

WILHELM STOLL IS CAPTURED

Stoll's Father Was Planned for Victim, Note Reveals

ABDUCTORS WENT TO WRONG HOUSE, USED ADVANTAGE

Note Threatened Mr. Stoll Would Be Murdered

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 15. (UP)—The United Press learned previously undisclosed excerpts from the letter demanding $50,000 ransom for the release of Mrs. Alice Stoll.

The letter spoke only to Mr. Stoll, father of Berry, the husband, indicating that Mrs. Stoll was not planned as the victim but was taken when the abductor went to the wrong house by mistake.

The letter warned that if the ransom was not paid "Mr. Stoll will be killed and his body will be burned, dissolved in sulphuric acid and thrown in the river."

The family of the victim is anxiously awaiting word from the kidnaper.

The fifth day ends this afternoon.

A gigantic man-hunt is ready to start if no word is forthcoming. Friends believe the woman is probably dead.

PLANE USED TO SPUR HUNT

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 15. (AP)—An army airplane circled vainly over the highways leading out of Louisville Sunday on the desperate chance a vivid tale that a truck driver had recognized Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll, apparently bound, gagged and with eyes taped, might be the clew long sought to the kidnapped woman's fate.

The driver, James E. Scales, 26, said his truck collided about dawn with an automobile on the Shelbyville road containing a man and a woman. The man, Scales said, leaped out, pistol in one hand and flashlight in the other, and forced him to drive on.

Scales, a plasterer, said he had helped construct the Stoll home some five years ago and had seen Mrs. Stoll there. The woman in the car, he said, seemed trying to push open its door with her shoulder.

Improbable as the account might seem, members of the family wasted no time in running it down. William Stoll, brother of the woman's husband, raced to the scene and heard the truck driver's story. The airplane, Capt. William E. Welsh in command, rose shortly afterward and scanned the sky for a vain.

Radio Station WHAS here opened its program an hour late in order that its sending might not interfere with any radio message the plane might send. County police blocked the highways, but the mysterious car had vanished, and apparently another "clew" had proved a mere shadow.

The assurance of Berry V. Stoll, broadcast to the kidnaper, that no attempt was being made to grab him, and his plea the victim be released in a safe, warm place, remained unanswered. Stoll already had announced the $50,000 ransom had been paid as directed by the lone man who snatched the young matron from her home Wednesday afternoon.

The finding of what appeared to be bloodstains on an Ohio river boatnose pier and a mysteriously torn telephone book there remained unsolved. Department of justice agents said the fingerprints would be sent to Washington for comparison as a matter of routine. They declined to express any opinion as to the value of the clew.

Search almost foot by foot of the woods and brush in the entire area around the 16-acre Stoll estate went on and rivers and creeks were dragged, but no tangible clew resulted, as far as was known.

A theory advanced earlier by investigators was revived as time passed without news from Mrs. Stoll. This was that the crime was not a kidnaping for ransom primarily, but was an act of vengeance.

Four new rotating beacon lights on the Galveston-Waco airway have been turned on and it is expected that all beacon lights on this new airway which is being constructed by the bureau of air commerce, department of commerce, with public works administration funds will be in operation by the end of October it was announced today.

The lights now operating, which are of the 24-inch rotating type with two course lights each, are located at the following places: 6 miles east of Wellborn; 4 miles north of Bryan; 1 mile northeast of Highbank; and 2 miles northwest of Guda. The remaining beacons yet to be turned on, are located at Lemarque, League City, Satsuma, Hockley, Whitehall, Navasota, Hearne and Hammond.

Lighted intermediate landing fields are being established at Navasota and Hammond. It is expected that these fields will be ready for use within the next three months.

Ransom Paid but Abductors Are Silent

Sobbing her story to a reporter, Mrs. Fowler Willet, 24, maid in the Berry V. Stoll home in Louisville, Ky., is shown here after the kidnapping of her mistress, Mrs. Alice Helen Stoll. Mrs. Willet said a man "who acted like a fiend" beat Mrs. Stoll before dragging her from the house, after forcing the maid to tie her hands. Then he bound and gagged the maid and fled, according to her story, leaving a ransom note on a bed in an upstairs room.

