Sunday Rains Assure Grass for Hundreds of Sections

TERRITORY TO NORTH AND WEST GIVEN MOISTURE

Midland Records 1.11 And Airport 1.45 During Night

Ranch areas to the north and west over hundreds of square miles received moisture last night which, added to precipitation previously falling over some of the country, was credited with assuring much winter pasture for cattle belonging to Midland ranchmen.

Close in farm land, with the exception of that immediately south of Midland, also was benefited, helping the newly planted winter pasture crops, also the late feed.

Rains were reported from as far north as Lubbock on highway 137 by way of Brownfield and Odessa, with lighter fall over a small strip extending from a point 15 miles north of Andrews to Seminole. From Seagraves to Brownfield the rain was heavy, also from Andrews to Odessa.

The government weather station at the Southern Ice & Utilities plant recorded 1.11 inches. The army airplane gauge at Sloan field, registered 1.45 inches.

Reports from ranches included the following: Ellis Cowden's M-B ranch, 2 1/2 inches; O. B. Holt's ranch, 3 inches; heavy rain at C-Ranch headquarters, lighter at the former Fasken townsite and back toward Midland at South Camp; Free Bird ranch, 30 miles due north of Midland, 4 inches; Moore place, good rain; Scharbauer's Five Wells, heavy rain; North Curtis place, lighter; South Curtis place, about Midland, heavy place, north of airport, 1 1/2 inches; Moore place, operated by Frank Cowden and George Glass, three inches; over entire distance from Pecos on Broadway of America, with 3 inches at Judkins; Monahans area, good rain.

Ranges south of the T. & P. railroad received from light showers to no rain at all, it was reported, although a shower fell at the Floyd ranch, southeast of Midland, early this morning.

Old Two-Toes Killed by Dogs

GONZALES, Texas, (AP)—Old "Two Toes" has made his last run. For 17 years this marauding timber wolf roamed the woods and pastures east of Gonzales, killing as he pleased, warily side-stepping steel traps and cluding packs of pursuing wolf hounds.

One night recently, however, the giant wolf, measuring six feet from tip to tip, was run down and killed by a pack of hounds. It took them an hour and a half to catch him.

It was back in 1917 that the kill-begun to track the animal. A number of farmers by raiding their turkey flocks. As many as 50 turkeys were slain at a time.

Because he was young and evidently inexperienced at that time, the wolf stepped in a trap set for him and, in escaping, left behind two toes from his left front paw.

Since then he has been known as old "Two Toes" because of the two-toed track he left.

Second Week of Revival Is Launched Here Sunday

Rainfall out short religious services at the tabernacle of the First Baptist church Sunday night, but the minister completed his sermon his fourth address of the day, and dismissed the large crowd five minutes before the downpour.

The revival Sunday swung into its second week. The Rev. B. B. Crimm, evangelist, expressed the hope in the morning service that he had laid foundation last week for a religious movement that would shake the city.

Sermons were announced through the night. Tonight he will speak on "What Is the Matter with the Church?" Tuesday night on "Midland Sold out to the Devil, Lock, Stock and Barrel, Ramrod and Powder Horn, Hunting Dog and Shotgun, Fishing Pole and Grub Worm;" Wednesday night on "The Inevitable Result of Sin," and on Thursday night, "God's Remedy for Sin."

"God's Call in Redemption," a subject based on the text, "The Master is here and calleth for three," was developed in Sunday night's address. The sinner in his natural state is dead, the evangelist postulated, explaining that such sinners live and die sinners and go to a sinner's hell after death. Some churches, he charged, take numerous sinners under their wings under the name of converts, but warned that the Holy Spirit must quicken—not merely church membership.

"God is under obligation to call every man to salvation at least once," the evangelist said, citing Biblical reference, "No man cometh to me except the Father who sent me draw him." "Otherwise, God should be responsible for that man's going to hell," he said.

The minister illustrated by telling of friends among Confederate veterans, who felt the urge to ally themselves with the church, but off their decision from year to year, becoming increasingly dispirited not to give up the ways of the world.

"The Gospel either kills or cures. I have not suffered physically from continual addresses from the pulpit, going at night to visit in the homes of the afflicted and otherwise following the duties of the minister," he said; "but I have suffered intensely at the inertia of those who felt the quickening of the Spirit only to spurn acknowledgment of it."

