

NEW KIDNAP EVIDENCE IS FOUND

3 MORRO CASTLE FIRES TESTIFIED

NEW YORK, Sept. 25. (U.P.)—Three separate fires may have been burning when the Morro Castle was destroyed, Arthur J. Bender, head night watchman, testified at the inquiry today.

He said that at 10:30 on the night before he had smelled gasoline in the vicinity of the writing room and assumed that the stewards were following the custom of late cleaning the night before docking. He said he did not report later that he saw smoke from the ventilators connected to number two and number three holds, which were unoccupied. Later, flames broke out in the two unoccupied suites after the first alarm, he said.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25. (U.P.)—Capt. Robert R. Willmott of the burned Morro Castle locked himself in his cabin about 18 hours before the fire because he feared George L. Alagna, second radio operator, would throw acid on him, acting Capt. William F. Warmis testified.

Warmis recalled before the department of commerce inquiry into the disaster that cost 134 lives, said the captain summoned him to his stateroom at 10 a. m., Friday, Sept. 7.

The captain told him, he said, that Alagna had "a bottle of sulphuric acid," and that he was worried. Willmott added that he was going to keep his door locked for fear Alagna would throw the acid on him, Warmis added.

Willmott died that evening, six hours before the fire broke out. Death was ascribed to heart disease.

The captain gave no explanation of his fear for Alagna also accused of having Alagna put in irons and his stateroom searched, Warmis testified.

DETROIT PENNANT WINNER AT LAST

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—The Detroit Tigers Monday won the American league pennant for the first time in 26 years by defeating a bat or throwing a ball when the New York Yankees were mathematically counted out of the race as they closed their home season by dropping a 5 to 0 decision to the Boston Red Sox.

With only five games remaining on their schedule, the Yankees dropped games back of the Tigers. Mickey Cochrane's men can lose all of their remaining five contests and still finish with a game to spare, even if the Yankees win all of their games. The Tigers were not scheduled to play Monday.

Johnny Merena, youthful right-hander from Syracuse who pitched the Sox at the close of the international league, actually clinched the pennant for the Tigers. He pitched the Yankees only four widely scattered hits, two of them by Lou Gehrig. Only one Yankee got as far as third base and that was Gehrig, who singled in the fourth and advanced on Eddie Morgan's error and an infield out.

Babe Ruth, making his last appearance in the penultimate game and probably his last as a regular, was forced to retire after his first time at bat because of a charley horse in his left leg.

CARDS GAIN ON NEW YORK GIANTS

CHICAGO, Sept. 25. (U.P.)—The St. Louis Cardinals reduced the Giants' lead in the National league to two games when they defeated the Chicago Cubs 3-1 with Pepper Martin driving in two of the Cards' runs with a home run in the ninth. Kiki Cuyler saved the Cubs from a shut-out from the hands of Bill Walker with a home run in the ninth.

GALVESTON BUCS LEAGUE CHAMPS

SAN ANTONIO, Sept. 25.—Skipper Billy Webb's hard-clouthing Galveston Buccaneers won the Texas league championship Monday night by beating San Antonio in the sixth game of the play-off, 3-2. With the pennant stored away, the Bucs will represent the Texas league in the annual Dixie series starting Wednesday at Galveston where the three teams will meet New Orleans, Southern Association champions, will be played.

Galveston won the Texas league pennant by beating Dallas and San Antonio in the Shaughnessy system. Needing only one victory to clinch the flag, Manager Webb sent Harry Gumbert to the mound last night and the tall right-hander had the necessary equipment to stop the Missions. He allowed nine hits but kept them scattered.

Ash Hillin, ace right-hander for the Missions, went to the mound seeking his twenty-eighth victory in this series. He was shelved out in the third. He gave up seven hits and five runs. George Mills relieved him but was not stop. The Galveston bombardment that was paced by home runs off the bats of Buck Fausett and Beau Bell.