Let the tourist be warned. If he goes to Dubrovnik, he may not want to come away—ever. He will become a lonesome and dream and dream the hours away in the hot sunshine.

He will sit on a balcony from which a marvelous picture will spread before him. Above, a deep blue sky. In the distance beyond matching turquoise blue, the milky waters of the calm Adriatic sea. At his back the tall Dalmatian mountains, up whose slopes the misty town picturesquely creeps.

Below him the ancient town with its walls, towers and forts. His lungs will breathe an insidious air, enlivened by the sea breeze from the mountains, the heady scent of pines, firs, cypress and flowering oleanders.

Only the Bora Is Evil
He will dine in a semi-tropic garden under the rustling leaves of tall palm trees. Only one thing will ever break him from his idle lethargy—the Bora.

The natives curse it with reason. It is the keen cold wind that sometimes comes raging and tearing from the mountain tops.

From this ancient Dalmatian coast town it is possible to take two excursions which are bound to surprise even the most blasé traveler—one to the island of deep silence, the other to the miniature town of shell.

Linked With Famed Names
Just a half mile out of the harbor of Dubrovnik lies the little island of Lokrum. It stands out in the blue Adriatic like an emerald of deep green hue. Two famous names are connected with it.

Centuries ago, when Richard Coeur de Lion, king of England, after his victorious crusade against the Moslems, suddenly started home to quell rebellion in his own kingdom, he was wrecked in the Adriatic and had a narrow escape from drowning.

Jugoslavia, Where War Threat Hangs Heavy, Is Land of Surpassing Beauty

By MILTON BRONNER
NEA Service European Manager

LONDON, Oct. 15.—Beneath the surface run ugly currents of ancient hatreds, but to the traveler who reckons not of this, Jugoslavia is a land of charm.

He notes little of the bitterness seething among minorities which cry of Serp oppression as he goes from beauty spot to beauty spot in that country so favored by nature, now threatened by rebellion following the assassination of King Alexander I.

The traveler has missed much who never has seen Dubrovnik, that ancient town far down on the Dalmatian coast. It is known in history as Ragusa, but has been rechristened since Dalmatia passed from Austrian sway to that of Jugoslavia.

Seen from the sea, it looks like a Mediterranean Italian town, but the bulk of the population is pure Slav.

It dates back to the seventh century. There was a time when it called itself republic and was a sort of Dalmatian Venice—without the canals. It traded with the east. It sent its ships all over the Adriatic and the Mediterranean.

They Still Are Ragusans
Even to this day the people do not call themselves Dalmatians. They are Ragusans.

The old city is one of the most perfect walled towns in Europe. Within those walls and towers, where every inch of soil was precious, the Ragusans built their houses close together, huddled around their churches.

The narrow streets—too narrow for passage of any vehicle—give coolness in the hot summer season and protection from the icy winds and rains in the winter.

The newest houses in the old town are about 250 years old. Some date back 500 years. But Ragusa has outgrown the walled city. There is a newer town outside the walls, not half so picturesque or charming.

Charm Sinks Deep
Let the tourist be warned. If he goes to Dubrovnik, he may not want to come away—ever. He will become a lonesome and dream and dream the hours away in the hot sunshine.

3 JAILED AFTER NEGRO IS SHOT

Three negroes, including the Rev. Baptist, are behind the bars following their asserted ventilation of another negro with pistol lead some time during the night.

All principals were from Odessa. The victim was returned to Ector county this morning and is not expected to survive.

The Rev. Baptist explained to officers he was at the dance where the sniping took place, but that he was present in the capacity of a lodge brother.

Several pistols, ranging in size from a .45 to a .22, were found by officers.

Adjournment Is Voted Down Today

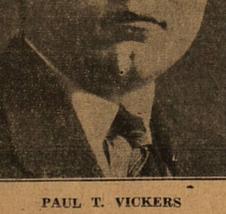

AUSTIN, Oct. 15. (UP)—The senate voted today a resolution for sine die adjournment of the legislature for Thursday noon, Oct. 25, after a bitter fight.

The vote was 10 for and 13 against.

George Purl of Dallas offered a bill to appropriate $8,972,174 for the 1936 Texas Centennial. The proposal, offered in a house resolution, would postpone the Centennial until a more propitious time. It was referred to the state affairs committee. The author, J. W. Hunt Jr., Dike, recited the state fund deficit, decreased property valuation, the relief burden and the need for economy.