"I'm not going to tell you about religion—don't run from me. Religion is too good to bore one over. Go to hell if you must; I'm going to afford you a chance to see the true values of religion, but I'm not going to bore you with it. Some-times personal friendship results in a fellow telling me, 'A. B. Crimm, I'll go with you and make the standard acknowledgment; but I have about as much feeling as a bench.' I tell you one and for all, I don't want that kind of membership. You may have no feeling in your religion; but I have in mine. The Spirit will have to quicken the sinner dead to membership in the church, I repeat."

The minister kept with his theme and seldom wandered into his eccentric range of jargon and tales of levity. He paused at one time while telling of his registered Kentucky Denmark mare to say he likes hounds, and believes everyone should love a good dog.

"I stole it long once, but don't ever say I ever owned a poodle," he shouted. "When I want dogs, I want dogs. The guy that doesn't like dogs can't be my neighbor; he's stealing my peace." The fellow who poisons a dog has less desirable qualities than the dog; the fellow who would steal a dog would insult your wife. I hope the bird who stole mine is here tonight."

He told a sketchy story of a ride after a fox.

"After I had ridden down a couple of hunters, one old Confederate veteran said, 'Preacher, would you steal a watermelon with us? I'm tired.' I said, 'No, but I will hold the horses while you steal 'em.' I never did find anything in the Bible that said, 'Thou shalt not hold a horse.'"

Mr. and Mrs. James M. Friday are the parents of a six-pound son born this morning. The baby has been named Larry Martin.

Wily Girl Nomad Can Win Meal and Automobile Ride

BY MISS LESLIE SHAW
Written for NEA service

I met Marion at one of the smartest Florida resorts, where I had gone in search of a job as an emergency relief worker. She had come there first of all for the races and the swimming aid to get a job as a side issue.

In a few days we both found ourselves jobless and broke so it was natural that we met at the government home for stranded women.

I had tried every possible resource before I went there, for I was determined not to get in touch with my family. I had tried for a job as governess, as child's nurse, and at last even at mother's helper. Always I was told that local references were necessary, and that a college degree wasn't important.

Marion thought this was just funny. "Who wants to bother with somebody else's kids, anyway?" she demanded.

With all her good looks and charm—she was a black-haired French-Spanish girl from New Orleans—Marion had no luck to brag of in holding her various jobs as waitress. She just couldn't take her work seriously, and spent half her time wisecracking with customers. She made good tips so long as the boss let her work but that was seldom long.

Wanderer's Heart
She was restless, eager to be on the high road again, having spent the last few months traveling back and forth to California.

"This is a swell place," she said, referring to the federal home which stood by the edge of a green-tiled bay surrounded by coccinella palms. "But they've got too many rules. I check with them that rules are rules, but they're not for me."

She had a sudden inspiration. "Come on, let's hitch it up to Washington! That's where all this government money is being shifted out. Ever hear of the White House?"

"All I know about it is what I read in the papers," I mocked. "But they never heard about me. Still, there should be some good chances there. I'll go."

For Marion it was just one more jaunt, but it was a big day for me when I made that decision. It was my first job in a long time. One morning, having packed and stored all my clothes, except a handful, at the Y. W. I stood at the door of Marion's room.

We slipped out quietly. I had exactly 50 cents in the world. Marion had something over a dollar.

"No Questions Asked"
"Now listen," he said. "We'll buy ourselves coffee. But after this, we're paying for no meals. It's all on the house," her white teeth gleamed as she laughed.

Hauptmann Maintains His Innocence

Alleged by New York police to be the man who received $50,000 ransom money in the Lindbergh baby kidnaping from "Jaisie," Bernard Richard Hauptmann is shown here with his wife in a picture released by New York police. Hauptmann, an alien residing unlawfully in the United States, entered the country as a stowaway eleven years ago. He was arrested while trying to pass a $10 gold certificate and police allege that over $13,000 of the ransom money was found under a garage near his home. Hauptmann is a carpenter by trade, but has been employed for some time.

NEW JERSEY IS TRYING TO GET HIM EXTRADITED

Witness Maintains a Stolid Calm in Questioning

NEW YORK, Sept. 24. (U.P.)—The case of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, charged with extortion in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, went before the Bronx grand jury today. Arraignment was postponed to October 1.

Authorities pointed out that Hauptmann had handled, according to his own story, about $35,000 since April, 1932, when it was charged he received the ransom money. Since then he had had only occasional employment.

