ORTHODOX ECONOMICS NEEDS HUMANIZING

It would be a lot easier to figure out how successful our present recovery efforts are likely to be if we only had some way of telling just how exact a science orthodox economics really is.

According to the old school economists, recovery from a depression must follow certain natural laws. There must be a deflation long enough and severe enough to readjust all the relationships of prices, wages, and debts, which were put out of line by the previous inflationary trend.

Until that readjustment is complete, we are told, there is no possibility of recovery.

Now the reason why people are refusing to wait for these natural processes to do their work is that a terrific price in human values must be paid.

A fair expression of the orthodox viewpoint is contained in a bulletin recently issued by a New York business advice firm.

This bulletin asserts that recovery cannot come until wages have been deflated to a point at which industrial operation is profitable under a deflated price scheme. Such deflation, it says, is being retarded by present government relief policies.

"As long as the government continues to provide the unemployed, either through jobs on public enterprises or through direct relief, with sufficient funds to deprive them of the incentive to secure private work at any price," says this bulletin, "the supply of labor will not be large enough to exert on private wage scales the pressure needed to force a quick adjustment. . . . A return to sound business prosperity will be postponed until the government voluntarily modifies its relief policy to a point where it will not interfere with the proper deflation of wage rates."

That does not make pleasant reading.

During the last couple of years we saw examples of what happens when labor has "the incentive to secure private work at any price." We saw men employed at $5 and $6 a week. We saw women glad to get jobs as household servants for no pay at all but their board.

We saw college-trained engineers and skilled mechanics mowing lawns for 25 cents an hour. We saw, in brief, enough sights to make the heart sick, and we saw enough of them to last us a long, long time.

If that is all the hope that orthodox economics holds out—that such things must be endured indefinitely, without any attempt to alleviate them—it is hardly surprising that ordinary folk are beginning to feel that they want something a little less orthodox and a little more humane.

HOW TO GET A JOB

There are a great many reasons why people seek public office. The poorest of all reasons, probably, is simply that the candidate needs a job—any job at all—and hopes to get one on the public payroll, all other expedients having failed.

That is why elections held in a time of depression are peculiar affairs. In the current primaries, according to a United Press tabulation, more than 300,000 American citizens ran for public office. In Indiana, for instance, more than 36,000 people declared their eagerness to get on the public payroll. In Montana one citizen of every ten was a candidate for something or other.

It will hardly be surprising if the fall elections present us with some public servants who have no qualifications whatever for their jobs. A public office-holder, even in a democracy, must have some recommendation aside from the fact that he needs work.

To anyone who will work it, says a noted manufacturer, the soil offers a real living. But how can farmers in the drought area work it when they can't even catch it, with winds carrying their farms into the next county?

New Liberal Course Offered by Texas U.

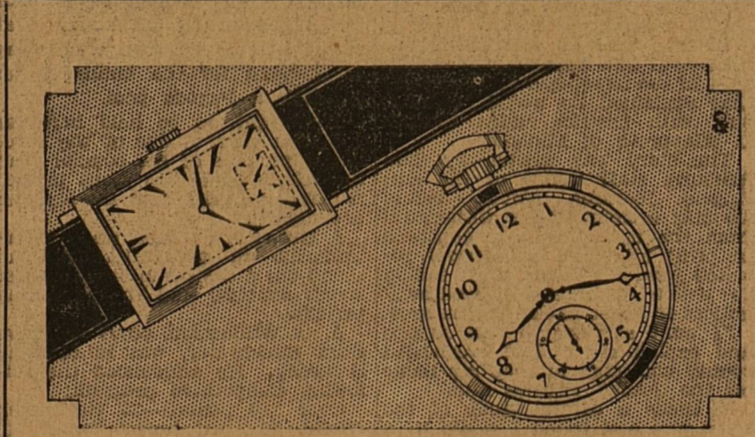

AUSTIN, (UP)—One hundred bright young men and women will be routed over new academic paths leading to the bachelor of arts degree at the University of Texas this fall.