Al Capone Loses Last Liberty Plea

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15. (UP)—Al Capone lost probably his last plea for liberty from the federal penitentiary, where he is serving life in the No. 3 McCarley, another Andrews county wildcat located in section 29, block 3, public school land survey. At last reports it was drilling below 2185 feet in salt.

Winkler county's new discovery, the Sayre No. 1 Howe, is shut down at 2875 feet waiting on orders. It is expected that the well will be drilled deeper in search of additional pay. The 24-hour gauge on the well showed a flow of 564 barrels, coming from around 2875 feet. The Sayre strike is in section 12, block 26, public school land survey.

A show of oil from somewhere near the total depth of 4108 feet, was reported in the Landreth No. 1 Scharbauer, interesting Ector county test in section 20, block 44, township 1 north, E. & P. survey. The well, which has been drilling with a hole full of water used to kill gas, is at present shut down and will run 5 1/2-16 inch pipe.

Julia Ann Aycock of the Skelly office has returned from Fort Worth.

Health Robinson and "Cub" Wheeler, consulting geologists of Dallas who have been in town for the past several days, are leaving today.

O. F. Hedrick of Thurber, geologist for the Texas Pacific Coal & Oil company, is being transferred to the Midland office.

R. L. Cannon, consulting geologist of San Angelo, is in town.

4-Weeks Revival Concluded Here

The four-weeks-old revival conducted by the Rev. B. B. Grimm was terminated Sunday night, the evangelist turned loose his "last wampus cat," and the big tent and the revival troupe were to leave today for Iran.

Many were added to Midland churches during the meeting.

54,835 PASSENGERS

Scheduled air lines operating in continental United States carried 54,835 passengers in August, 1934, according to reports to the bureau of air commerce, department of commerce, from 23 of the 24 airlines operating during that month.

Those scheduled air lines flew 4,188,529 miles, carried 190,440 pounds of express, and flew 21,357,741 passenger miles during July. (A passenger mile is the equivalent of one passenger flown one mile.)

HONOLULU TEST GETS OIL SHOW

BY F. D. GARDNER
In drilling to 4627 feet in line, Honolulu's No. 1 Parker, the most advanced wildcat test in Andrews county, encountered an unestimated showing of oil. The bailer was only run twice, so the amount of oil in the hole was not known. The hole was being reamed out Sunday and this morning in preparation for running 7 inch o. d. pipe to 4600 feet. About 50 sacks of cement are expected to be used. The Parker test is in section 7, block A-44, public school land survey.

Anhydrite was topped at 2120 feet and top of salt was at 2150 feet in the Bond et al. No. 1 McCarty, another Andrews county wildcat located in section 29, block 3, public school land survey. At last reports it was drilling below 2185 feet in salt.

GERMAN BISHOP MEISER RELEASED

MUNICH, Oct. 15. (UP)—Bishop Hans Meiser, storm center of the Bavarian controversy within the German Christian church, was released from police detention in the Episcopal palace.

The fight against the nazification of the church and resentment against the detention of Meiser grew to a high pitch yesterday when a proclamation was read in the church in which Meiser and his counselors refused to surrender their offices.

Bishop refused to intervene in the bitter fight.

ADMITTS BURNING OF CHILD'S BODY

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Oct. 15. (UP)—Lawrence Stone, 24, signed a confession he killed 5-year-old Nancy Jean Costigan in the basement of a fashionable apartment house.

He stuffed the body of the child in a white-hot furnace. The body, found Sunday, was reduced to charred bones and would have been consumed entirely if the discovery had been delayed five minutes.

Stone, after nine hours of questioning, said they had been playing with a rubber ball in the basement. The ball, he said, struck her head, knocking her to the concrete floor. She hurt her head in the fall and he said he failed to detect evidence of life. Panic-stricken, he carried the body around several minutes before thinking of the furnace, he told police.

POLICE FIND HIM IN FOREST WHERE HE ELUDED GUARD

Believed One of the Chief Conspirators In King's Death

PONTAINBLAU, France, Oct. 15. (UP)—Sylvester May, regarded as one of the chief conspirators in the assassination of King Alexander of Yugoslavia, was arrested today near Fontainblau forest.