The extortion indictment was only the beginning of the prosecution. Authorities indicated that they expected him to be returned to New Jersey to face charges in connection with the kidnaping.

Hauptmann maintained innocence through 60 hours of nearly continuous questioning. Counsel for Hauptmann hinted today that "starting" developments in the case were being made, that investigators were working on the matter and might "split the case wide open."

The list of subpoenaed witnesses indicated that District Attorney Foley planned to trace the whole story of the Lindbergh case and jury. Several days were expected to be required for hearing evidence. Col. Lindbergh was expected to appear Wednesday.

SUSPECT WEAKENING, AUTHORITIES INDICATE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24. (U.P.)—Federal authorities indicated today that Hauptmann's signs of weakening in his steadfast denial of all knowledge of the Lindbergh abduction and the collecting of $50,000 ransom.

STANTON MEN ENDORSE ROAD

BIG SPRING.—Stanton business men Thursday evening demonstrated a dynamic interest in a road to Andrews county in endorsing a resolution favoring provision of right of way if such can be arranged.

The action followed a discussion instigated by Stanton business men in a special banquet session held in the Stanton Methodist church. Eleven Big Spring merchants and professional men were guests of the Stanton group.

A commitment favoring the road and asking the Martin county commissioners court to provide the right of way if there is any possible means of doing so was incorporated in the resolution adopted by the Stanton citizens.

Inasmuch as the road will traverse the Courtney community, northwest of Stanton, it was suggested that a meeting be arranged with Courtney citizens to solve the problem discussed. Stanton invited Big Spring to send a committee to sit in on the meeting.

The Stanton men indicated that efforts would be made to contact property owners along a probable route for the proposed road in an effort to get maximum cooperation in securing the road.

ADJOURNMENT MOVE DEFEATED

Oil Taxation Moves Step Nearer to Completion

AUSTIN, Sept. 24. (U.P.)—An attempt to end the legislative session at noon tomorrow was defeated in the house today by vote of 48 to 64. It would have struck 12 hours off of the time in which the session could continue, and would have reduced by that much the time in which new oil bills can be passed.

Representatives took a step toward uniform oil taxation, authorizing a committee to meet with committees of other states for the purpose of recommending a tax. An increase in Texas was the announced object of Rep. Albert Daniels, of Crockett, author of the present two cents per barrel tax. The present tax produces about $7,000,000 annually.

Three members of the house and two senators would represent Texas, if the senate concurs in the plan; and Oklahoma, California, Arkansas, Louisiana and Kansas would be asked to name committees for a conference.

Supporters of the bill to give the state railroad commission increased power to stop "hot oil" lacked four votes of having enough to bring it before the house for action today. Another effort to get house action on the measure, already passed by the senate, was to be made this afternoon.

Funeral Rites Are Read Over Mrs. B. F. Whitefield

Last rites were held this morning for Mrs. B. F. Whitefield of Midland whose death occurred at 9:30 Saturday night after a severe heart attack three weeks ago.

Dr. L. T. McKissick, of Marfa, former pastor of the First Christian church and president of the former Midland college here, officiated with the Rev. E. B. Chancellor, present pastor, in the services at 10 o'clock this morning, at the church auditorium.

The two ministers paid tribute to the useful life of Mrs. Whitefield who had resided here since 1897. They told of her unselfish service as a member of the Christian church, of her active work in missionary society circles, her aid to the sick and needy and especially of her devotion to her family.

Born at Waxahachie February 22, 1880 to Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Wolcott, she was educated in private schools and graduated from Carr-Burdette college in 1896. She moved here with her parents in 1897 and was married to Mr. Whitefield, also a former Waxahachie resident, in 1900.

Transfer of the House of David-Perman Basin league All-Star game from Odessa to Midland was announced early this afternoon by George Elliott of Odessa, who said the Odessa field is under water and will not be available.

The game will be played at 4:30 Tuesday afternoon in Municipal park, Elliott said.

Mrs. Branch to Go to Wichita

Mrs. Rue E. Branch, who has been acting librarian during the vacation of Miss Marguerite Hester, returned Saturday to her home at Seminole, where she will spend a few days before taking up a position in the Wichita Falls library.

While here, Mrs. Branch espoused a doll and model exhibit in the children's room of the library, and viewed many stories calculated to increase interest in circulation of books, both of the rural and of the free shelves. Included were several well-handled feature stories.