Educators will experiment with young minds in an effort to determine whether a new, so-called "cultural" degree will prove feasible and satisfactory.

The new course of study to be followed by the picked one hundred will emphasize general culture and "enlightened citizenship," as opposed to laws of physics, the binomial theorem, and specific rules not generally used by the average college graduate.

Certain fields of knowledge are presupposed as more fundamental than others. The fields so emphasized are natural sciences, the social sciences such as anthropology, government, economics, psychology and sociology; and the humane studies, such as the arts, philosophy and literature.

The new course of study spreads the world's learning before the student for a "bird's eye view." Once a student finds the particular field in which he wishes to concentrate and to which he wishes to devote most of his life, he may select "elective" courses which will permit him to specialize.

REPAIR DEPARTMENT

While secondary in importance in some stores, patrons find our repair department always ready and anxious to serve their best interests.

Craftsmen, high in the standing of watch repair work, assure an added measure of satisfaction.

Strange that our prices are not higher than elsewhere, but that is a fact, too.

Those who want the "EXACTLY RIGHT" time can have it. We repair and regulate watches so that they are "EXACTLY RIGHT."

Bring your repairs to us—all work guaranteed.

Allred speaker: "You see Tom Hunter's picture in the saloons down at San Antonio. That's where I came from."

Did you see the news reel at the Yucca the other day where a woman held the lucky ticket in the Irish sweepstakes? When asked what she would do with her money she said she would buy her husband a ticket back to the old country and she would settle down and be happy on a little farm in Indiana. There's a woman who knew what it would take to make her happy. A lot of people may feel that way but they have a hesitancy in saying so, especially in anything as public as a news reel.

A story so old that it has become a classic. "After having walked for hours and hours," said the traveler, the money but that his car would be replaced. That night the old country boy wrote in and cancelled the life insurance policy on his wife.

A modern mother from the city was visiting some kin who lived away out in the country and among the kin was a young mother who had a young baby. The city visitor was present when the country mother gave her youngster a bath in a wash tub.

"What, no thermometer?" she asked as she arched her eye-brow. "We have one out the back porch," the old country gal replied. "I mean one for the bath; how can you tell when the water is the right temperature?"

"Wellum," replied the country cousin, "I just puts him in and if he turns blue it's too cold, and if he turns red it's too hot."

SAN ANGELO—Times may be hard but the drinks are still soft for a majority of folks. Time was when thirsty San Angeloans hooked an elbow on the bar and lubricated their handle-bar mustachios with a nip of "Mellow Blossom" or "Hill & Hill." But nowadays the handle-bars are relegated to early photographs and bicycles; there is no place to hang your elbow on the bar; and the usual drink is a "coke" or "De Pepper."

"When I came here in 1914," recalls A. J. Buttery of the Economy Drug store, "there were only seven places outside of saloons where a person could get a soft drink."

Now some estimates are there are 250 places in San Angelo where one may get a cooling drink other than water or milk, for there are

Texas Oddities

To Heaven on a Horse Negro Church Enjoined Gypsy Gold in Court

SAN ANTONIO (UP)—Al Johnson went to "Heaven on a Mule," but Eula Upton of Wichita Falls, Tex., and Albert Richardson of Beaumont, Tex., were married on horseback.

Because both are fond of riding, the bride and groom thought it would be a good idea to stage the ceremony aboard horses. The wedding, performed here, also saw the minister, the Rev. Will Anderson, and all attendants on horseback. The happy couple went for a canter in the park after the ceremony.

BEAUMONT (UP)—In effect, District Judge George C. O'Brien ordered the Sweet Home Missionary Baptist church, colored, to live up to its name.

Specifically, he commanded Pastor Jenkins Smith and Deacon Anderson Newson to open the doors and unlock the church piano.

The schism developed to the point, the petition said, where finally Jenkins and Newson "forcibly and by force of arms" ejected Anderson and Johnson from the church house, along with a "majority" of the congregation.