He escaped into the forest last week when he eluded police who stopped him to examine his papers.

DEATH FOR TERROR GANG FORSEEN

PARIS, Oct. 15. (UP)—Sentences of death appeared to be the unavoidable fate of two confessed members of the Balkan terror band, the Ustashi, three of whose members, including a beautiful "gun girl" are sought by police of eight countries for complicity in the slayings of King Alexander and Foreign Minister Louis Barthou.

Ivan Rajlich and Zvonimir Pospesich, who police said confessed a share in the plotting against royalty, were held in jail at Anney. French authorities were pushing steps to bring them to trial for complicity in Alexander's assassination.

An investigating magistrate at Marseille conferred with the local state prosecuting attorney where the prisoners are held and drew up warrants charging them with complicity in the crime. These are to be sent to Anney.

Authorities were proceeding with caution since it is admittedly difficult under French law to prove complicity, especially in this case as both men apparently were far from the scene when the assassinations were committed.

Six in Band, Belief
Pospesich will be executed in any case, authorities believed, since he was under sentence of death in Jugoslavia for killing a newspaper editor and two policemen. His extradition was considered a simple matter. It was doubted if Rajlich would come under the extradition treaty.

Police now believe there were five men and one woman in the terrorist band that crossed Europe to kill Alexander. These were the dead Petrus Kalemek, or Kalemek, who accomplished the assassination; the two prisoners at Anney, a man named Malney or Chalney, who escaped from Fontainblau police and fled into the forest; Eggon Krahan, or Krahanik, who is believed to be the mysterious "doctor" who gave the band instructions at Lusanne, and the tall, pretty 24-year-old "gun girl" who registered at various hotels as Marie Vjoudrcha, a Czechoslovakian.

Traced down through minute clues obtained at the scene of the assassination, those in custody told an amazing story of intrigue.

The man spoken of as the "doctor" was believed to have been in charge of the gang's operations in France.

Fair Under Strict Guard
Pospesich and Rajlich, their examinations by police completed at Annemasse, were held under strict guard. Men were constantly on duty at their cells to prevent any attempt at suicide. Relays of gendarmes patrolled the prison yard.

Numerous suspects were being picked up throughout France. Most of them were vagabonds who had no connection with the crime. National police were overlooking no chances, however, to get their hands on the rest of the gang.

The Hungarian legation at Paris issued a denial the band had come from "Jankapuszta," the Croat refuge camp, declaring this was broken up last April. It was here that Pospesich and Rajlich told police members of the band were trained in the use of pistols, bombs and machine guns.

The foreigners were arrested at (See SYLVESTER, page 4)

Four Take Part On Naomi Class Program

"The Christian and His Bible" was the subject of the lesson taught by Mrs. J. M. White to the Naomi class Sunday morning.

Mrs. White was assisted by Mrs. A. E. Horst who read the scripture selection and Mrs. B. T. Westerman who read the devotional.

Mrs. O. A. Lamar played the offertory.

The Naomi class will hold a business meeting at 7:30 tonight at the home of Mrs. E. A. Hoffman, 713 W. Kansas.

That old idea of finding the pot of gold at the foot of the rainbow or getting money without working for it, still has an appeal to Midland people, judging by the crowd that packed the interior and clustered about the exterior of a store the other night when numbers were being drawn for a sum of money to be given away.

People who go into ecstasies over the colors and beauty of spring should take a drive along the road of Midland county one of these fall days. The blue haze along far horizons, the yellow and gold of the fields and pastures, and the whole spirit of tranquil content over the scene is as beautiful as spring is, though in a different way and with a different appeal to the senses.

Romantic love stories undoubtedly have their appeal for film fans, but it is a play centering about a child that makes them sit up and reach for a handkerchief with no apologies. Such a play has the real universal appeal.

We notice that a police radio has been introduced in New York that is worn on a special belt and weighs just under 4 pounds, less than the policeman's revolver.

Another example of being little but loud, we suppose.

FINAL DEFEAT OF A DISEASE

News that scientists of the Pasteur Institute have at last perfected a vaccine for yellow fever brings one of the most heroic and inspiring chapters in the history of medicine nearer to its conclusion.