WE SHOULD ALL SHARE AND PROGRESS ALIKE

Arthur E. Morgan, who is chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority and in his spare time, so to speak—president of Antioch College, tells his students at the opening of the fall term that America must begin to build character "on the plane of social responsibility."

Now, it is the peculiar privilege of college presidents to mouth charming phrases before a wide-eyed convocation of newly arrived freshmen. But Dr. Morgan's suggestion hits a new note, and it might be worth a second look.

"Each individual," he says, "must determine to follow for himself the disciplined good life, regardless of the pressure of the mass."

Does this mean a reversion to the loose talk about an "aristocracy of brains" that we heard so much about a few years ago? Not necessarily, for Dr. Morgan goes on to add:

"There must grow a willingness to share the common lot and progress only as the common lot can progress. To a large extent, that means a change of personal aims and desires."

And it is precisely in this direction that the present trend in American life must swing if the high hopes of the last 18 months are not to be dashed.

It does no harm to recall that it was some such notion as this which helped, in the early years of the republic, to build that great American dream which has always dazzled our eyes just beyond the horizon.

Men came to believe, in those fresh new days, that human life could be lived on a basis different from anything previously tried; that the rights of the humblest man could be made as sacred as the rights of the mightiest, and that progress should mean nothing at all unless it means a better life and a truer freedom for the fellow at the bottom of the heap.

It was, and is, a noble dream. Like all dreams, it has been stained and frayed in its passage down through the years. But it remains our finest heritage; and if the confusion of this area is to mean anything at all, it must mean a revival of that dream and a new effort to attain it.

And, as Dr. Morgan suggests, before we can attain it we must find a new mental attitude. We must, somehow, get this "willingness to share the common lot and progress only as the common lot progresses."

Only in that way can we make of the New Deal anything more than an empty set of slogans.

VERTICAL OR HORIZONTAL?

In declaring for vertical unions in industry, Gen. Hugh Johnson would seem to have tossed himself blithely into the most difficult part of our whole difficult labor situation.

American labor organization has not, in most instances, proceeded along vertical lines. The overwhelming majority of our unions are craft unions. They extend horizontally, not vertically.

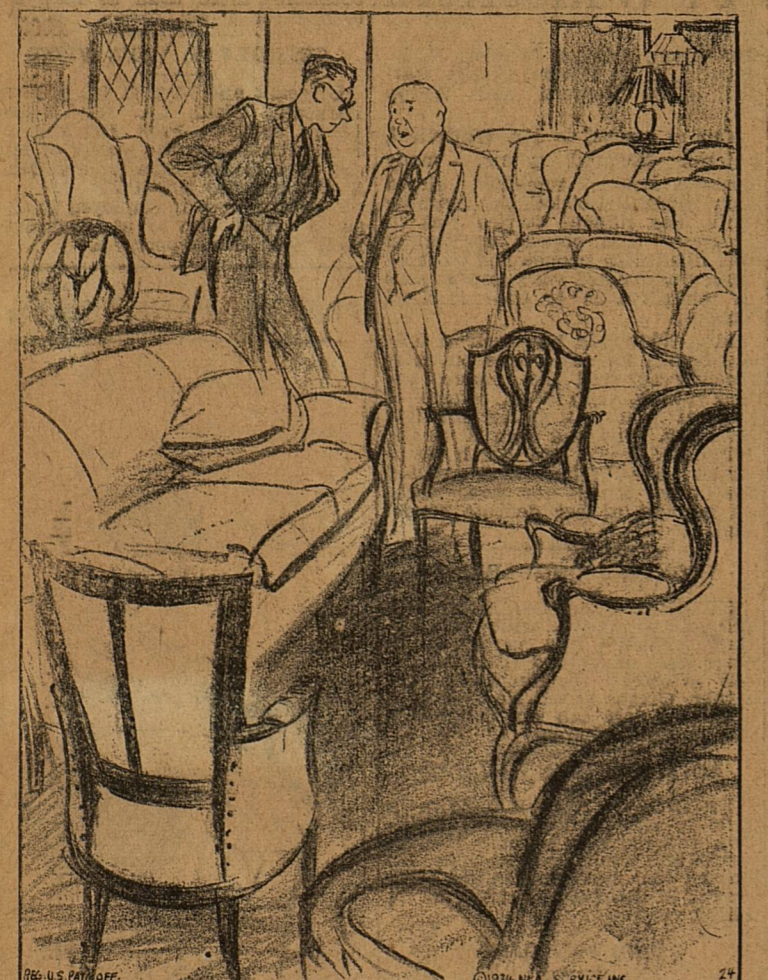

One union, that is to say, may have locals in automobile plants and in boiler factories, in small machine shops and in shipyards; and the stronger it is, the more militant its leadership, the harder it is apt to be to change it.

