassination in France within two years, the tragedy stirred up great emotion in France which had looked to the visit of the 45-year-old Yugoslavian monarch as a great political gesture destined eventually to cement the peace of the Balkans.

The assassinations drew this picturesque seaport into the wildest confusion. They came with such brutal suddenness that the king was

The pictures are as clear as though the medicos were standing beside the thieves to whom garages and the tracks and wandering into the north side for a trailer belonging to Joe Youngblood.

They took the north side for a cleaning Monday night. The sheriff's office continued search for the marauders.

Apparently, the only person who has seen any of the thieves is Mrs. Mary Brothers. She could give a description of the men, but she doesn't know the man she saw, however.

Some automobile owners reported as many as three wheels removed from their machines. Places visited to show the thieves to whom garages, always during night hours. They have drained several gasoline tanks.

Residents are reported to be closing their garages and keeping them tightly locked.

CROATIANS AND JUGOSLAVS ARE BEING WATCHED

11-Year-Old King to Rule Under Group of Regents

MARSEILLES, Oct. 10. (AP)—A tense political situation prevails in Europe as the body of King Alexander, assassinated with Minister Barthou, was started for home and a royal burial Saturday at Belgrade.

The widowed Queen Marie, who arrived today, will go to Paris to meet her 11-year-old son, now Peter II. Peter, who has been in school in England, will rule under a regency during his minority.

Croatians in Yugoslavia demand a share of the government and see "moral justice" in the death of Alexander for his "unfair treatment of Croats," inasmuch as their leader, Stephen Raditch paid with his life for fighting in behalf of Croats.

Troops are alert in central and southern Europe as the governments await developments. The relations of France and Yugoslavia, who have left strained relations before, are considered dangerous.

There is internal disorder in Yugoslavia. If order is not maintained there is danger of warfare. Police have failed to find co-plotters of the assassin, 40-year-old Petrus Kelemen.

SEPARATE AIR FLEETS

It looks as if the scheme for a unified air service is not going to be realized—not, at least, in the immediate future.

President Roosevelt has put his approval on the Baker board's report on army aviation, and this report disapproved the unified air corps plan. Instead, it calls for a steady building-up of the existing army air corps, with the Navy Department left to develop its air force separately.

Here is a highly technical question on which it is very hard for a civilian to form an intelligent opinion. On the face of it, the arguments for a unified air force seem very strong.

It may be that the passage of a few more years—bringing, as it will, further developments of the airplane as a military weapon—will make more clear the exact nature of the place which the flying corps will occupy in a future war.

New noiseless street cars have just been perfected. This should boost the sale of alarm clocks considerably.

SYNOPSIS: Charley Sullivan, member of the vaudeville team of Scotti, Brown and Sullivan, stranded in Atlantic City, has at last made a master stroke. He has gotten his formerly little-known partner, the dorky handsome Paul Scotti, a successful try-out with the famous "Nine o'clock Frolics" managed by Earl Craft. In order to do this, he has kidnapped Harold Seabrook, the actor slated for the job. Seabrook has brought State police to the Apollo Theatre, where the "Frolics" company is rehearsing, and is about to charge Sullivan with kidnaping, and theft of his car.

When the first policeman told Craft that he wanted Charley on two serious charges—when the second policeman and Seabrook backed him up—Charley acted as if he had been suddenly stricken with the ague. He put a shaking hand to a fevered brow and moaned. When Paul and Toby asked him what it was all about, he stuck to his plans. The nearest exit from the theatre and made up his mind he'd better go through it before his accusers discovered him.

Club Girl Writes Of Trip to State Fair of Texas

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following account of her club work has been written by a Midland county club girl who has been awarded a trip to the state fair at Dallas.

BY DOROTHY BRUNSON
I joined the 4-H club at the age of twelve years in September, 1934, and because of a natural liking for cooking, canning, gardening, sewing, I anticipated great pleasure in being a club member.

First I planned my garden for the family. Last year the garden was too large for me to irrigate and work right. So we planned a smaller garden spot. My daddy then fenced the garden with five wire feet netting to keep the chickens and turkeys out. One third of the garden was on richer soil and I have my tomato patch on it.

Every time it came a little rain the garden was plowed and about the first of April it came a good rain and the garden was once more plowed. Then it was ready for planting. I planted peas, sweet corn, beans, and the ticky wonder and wax beans, peas, radish, lettuce, and carrots, but the carrots did not come up.

It was great fun to watch the little plants grow. Each evening late I would go to the house thinking how much it would grow over night. When the little green sprouts began peeping to be seen, I gathered around the little plants to see if they were young, tender and fresh.

At the last of May, I put out the tomato plants and the potato slips and planted some peppers. I have planted some turnips and lettuce for my fall garden. I have gathered every thing of my garden except the potatoes. The peppers are big and green and the tomatoes are big and red. The potato vines are just like waves on the ocean, and we are beginning to eat the potatoes.