The fight to wipe out this great plague has enlisted some of the finest brains in medicine, and some of the bravest spirits. From Reed to Noguchi, the work has been in the hands of men who did not hesitate to risk their own lives; and it has been carried forward with an intellectual skill and a patience that are nothing less than amazing.

It is fitting, too, that two American scientists—Drs. Andrew Watson Sellards and Hans Theiler, both of the Harvard Medical School—should have played prominent parts in development of the new vaccine.

It was Americans who struck the first great blow in the fight against yellow fever. It is good to learn that Americans, also, were in on the last campaign of the war.

"Wake up and Dream"

From screenplay by John Meehan Jr.

SYNOPSIS: Love is beginning to become a potential factor in the affairs of the erstwhile vaudeville trio of Scotti, Brown and Sullivan as they travel by bus from New York to Hollywood to take a fling in the movies. With Luigi Cellini, Paul Scotti's foster-father, Paul, dark and handsome singer, is in love with beautiful Toby Brown, his partner, and she is in love with him, although neither will admit it, because the third partner, Charley Sullivan, loves Toby and thinks she loves him. Charley is responsible for the transcontinental bus ride, because he believes that a kidnapping charge has been lodged against him after he has discharged a leading man to get Scotti a job in a show at Atlantic City. The bus has just reached Santa Fe.

Chapter IX

If life is a matter of chance, the bulky, tall, egg-headed man with the voice like a gravel mixer and the face of a child was born with the percentage all against him. A passenger on the bus—companion to the wearily made up woman in the black hat and attracted by the attention of Charley, Scotti and Toby in no uncertain way. Charley, being nearly broke, was particularly interested in the woman in black had plenty of money and he, willing to gamble on anything, wanted to meet her and turn his personality loose on her.

He figured that the best way to make her acquaintance was through the odd specimen who was her companion. So, when the bus stopped in front of the combination hotel, lunch room and waiting room at Santa Fe, he asked Paul to accompany him in explaining his purpose. They deliberately followed the man into the waiting room.

This was a neat, clean place with comfortable chairs, card tables and a piano. The room was filled with passengers. Indians, trying to sell their baskets and pottery, were about. The egg-headed man, completely ignoring anyone who happened to be in his way, made a mad dash for the cigar and news stand, which also was well stocked with liquor. He leaned over the counter and pointed to a bottle of gin. The clerk turned around, picked up the bottle and faced the counter with it.

"Seventy-nine cents," said the clerk.

"Say—it was only seventy-one at the last stop," the man protested, his voice scraping ludicrously. "Do you want it or not?" snapped the clerk.

"Yes—hurry!" pleaded the man, his manner changing instantly. He tossed the dollar bill his unusual companion had given him onto the counter and snatched the bottle before the clerk could wrap it. The clerk gave him his change just as Paul and Charley came up beside him.

"Pack of cigarettes," said Paul to the clerk as Charley, with an ingratiating smile on his face turned to the man and said:

"Hello, there!"

"Hello," replied the man, hesitatingly.

"Buying a little comfort for the trip?" Paul asked him pleasantly. "I don't blame you. It gets pretty dull."

"Er—yes!" fumbled the man, his voice cracking.

"We saw you on the bus," pursued Charley as Scotti picked up his cigarettes and change.

"Yeah—I saw you, too," said other thing altogether. It illustrates one of Jugo-Slavia's problems.

Not only is the nation's politics dominated by provincial ambitions, not only do the Croats and the Slovenians feel themselves somewhat different from the old Serbs--but religious feelings also divide the population.

About 40 per cent of the people are Roman Catholics. They live mainly in the former Austro-Hungarian provinces of Slovenia, Croatia and Dalmatia. About 45 per cent are Greek Orthodox and live mainly in old Serbia and the Banat.

About 10 per cent are Moslems and live mainly in Herzegovina and Bosnia. They call themselves "Turks," but there is nothing Turkish about them. They are Moslems of pure Jugo-Slav blood.

More than 500 years ago, when the Turks conquered all this part of the country, many of the peasants as well as the noblemen became Moslems. They wanted to keep their property and their privileges. But in time they became rose and the little man stepped back. Charley managed to stamp on his toes as they passed, their coffee and doughnuts forgotten. Once outside the place, Charley told them what he had done.