Plenty of people have remarked that under the NRA the vertical union presents a much more logical way of approach to the task of unionization. But union leaders themselves are exceedingly reluctant to admit this point, and by espousing it publicly General Johnson has let himself in for a great deal of very warm argument.

Ham Fish and Matthew Woll must be asleep at the switch. They haven't yet discovered a Red plot in the fact that drought area farmers are feeding Russian sties to livestock.

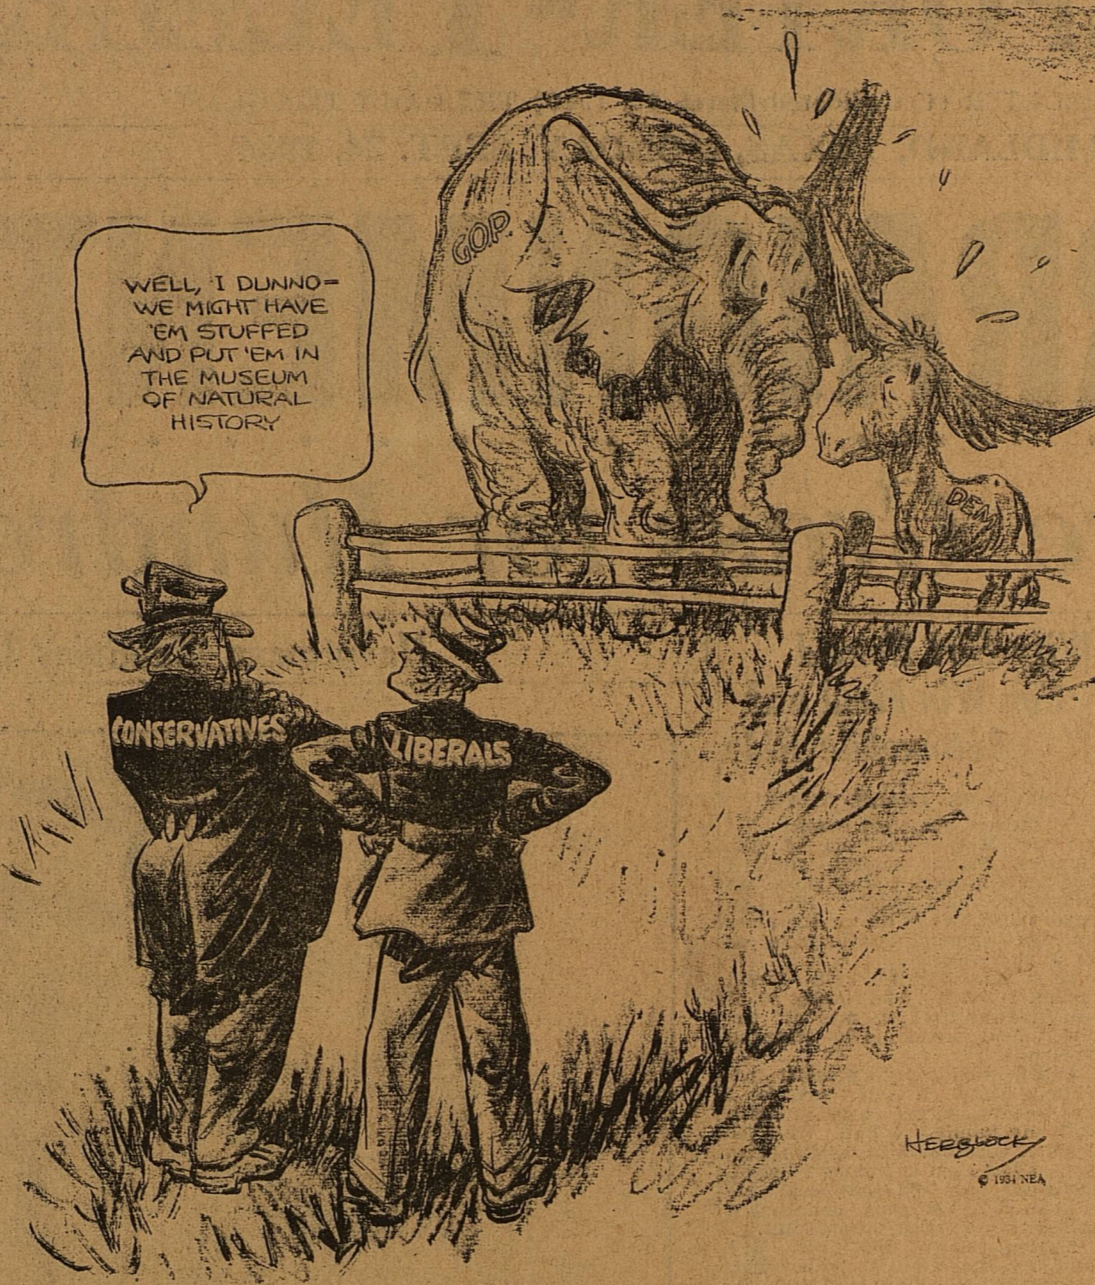

Maybe you've noticed that the person who always talks about the depression as past never has taken any pay cuts.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything with taking a stand on anything.)

Jack tells me he has talked to the heads of some awfully big major oil companies recently and they are planning to make a city out of Midland. He says the mushroom boom we had a few years ago (and he was through here then) was nothing but the permanent development we are about to have now. Jack is likely to be right, but we are going to need some houses in this burg to help the boom come. This federal housing program may have been started to relieve unemployment, but we need to get in on it here to relieve the people who are out in the cold.