WESLEY (Washington county) (UP)—When members of the Mutual Aid society of the Czech Moravian Brethren held their 23rd biennial convention here they met in the oldest Czech protestant church in North America.

SAN ANTONIO (UP)—Federal court here will be called upon to determine the status of $480 in gold coins found hidden in a gypsy camp at Burnet several months ago.

Costa, who will contest the suit, declared the gypsies were not hoarding the coins as such but that they were saving them for use as ornaments. He contended that as gypsies they would not come under the gold hoarding law.

The coins were found when officers searched the camp after a bank robbery at Marble Falls. The gold and other cash totaling $1,500 were found under the floor board of an automobile. The money was not part of the bank loot.

FORT WORTH (UP)—Even among bank robber and safe-crackers there is pride in one's profession. Recent breaks at the Huntsville state prison served to call an unusual incident to the mind of E. E. Giesecke, now a member of the Texas relief board, but then an architect on one of the state prison units at Sugarland.

One convict who had escaped from the prison several times was aiding in construction of the building. Giesecke asked him to get the keys to let the architect pass through a padlocked gate. The convict, whose name Giesecke does not recall, turned to him with a sly grin.

He was Her Man Is Unique Love Drama at Ritz

"He Was Her Man," a new Warner Bros. production with an unique love theme, opens at the Ritz theatre today with James Cagney and Joan Blondell in the stellar roles.

The picture is set for the most part in the picturesque background of an old fishing village on the Pacific Coast near Monterey where Cagney is hiding out.

Victor Jory has the role of the fisherman lover while others in the cast include Frank Craven, Russell Hopton, Raffie Harold, Sarah Padden, John Qualin, George Chandler and Samuel E. Hines.

GREATEST WELLS UNDEVELOPED

HOUSTON (UP)—The world's largest oil wells in sustained productive volume are in the yet undeveloped gulf coast field of Texas and Louisiana.

Among these wells are the Texas company's No. 1 Abrams in the West Columbia field of Brazoria county and the same company's No. 53 Hogg well on the land of the former Governor J. S. Hogg of Texas, now deceased.

The explanation lies in the character of the gulf coast formations and the base of the gulf coast oil, oil geologists said. Gulf coast crude oil is free from both paraffin and asphaltum. Due to the naphthalenic base of gulf coast crude, it flows freely, not clogging the oil sands and porous limestone as it seeps to the vent, or drill hole.

Texas company drilled the No. 1 Abrams to around 3,000 feet. The well blew in unexpectedly through the drillstem. The oil gushed over the derrick at the rate of 1,200 barrels an hour.

The West Columbia field is noted for big gusher wells of long life. The Abrams and Hogg gushers are not the only giant producers that made the West Columbia field famous.

There were 4,700,000 families on emergency relief rolls in this country in April.

4,500,000 barrels. It still is flowing, but figures on its production in the last two years have not been made public.

For 40 days and 40 nights, like the rain that flooded Noah's Ark, the Abrams gusher deluged the earth, with thick viscous black oil. After the 40th day the well sanded, clogging was cemented and the flow brought under control.

That was 12 years ago. The Abrams continued to flow and still is producing. It has been estimated that this one well produced more barrels of oil than some fields produce in a lifetime.

The Hogg well was brought in 600 feet from the Abrams well in May, 1921. Up to May, 1932, the Hogg well had produced a total of SAVES CHILD IN SPRING BALMORHEA (AP)—Edward Earl Stull Jr., 12-year-old scout and member of Troop No. 66 at Mesilla park, New Mexico, saved an eight-year-old girl from drowning here in San Solomon spring one day last week. The girl was in 20 feet of water and helpless when the boy, a poor swimmer, went to her rescue and brought her safely to shore. His act will be brought to the attention of the Carnegie hero commission.

TO THE VOTERS

of the SEVENTIETH JUDICIAL DISTRICT

In the First Primary I received 398 more votes than my nearest opponent for the office of District Attorney. It is needless to say that I appreciate this splendid vote and I want to assure you that I will appreciate just as greatly any help you can give me in the Second Primary on August 25th.