"It was a cinch," he concluded. "I just played I was only two feet off the floor."

Paul stopped walking. So did Toby and Charley.

"A cinch, eh?" asked Paul. "So that's how you got the money for the trip. I don't know whether to kiss you, or slug you."

Charley looked down, embarrassed, as Paul eyed him wonderingly, admiringly. Toby looked at Charley with tears in her eyes. Impulsively she threw her arms around his neck.

"Oh, Charley darling!" she exclaimed. "You might have been killed!"

He put his arms about her, grinned happily over her head at Paul.

"What do I care?" he asked, happily. "I'm being paid with interest right this minute."

Paul returned Charley's glance, gave him an affectionate, once-over, then he turned his head from Charley to the back of Toby's head. His grin faded and he turned his head away.

faithful Moslems and are so to this day.

A Touch of the Orient
A 25-mile auto ride through horsehoe passes in the Dalmatian mountains from Dubrovnik takes one to the town of Trebinje. There one is suddenly in the real Orient.

In Trebinje the Jugo-Slav Moslems wear the fez and the women go about with faces covered with black cloth. The streets are eastern, save that there are no camels. But there are dozens of heavily laden asses.

The shops, as in the Stamboul section of Istanbul, are little noles in the wall where Moslems are busy hammering out brass pans or cutting crude leather for the soft, tough Bosnian shoes and slippers.

In the market place the peasant women, who are Christians, display their fruits and vegetables. They all wear the quaint little Herzegovinian white caps, which look like monkey caps on a woman from the west, but are very becoming to the natives.

Muezzins Still Din
In front of the inns, regardless of the noise and the files, grave men swear the fez at table sipping Turkish coffee and talking about nothing in particular.

There is plenty of noise until a bell clangs out the noon hour. Then the muezzins mount to the five minarets of the five Moslem mosques and chant the ritual cry served in every Moslem town for the world over.

For a short time a refreshing silence falls upon Trebinje. Training ceases. Nobody calls his wares. Nobody shouts at a laden ass. The Moslems are on their knees in the mosques, faces turned toward Mecca, intoning their immemorial prayers to Allah.

Will Texas Schools Suffer Revenue Cut in Future?

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is in answer to an editorial which appeared recently in a large state daily in an effort to improve the content of that public school education is under-financed in Texas. The reply was written by the Midland schoolman at the request of the editor of the Texas Outlook, educational magazine.

BY J. H. WILLIAMS

Much has been written recently to prove or disprove the contention that public education in Texas is under-financed. An editorial which appeared recently in a well known daily newspaper indicated very clearly that the public schools and the higher educational institutions of the state are not as meagerly financed as school men would have you believe.

It was pointed out that in Texas the state provides a greater per cent of the revenue used in her schools than is furnished by any other state save one, Delaware. Educators were told that in the last five years Texas has increased her teaching force 67 per cent and her teachers' salaries 126 per cent, while enrollment has increased, during the same period, only 25 per cent.

Attention was called to the fact that the value of the property of colleges and universities in Texas exceeds that of any other state. It was stated that the tax payers of Texas should be complimented for their liberal payment to public education instead of being abused on the pretense that they are providing insufficient revenue to operate an efficient school system.

School men will be inclined to accept these facts without question, but without proper explanations.

State School Revenue
It is true that the state government of Texas provides approximately 45 per cent of the revenue used to maintain the public school system, and at the present this proportion of state support is exceeded by very few states. The accusation that the state is providing insufficient revenue is being provided for the public schools lies not in the fact that the state is furnishing too small a per cent of the school revenue, but in the fact that the state revenue plus the local revenue is insufficient. There is only one scientific way to measure the adequacy of school revenue and that is in terms of the actual number of dollars provided for each child who presents himself for instruction. It matters not whether the state furnishes a small or large per cent of the revenue. It is the total revenue provided, and not the state and local proportion, that indicates adequacy or inadequacy.

According to recent figures thirty-seven states spend more money per student each year than does Texas. Thirteen states provide at least twice the revenue per student that is provided in Texas. This means that the exact place of Texas, as to money spent for public education, is thirty-eight among the forty-eight states.