ONE NIGHT OF LOVE

TULLIO CARMINATI • LYLE TALBOT • COLUMBIA PICTURES

What Has Gone on Before
Mary Barrett falls in a contest for a scholarship with the great teacher Guilio Monteverdi. She goes to Italy anyway, but is soon destitute; meets Bill Huston, rich young American, who offers help, but she refuses. While working as a singing waitress in a cafe, Monteverdi hears her. An unfortunate experience with his last pupil determined him never to teach another girl, but he is so captivated by Mary's voice that he takes her under his iron discipline. Meanwhile Bill is forgotten, but he seeks her out.

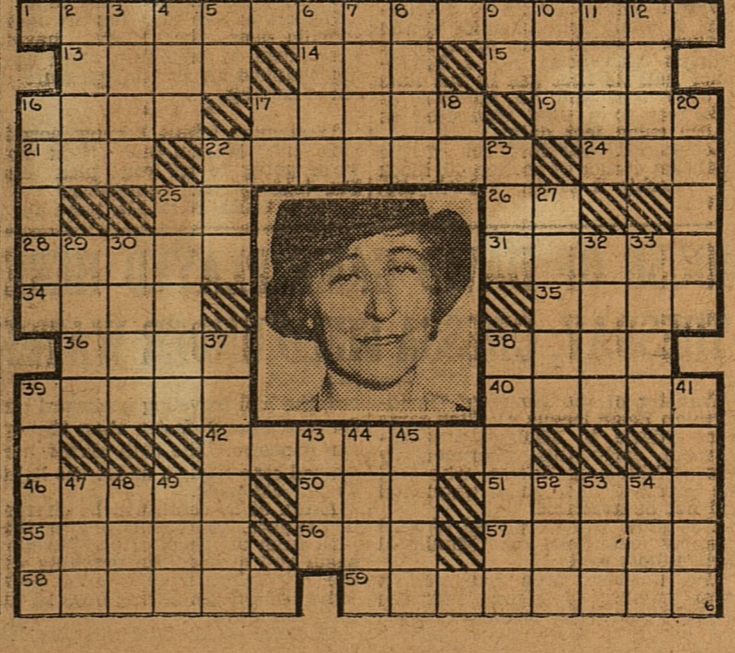

inspiration truly was his. Pushing her way through the enthusiastic throng at the stage door at the close of the performance she returned to her room, scarcely conscious of having ever left it. "Put her to bed," ordered Guilio, finding Angelina hardly able to cope with the situation. "I will get her something for her nerves." Efficiently, he opened a small white cube and dissolved a sedative tablet in a glass of water. Walking quietly across the room, he sat on the edge of her bed and gave her the potion. "Drink this; Thursday you sing 'Traviata'."