I have tried to make a fair clean race for the office to which I aspire, based solely upon my qualifications and ability, and upon my ambition and desire to hold the office of District Attorney.

My appeal in the Second Primary is upon the same basis. If you think I am qualified and worthy of representing you in the office of District Attorney and honor me with that office I will be deeply grateful, and I hope that I may be able to conduct myself in such a manner that you will never regret your action.

SMALL GATE BLAMED FOR FAILURE OF OFFICIALS TO KEEP THE CLUB UNTIL SEASON IS PLAYED THROUGH

Premature final was written to the baseball season here Friday afternoon, when the club was disbanded. "Financial difficulties," the treasurer, J. P. Butler, tersely explained. "Directors will meet in an effort to plan raising of approximately $150 owed creditors. The ball players have gone home."

Butler said the disbanded order came after the game here Wednesday with Coahoma, but was not announced until Friday. In spite of the building of Municipal park stands, one of the most model layouts in this section of the state, the hiring of ball players and attempts through publicity to arouse the fans to attendance, the interest did not awaken as expected. The club went through a disastrous season, and was next to the cellar position through last Sunday.

Joe Pyron, manager, was out of the city and could not be reached for a statement late Saturday. No game will be played at Midland today. Iraan had been billed to play at Midland. McCamey plays at Wink and Odessa at Crane.

Miss Neal made a personal canvass of her friends in the lower house to enlist support for the centennial commission bill. During the 1932 national democratic campaign Miss Neal was co-director for Texas in charge of women's activities and her work drew commendation from national party officials.

In addition to the chairmanship of the education committee Miss Neal was assigned to the committees on agriculture, contingent expenses, commerce and manufacturing, judicial districts, privileges and elections, public buildings and grounds, public health, public debt, state institutions and departments and penitentiaries.

Miss Neal, who was a publisher and editor at Carthage, recognized the need for more speedy compilation of primary election returns and led in passing a law which requires election officials to submit their tabulations immediately to the secretary of state. The law failed to accomplish its purpose in the recent

Candidate Bitter At Costs Involved

AUSTIN, (P).—Jefferson G. Smith of Austin, who withdrew before the democratic party put his name on the ballot as a candidate for superintendent for public instruction, filed a campaign expense statement with the secretary of state notwithstanding.

In it he criticized the high cost of conducting a political campaign. His expenses were: postage, $4.09; stationery, 10 cents; "preparatory to mailing correspondence," $2.05.

His criticism of the high cost of politics made as a part of his statement, said: "Upon final consideration my name did not appear upon said ticket but having said expense I comply herewith in premises. 'I believe the usual expenditures for running for office now are too high. Such policy quite frequently prevents talented poor people from seeking high office except when sufficiently fortunate to have their campaigns otherwise financed. Such otherwise financing of campaigns often places the successful candidate under obligations conducive to control not always best in democracy."

"Therefore I suggest stricter limitation laws as to candidate's expenditures would prove more wholesome than as permitted at present." The report was duly sworn before a notary public.

It will consist of two days before Easter and one after Easter. On Armistice day, classes are to be suspended only to the extent necessary to participate in local celebrations.

Every Patriot Rejoices in Coming Celebration

Through a welter of inaction, indifference and lack of understanding of its possibilities and potentialities has moved ever forward the desire that Texas should hold a birthday celebration in 1936. A celebration that will show to the world that Texas is not only broad in area but also broad of concept as to the sacrifices of those sturdy pioneer fore-fathers that laid here the mudsills of a new empire . . . Destined to acquire a grace and character challenging the respect and admiration of all nations.