The Teaching Force
The fact that the teaching force in the Texas public schools has increased 67 per cent while enrollment has increased only 25 per cent can be explained by recent additions to the curriculum. Students are now offered a greater variety of subjects than was offered five years ago. The larger the curriculum the greater is the number of required teachers. There has been much criticism to increasing the curriculum, but if 90 per cent of the states see fit to provide large curriculums to fit the growing needs of the day, why should Texas not do as much for its citizens of tomorrow? It must be remembered that in spite of our increased curriculum a majority of the states is offering at the present time a larger curriculum than is offered in Texas.

Increased Salary Expense
A 126 per cent increase in salary expense is explained largely by a 67 per cent increase in the teaching force. It should be borne in mind that it costs more to provide instruction in courses which have been added to the curriculum in recent years as most of the newer courses are of a specialized nature and require teachers with special training. Such teachers are not very numerous and must be paid higher salaries than teachers of the regular work. When the salary item is actually investigated in representative schools it becomes evident that most teachers have not received substantial salary increases. This means that the increased service to the public and not for salary increases in the teaching staff.

Colleges and Universities
It is only natural that the property of Texas' colleges and universities should exceed that of most states. Texas is the largest state in the union and has many institutions of higher learning. Most college and university property in Texas consists of land given by the state when land was of little value. This gift would not have been possible had not the federal government allowed Texas to keep her public land. The federal government allowed this privilege to no other state. As a result Texas has much land to sponsor public enterprises while other states were limited in this respect.

The Tax Payer
School men of Texas not only compliment the tax payers who support public education but feel that the average tax payer is doing more than his share. The trouble lies in the fact that too many Texas citizens are not paying any taxes at all. In the name of justice the general property tax should be lowered and more intangible property should be taxed. If properly worked out, more revenue could be produced by this method than has been produced in the past and those tax payers who have borne the burden so long would be given relief. There is no question to the fact that the Texas schools are badly in need of additional revenue. Texas certainly stands near the bottom of the list of states in educational efficiency. The schools or any other public agency cannot expect much greater support than is being given at the present time until the Texas system of taxation is changed in such way as to tap new sources of revenue and thereby increase the amount of revenue. This would

Relief Goes About Caring for Poor

AUSTIN (AP)—Despite legislative re-organization of the Texas relief setup, the practical business of providing food and clothing for the state's needy is going right ahead.

The Texas Relief commission of nine members was abolished by the legislature, meeting recently in special session, and the board of control was made administrator of relief.

However, for the time being, the employees who get the work done have not felt effects of the shake-up and the state-wide organization continues to function normally.

With the advent of fall rains, 1-200 acres of gardens will be planted and the produce will be distributed to relief clients immediately or will be canned for use this winter.

Arrangements have been made for obtaining thousands of warm comforters and mattresses and for maintaining wood yards in counties where wood is available.

Workers in 165 sewing rooms of all counties at present are turning out clothing in great volume to make thousands of youngsters pressable for school.

Community gardens will be located in Dallas, Tarrant, Childress, Galveston, Brazos, Falls, Fannin, Fayette, Harrison, Hemphill, Houston, Jefferson, Kendall, Lampasas, Morris, Panola, Presidio, Red River, Refugio, Roberts, Rockwall, Shackelford, Shelby, Smith, Tom Green, Wilbarger, Wilson and Travis counties.

The principal products will be beans, peas, spinach, turnips, and okra, according to the soil. They will be charged against budgets of the relief clients, not distributed free.

The sewing rooms were put to work making clothing for children after relief officials were informed many children would be unable to attend school for lack of garments. At the same time, men and women are not being neglected.

Dresses are made for women and girls, shirts and overalls for men and boys, underwear for men, women and children, overalls and play-suits for children.

Nothing that can be used is discarded. Scraps from garments are made into quilt tops and cotton batting is supplied for quilts and comforters.

Recently orders were placed for material out of which 168,000 comforters will be made. Approximately 1,100 bales of cotton and 1,600,000 yards of covering will be required. Federal authorities also have granted the Texas Relief organization 612,700 pounds of cotton for its mattress plants. From this about 12,250 more mattresses will be produced for the destitute. The first mattresses made by relief labor will be distributed about Oct. 1.

Relief labor will be used to clear wooded land and haul the wood to a central woodyard. Such wood will be classed as a surplus commodity and will not be charged against the budgets of relief clients.