"I must have been awful. No, Monteverdi, I can't go on—I won't," almost hysterically Mary cried. "Get her something to eat," Guilio growled, indicating that Angelina should leave them alone. "I said you were wonderful, splendid. Are you a child that needs to be petted?" Taking her tenderly in his arms, Guilio gently said, "Now close the eyes and forget about tonight."

The Morning After
Rising late in the morning after a sound night's sleep, Mary was conscious of the hectic happenings of the previous evening. Curiously her thoughts wandered to Monteverdi.

These are the pictures that drove the Smith Brothers nuts. The fellows, names of which are not available inasmuch as they couldn't be recognized in the shimmery, are on the House of David ball club that plays a Fernian basin aggregation at Midland Tuesday afternoon.

"Gift of Gab" Is Good Remedy for Gloomy Moments

Comedy drama and music—offered by the largest collection of stage, screen and radio stars ever seen together—feature the most unusual entertainment to come to the Yucca theatre in many months. The production, which opened at the previous Saturday night, is Universal's "Gift of Gab."

Aged Soldier of Fortune Visiting

Editor's Note: The following article is written by Jack Lloyd, adventurer, soldier of fortune, globe-trotter, veteran of several wars and revolutions, and well known newspaper character.

Although 65 years of age, Jack Lloyd is still active in the news game. He has been making his way for the past few years, writing articles pertaining to the vast army of transient revolutionaries. Several of these articles found their way into the largest metropolitan papers, and Jack has received much credit for them.

Wars and revolutions have kept Jack busy when there were no booms, and he tells many interesting stories regarding these experiences. He tells of being with Teddy and his Rough Riders in the Spanish-American war with Kitchener in South Africa during the Boer war, with Tolstoi in the Russo-Japanese war, and with the intelligence department in the World war, and various revolutions the world over.

By JACK LLOYD People the world over wonder how they do it, the not, patients, these camps or rests, because there is too much red tape for them, and they pass them up. The "punk" of all the camps, the one that gives the camps the best play, for the majority of these kids, under 21 years, are just sightseeing, and a dish of all the problems to solve, for, up till the present time, there have been no lines drawn among these unfortunate of the road, and we had every class of people under the sun making up this vast army.

Very few people are seen making it through Midland, for the simple reason that the majority of the men going through are down in the ice boxes early in the morning, when the "hot shots" pass through, and these men as a rule never hit Midland. Again, after since the writer can remember, Midland has been known to the knights of the road as a "hostile" town, and many of them give it a wide berth for this reason.

Hitch-hikers are to be seen through here, and the men that ride the local freight, but they mean little, for all day Sunday there were only five transients in the town, which is a small number compared to the hundreds that "make" the towns of the same size in the northwest.

Various organizations, are trying to have a line of distinction drawn in this serious proposition of taking care of these people, for the "white collared" men and the learned mechanics really need a better break. Perhaps some reader will think why give these men something better? Was it not these very men that developed the oil and gas fields of this very section of the country?

When there is a boom in any new oil field, how many of the workers are local or home men? The percentage shows that a great development have been achieved by the work of the so-called "floating" element, of which in good times, there were always about 3,000,000 of these men moving from job to job. Today there are no jobs to move from, and they are out of luck.

turned out to be a traveling salesman. In half an hour he became over-friendly with me, winking, brooding at Marion meanwhile. Marion looked at him with weary disgust. "Drop the anchor. This is where you lose your cargo."

"Why, don't you like my driving?" he asked indignantly. "It's not your driving I don't like," she retorted. "Well, what I don't like is being trimmed," he snorted, his jowls becoming redder.

"What do you expect for a ride in your 1930 tin buggy? Love and kisses?" Marion turned on her heel, and he sped away in a cloud of rage and gasoline fumes.

"You're too much of a lady," she criticized. "That guy would never have tried to get fresh with me. You've got to keep your mind on what you want, and let the other fellow look out for himself, if you want to travel far alone."

"How do you like it by this time?" he asked, as we took the highway for Atlanta. "I feel like the Unknown Hitchhiker," I said. "All I need is a monument to get over that, and in six months they couldn't tie you down with iron chains."