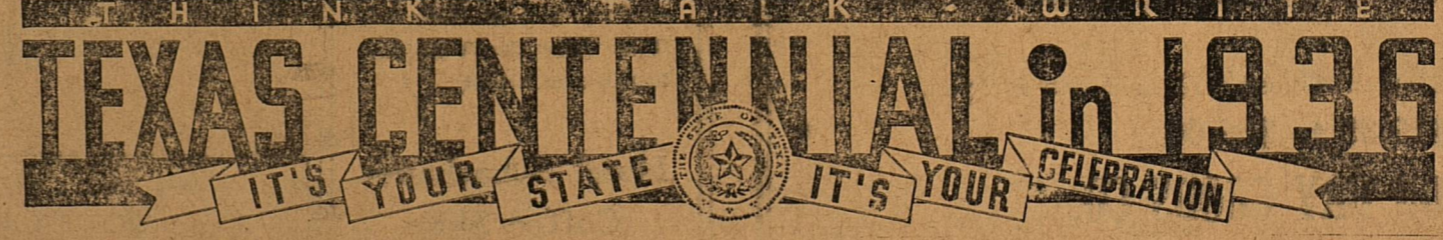

Here is pictured the official membership of the Texas Centennial Commission created by the last session of the State Legislature after more than ten years of sustained effort of a few sturdy patriots determined that in 1936 Texas should exhibit the romance of her past and the glories of the future to an appreciative world audience.

As varied as are the historical sequences of her history and the resources that are her heritage, is the personnel of the Commission named to serve in bringing this celebration to a successful conclusion. Scattered over the State from El Paso to the piney woods of East Texas and from Amarillo to Brownsville they represent a fine cross section of the States' best civic leadership.

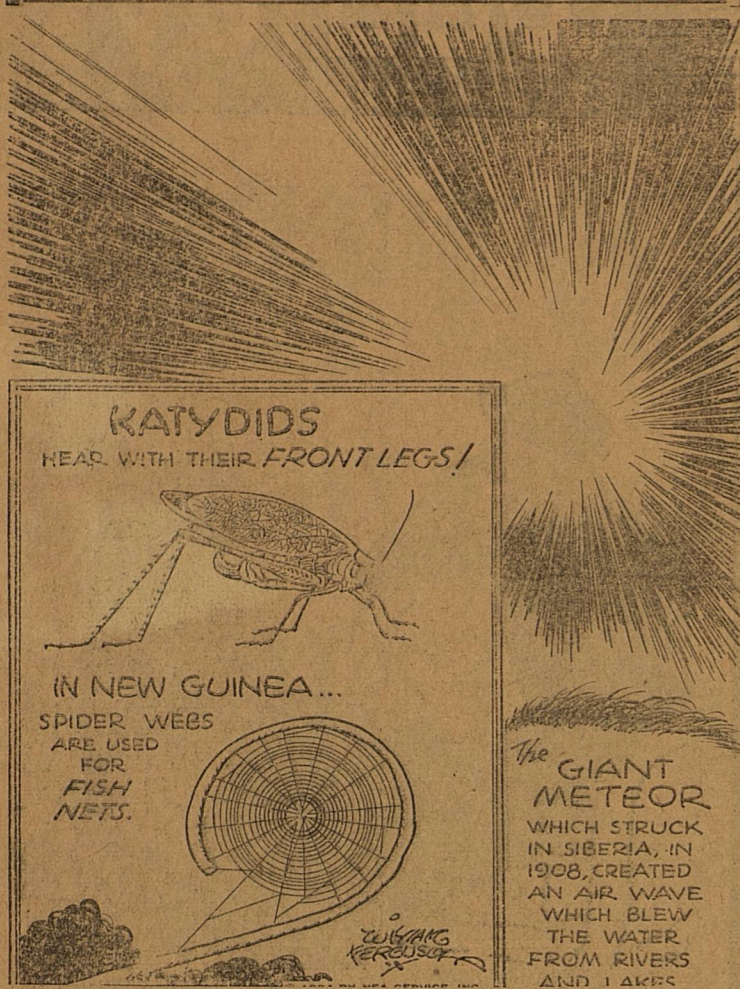

As Texas Centennial Week, August 13-19, draws to a close, it is altogether fitting, right and proper that every citizen of Midland and vicinity, with those of all sections of the state, shall give serious consideration to the possibilities of the Texas Centennial.