I thought anything that came out of the garden tasted so good. Of course it naturally would. I canned 7 quarts of squash and 9 quarts of Kentucky wonder and 5 quarts of wax beans. I canned 3 quarts of pickled peppers, 18 quarts cucumber pickles, 1-1/2 pint of green tomato pickles, and one pint of tomato juice.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND
We've always heard that the thing that is out of reach is the thing the average person wants, and that when it is made available, we immediately want something else. Here is more proof of it.

During the great American prohibition drouth, the word tea with winks meant cocktails. Now, much to the bafflement of New York restaurant keepers, since cocktails are legal, tea minus the winks means simply tea—the kind that comes from tropical lands.

Tea, without any spiking, they say is the order of the afternoon.

This seems to be a suit season—and a season for wool dresses. It has come to the point where every time we go down to look for a new silk dress, we get side-tracked on some wool dress that is just what we'd like to have, if we felt we could afford another wool in our limited wardrobe.

The tailored wool frocks shown in pretty colors and with just a sufficient touch of frivolity to relieve their severity and make them thoroughly feminine are delightful.

A cut felt beret that at a distance has the appearance of velvet has the double appeal of oddity and beauty.

Paris shows wafer-thin watches set in biscuit-sized rounds of crystal.

Another oddity in the watch idea is to have it set in wood so that the works can be seen front and back.

There's something about these cool mornings that makes us glad we're alive—even when it is twenty miles to dead line and no stories are in.

sorry I messed things up." "Think nothing of it," replied Toby, lightly. She looked behind her. "I think I see a nice, big chair in the back." She looked down at both men. "Sleep well, little kiddies," she admonished, and then disappeared into the shadows behind them. Charley longingly watched Toby fade from sight, then hitched himself over beside Paul.

"Boy—there's a gal for you!" he admitted. Paul had been thinking about Toby himself. He shot a sidelong glance at Charley, then said, enthusiastically: "She sure is." "It's the way she takes it," confessed Charley. "That makes me feel the worst. If she'd just squawk once in a while—"

Paul eyed his companion for a moment, said softly: "You've got it pretty bad, haven't you? I figured that when she first joined us. What're you planning to do about it?" Paul stared off down the road. Charley looked up at his profile, tried to guess what he was thinking.

"What do you think I'm trying to do?" he countered. "Why do you think I'm almost ready to lie, steal or commit arson? Just so I can do something about it." Paul nodded his head. Charley straightened up. He said, lightly: "Well—I've finally broken down and told all."

"There's no use talking about it," said Charley. He paused a moment, added: "I've got a hunch New York is going to be a pretty hot spot for little Charley. Those cops weren't kidding."

The truck had just rounded a curve. Slowly, above the roar of the big car came the wall of a siren. They looked down the road to see two brilliant white searchlights. Paul was on his feet first. He grabbed Charley by the shoulder, pointed toward the inner recesses of the truck, and commanded:

"Get back in there. Don't take a chance—ever! If it is an ambulance or something." Charley scrambled uncertainly to his feet, his face white and drawn.

"I've got a feeling it's for me!" he exclaimed, as he darted forward. Scotti scrambled after him as the sirens shrieked only a few yards behind. They both stumbled into Toby, who had been awakened by the noise. They faced about, peered around the edge of a divan three deep. Charley saw that there were two motorcycles and that their drivers wore uniforms.

"It's the gendarmes!" he exclaimed weakly. The motorcycles split and raced along each side of the truck. The sirens died, the policemen thumbed down their motors, and one commanded, addressing the driver:

"Hey, you—get over there!" Charley gasped with fright. "This is the end!" he moaned. "They've got me!"

Automatic brakes brought the truck to a quick stop. One policeman approached the driver while the other went to the front of the vehicle. Charley reeled to his feet. "I'll give myself up now," he said. "They won't know you're here!" Paul grabbed at him. "Stand still!" he hissed.

The two policemen got together, faced the driver. "You get a ticket this time, brother," said one. "You just rolled through a main highway intersection at forty." "What do you think this is, a racetrack?" demanded the other. Toby gasped.

"Catch me!" she ordered. "I'm going to faint!" "If you do," said Charley, "it'll be on top of me, because I'm doing it right now." "Me first," said Paul, sliding forward on his face, "and we'll faint three high." (To Be Continued)

T. & P. Has Low State Fair Rates

The Texas and Pacific Railway is offering a special week-end fare of one-cent a mile each way for the State Fair at Dallas, which, according to Frank Jensen, General Passenger Agent "is one of the lowest State Fair rates we have ever put on."

"This very low rate," Mr. Jensen said, "should be particularly attractive this year because of the race meet being held along with the fair. This is the first time races have been held at the State Fair in more than twenty years."