"Growing Doubt" Bupt I wasn't so sure. Of course there was always the thrill of wondering what would happen next. But there was always the absence of a hot bath, of clean clothes, of regular meals that I had unconsciously accepted as the basis of my life. I felt seedy, and I'm sure I began to look it.

We were soon discovered by an elderly army officer on his way to visit his married daughter in Atlanta. Marion promptly launched a tirade against the officer, and we were left to our own devices. "We've slept in the tree tops like Tarzan's mate. We've lived on game and berries and roots we found in the wilds of Jacksonville. We've combed our hair with sticks and mended our clothes with pine needles."

"Pays for Diversion" The old gentleman was diverted, and by the time we reached Atlanta, had put us up at tourist shelters, and fed us, and in telling us goodbye, had pressed a dollar bill into our hands. "I've got quarters of my own," he said, "in Atlanta, we again headed for the Y. W., as do many girls on the road. You feel safe and under no obligation for having had an hour's rest, and a chance to get cleaned and pressed once more. Occasionally we met girls who asked to join us, but Marion always refused. "No one's going to pick us up if we look like a girl's school on field day," she reasoned.

"Inebriate One Leg Behind" YORKVILLE, O. (UP)—Marshall John Ferguson asked aid of a civilian in carrying a "drunk" to the lock-up. Arriving Ferguson noticed one of the inebriate's legs had been lost. The officer knew there had been two at the start of the jaunt. He reconnoitered and found the artificial leg.

CHEVIGNY MAINTAINS NOTRE DAME DEFENSE ADEQUATE AGAINST PASS

AUSTIN (UP)—Coach Jack Chevigny, protégé of Notre Dame's famed Knute Rockne, started at the University of Texas this month to show the sports world that Rockne style football is not a dead issue.

Texas' new coach has answered criticism that the Rockne defense is helpless before forward passes with the announcement that the regulation seven-man line, four-man zone secondary, would be used to stop the passes and charges of opposing teams.

This year marks Chevigny's debut in the Southwest conference. He came to this section last year to coach St. Edwards university of Austin to their first Texas conference championship. A forward pass was responsible for the only touchdown scored against St. Eds in the conference last season.

Many believe Chevigny will be forced to change his defense against Coach Ray Morrison's air-minded Southern Methodist university Mustangs. Morrison's teams have been notably successful against Rockne style defense, even at Notre Dame when the nation's late No. One coach was at his height.

Texas will depend on offense rather than defense to win its games. Under the revised rules of forward passing, permitting successive incomplete passes without penalty and allowing incomplete passes to fall over the goal line without losing the ball, Chevigny expects to provide an attack that will be both colorful and effective.

The new rules make possible a wider range of ground plays by presenting a greater puzzle for the defending team. The Texas coach Fishing is also in progress in Ector county's most discussed test, Landreth No. 1 Scharbauer in section 20, block 44, township 1 north, T. & P. survey. When gas which was gauged at 14,580,000 cubic feet per day was encountered at 4067 feet, tools were stuck in the hole.

A show of gas was reported at 2720 feet in the Sayre No. 1 Howe, Winkler county wildcat. The well is now straight reaming at 2723 feet, with hole bottomed in sand. Location is 2310 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the west line of section 12, block 26, public school land survey.

further insists on versatility in his backfield and insofar as possible will further befuddle the opposition with four triple-threat backs, all of whom must be able to lead interference and block.

Whether Rockne football at Texas is successful or not, it is certain the Longhorns will see plenty of that style this year.

The climax of Texas' non-conference season will come Oct. 6, when Texas meets Notre Dame at South Bend, in the nation's featured game of the week.

In the desert country, many animals never drink water. Their need for moisture is supplied by chemical action in their digestive tracts, which turns some of their starchy foods into water.

The Centennial will not Cost... IT WILL PAY

The Texas Centennial Commission has said that it contemplates a self-liquidating celebration. It has given positive assurance to the people of Texas that it will not involve any increased taxation. The Centennial is the biggest job proposed for Texans since wresting its liberty from foreign despotism. Texans in all the past have liked big jobs. The Commission is relying upon that old Texas spirit as enunciated by Col. Travis, "Victory or Death," to make sentiment unanimous for celebration of its historic birthday in 1936. Every Texan now is challenged. For a century of trial and triumph every Texan has stood in solid phalanx. Every challenge has been accepted. No greater work was ever presented a Texan, native-born or adopted, than that presented by the plan for the Texas Centennial.
