men who stole $427,930 from an armored truck here yesterday.

Officers believed the robbery was planned in minute detail by a man with military or stage training, as the maneuvers were timed as perfectly as though rehearsed or blue-printed like wartime tactics.

The robbers took to the sea in speed boats but a search failed to reveal the craft. One theory was that the robbers were former liquor runners, impoverished by repeal.

Adoption of the budget for operation of the public schools was voted by trustees in regular session Monday, the budget was read in public hearing for the benefit of tax payers prior to taking a vote.

And Now We Present the Great Lover

Six of the world's greatest writers go on The Reporter-Telegram staff tomorrow and will tear the veil from history's polite masque to reveal in six intimate and diverting narratives some of the interesting follies and fables about the romantic headliner of all time—Benvenuto Cellini.

cellini, as you recall from history, lives more in the present for his recounting of hair-raising episodes of the 16th century than for his famous statue of Perseus and for his beautiful work in silver and gold. Cellini, arch-villain and master lover of his time, was an arrant knave, a stout fighter and 2 sort of historical liar—and the hitherto unpublished series of narratives is remarkably written for you by John Erskine, Konrad Bercovici, Richard Halliburton, Ursula Parrott, Faith Baldwin and Thorne Smith.

CONFLICTING POWERS

One of the oddest conflicts within the machinery of the New Deal is coming up for settlement right now. The administration is pondering the overlapping fields presided over by the NRA and the Federal Trade Commission, and it is hinted in Washington that these two bodies may eventually be combined.

The Federal Trade Commission is a body set up to see that industry be kept from making large-scale combinations that might be against public policy. Its theory dates straight back to the old anti-trust days. The NRA, on the other hands, holds that a large degree of industrial combination is both necessary and wise.

Thus, naturally, there has been a good deal of conflict. It is high time that it be straightened out. The government can hardly fight combination with one hand and help it with the other.

Protest Salvaging

EAGLE PASS, Tex. (P).—People of Eagle Pass through their Chamber of Commerce, County Board and service clubs are protesting to the War Department against the salvaging of historic buildings at the Camp Eagle Pass, erected in 1849, for the plumbing and lumber. Their letters ask that the war department keep its promise made a year ago to Vice-President Garner, who interceded for the city, that the post buildings would not be touched until the city's proposal to buy the army reservation had been settled. Congress passed a bill for the sale at the last session but President Roosevelt vetoed it because it was "not in proper form." Another bill is pending for the next session.

LENINGRAD. (U.R) — A hitherto unknown ode written about 1814 by the famous Russian poet, Alexander Pushkin, has been found in the archives of the Grand Duke Oleg Konstantinovich by Prof. L. B. Modzalevsky, authority on Pushkin.

The poem of 300 verses was entitled, "To the Shade of Fonvizin."
Fonvizin was a Russian essayist and critic of the early 18th century. The new poem will be included in a new edition of Pushkin's complete works.