Such a low fare should also appeal to people who can attend the fair only on the week-end or who can spare only a day or so at the fair. Week-end Fair tickets are good in chair cars and coaches on all trains arriving in Dallas Saturdays or up to 3:30 p. m. Sundays during the Fair. Return limit to leave Dallas before midnight Sunday. Tickets are on sale at all Texas and Pacific stations in Texas.

Adolphe Menjou Comes to Yucca In 'Human Side'

With a cast of unusual merit headed by Adolphe Menjou and Doris Kenyon, featuring Charlotte Henry, famed as "Alice in Wonderland," and Betty Lawford, Hollywood's most distinguished other woman, "The Human Side," Universal's comedy drama of American family life, will be shown for the first time at the Yucca theatre today.

"The Human Side" is the story of a theatrical producer, his temperamental star and his understanding former wife and four children. Some of the most riotous scenes pictured on the screen occur between Menjou and Miss Lawford because Menjou insists on being in love with his ex-wife.

Social Problems Follow Trails of American Nomads

Written for NEA Service BY MISS LESLIE SHAW It was my first night in a large city. It was chilly—the first, night of autumn.

I came into a huge room crowded with men and boys. Some sitting on long backless wooden benches, some in huddled groups over a coal stove, and others huddled about a table and they kept their coat collars turned up. Black faces smudged with coal dust. Tired blood-shot eyes and heavy faces, with failure written in every line.

A clerk came up to me hurriedly. "The man at the intake desk would like to see you. We're short of beds and work last night. We'll have to make arrangements with another lodging house. Last night they slept on the floor here in the office."

Sleep in Dormitories In the main shelter. A large apartment building remodeled into a three-story arrangement. A huge open hall on the first floor. When men and boys milled about aimlessly. The smell of hot cakes, and coffee permeating the atmosphere. Just off the hall was the dining room, where men bent eagerly over steaming plates.

A clinic for the men with sore feet, with blisters and cuts. A young medical assistant in a spotless white uniform bent over a blistered foot, applicator in hand. The young "Doc" was by all odds the favorite. He didn't ply them with questions, he cared for their aches and pains, and acted interested in them.

The men streamed in. The beds were soon all occupied. I was making last hour arrangements for more beds. Sharp bargaining. Twenty-five cents the limit. By one o'clock in the morning, the men were all sent out to some shelter or other.

Next morning, interviewing a group of young boys. "Where did you spend last night?" "In a hay stack." "On a freight." "Sitting up in a restaurant."

Tired But Interested You knew they were physically tired and yet they were alive, interested. Assigning them to a canteen worker, and the process of trying to get them stabilized, back home, or back to their communities.

Runaway boys with carefully elaborated stories. One boy of 18 with a remarkable vocabulary told me that he was associated with the Smithsonian Institute, that he had recently returned from Egypt search in California. He had been in an airplane crash from an altitude of 15,000 feet two days before but was unharmed. He had been contributing to the Institute for ten years, and had only recently found a mummy in the Siuslaw National Valley. I telephoned a psychiatrist.

In they streamed, day after day. More than half of them left before we could get in touch with their relatives or communities. Later on, transient camps were established in some parts of the country, with the result that a large number of men without families were for the time being stabilized.

The outcome of the relief program for transients is an open question. On June 15 of this year there were in federal shelters 155,000 individuals, not quite 3000 of whom were women.

To Study Brown Stain on Teeth

AMARILLO (AP) — Congressman Marvin Jones has reported from Washington that a public health service expert probably will be sent to the Panhandle to study the widely prevalent brown tooth stain in the section.

Jones said the move will be started within a short time if plans of Surgeon General Hugh S. Cummings materialize. A report from Washington said General Cummings has requested an allocation of money from a special fund to defray expense of the investigation and that it is hoped that the request will be approved within at least two weeks.

Studies of the tooth stain situation have been conducted in the Panhandle region, one of the largest areas suffering with the strange mottling of tooth enamel of children.

Mexican Imports In the Ascendency

LAREDO (AP)—Import duties on Mexican goods during September exceeded receipts for any month since establishment of the United States customs service here 70 years ago.

September import duties collected at the Laredo customs house showed an increase of more than 1,000 per cent over duties for September, 1933.

Adolph R. Kahn, deputy collector of customs, said import duties totaling approximately $125,000 were paid into the customs house during September, as compared with $12,172 in the same month of last year.

Customs officials said it was probable that customs receipts here were greater than at all other ports of entry on the Texas-Mexico border combined. Laredo is a border terminal of one of the few railroad lines penetrating deep into the Southern Republic.

Hundreds of carloads of bran, cottonseed meal, bran and bananas contributed to the duties collected. Mexican mining companies also shipped considerable lead into the United States but this commodity entered under bond and the duty