Facing The Limelight In Sensational Lindbergh Kidnaping Case

A happy, healthy child, 10 months old—half the age of Charles Augustus Lindbergh when he was abducted—gurgles and plays contentedly in his Bronx, N. Y., home while his father is held in jail, suspected in the most heinous kidnaping in the nation's history.

Shown here is Manfred Hauptmann, baby son of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, carpenter accused of participation in the Lindbergh kidnaping, after $13,750 of the ransom money was found in his garage.

Mob violence threatened Mrs. Bruno Richard Hauptmann, wife of the suspect held in New York in the Lindbergh kidnaping hunt, as she was taken into the street by police after a grilling about the ransom money found in the Hauptmann garage. A crowd shouting "Hang her!" was forced back by police. Mrs. Hauptmann is shown here as she left the Greenwich Village police station in custody of two detectives. She denied any knowledge of the kidnaping throughout the quiz.

tendered a $10 gold certificate in payment for gas, took the license number of Hauptmann's car, and notified police. The arrest followed and $13,750 of the ransom money was found. With Lyle is shown John Lyons, attendant at the station.

'JAFSIE'S' NAME FOUND IN HOME OF HAUPTMANN

One of the Suspect's Alibis Is Broken, Say Police

NEW YORK, Sept. 25. (U.P.)—District Attorney Foley announced today that the Lindbergh case is "iron clad" as result of the finding in Hauptmann's home of a board on which was scrawled the name of Dr. J. F. (Jafsie) Condon.

"I think the case is completely broken," Foley said.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25. (U.P.)—Investigators today massed new evidence against Bruno Richard Hauptmann, charged in connection with the Lindbergh kidnap case, while his attorney proclaimed the prisoner innocent.

Attorney Fawcett said a private investigation checked the truth of Hauptmann's alibi, that he called for his wife at a bakery in the Bronx on the night of the kidnaping.

Other developments were the police chief of Savannah, Ga., announced that Hauptmann had been identified as the man who used Typeset Island near Savannah in 1932 and 1933, possibly as a "refuge"; eight pairs of shoes, taken from the Hauptmann home, said to be comparable to proportions of footprints found outside the Lindbergh home and scene of the ransom payment; the New Jersey police revealed for the first time that fingerprints were found on the nursery window sill, saying they were "smudged and useless" in checking with Hauptmann's prints.

The grand jury continued today to hear witnesses. Authorities planned to place a crying baby near Hauptmann's cell so he would hear the crying constantly and, if guilty, be reminded of the death of the Lindbergh baby.

Hauptmann showed his greatest emotion so far when he saw his own two-months old son yesterday.

Blakeney Gets Most Rain Since 14 Years Ago

A draw at the B. H. Blakeney ranch, northwestern Ector county, which had not run since the big rains of 1920 still was flowing today from the heavy precipitation there Sunday night, it was reported. The area already had received several rains, one as heavy as four inches, this season but had not been sufficient to make the draw run. Blakeney said he had no way of estimating the amount which fell there Sunday night, but it was the best rain he had received in 14 years.

Bearded Beauties Began Playing Through Chance

It was early in the season of 1920 when a bearded baseball club from the Benton Harbor, Mich., Israelite House of David colony found it not only could play ball, but could rake in the shekels while doing so.

Appearing at Gotham in just one of those matched affairs that mark every large institution's baseball season, the House of David nine met such a rousing welcome from the ticket-buying customers the club stayed two months—incidentally cleared the staggering sum of $23,000.

The idea for maintaining a traveling club was not born—it was sowed at the IHD institution. And from that time there has been a baseball team annually sent out from Benton Harbor. Litigation came as other baseball clubs sensed the mass appeal of playing in whiskers and assertedly played as House of David clubs.

This is the only club the House of David sponsors, with the exception of a young club at home," said John R. Tucker, manager of the team which plays the Periman base in all Stars club at Municipal park this afternoon at 4:30. When a replacement is necessary because of injury Tucker, former Tyler, Tex., as boy, wins Benton Harbor and one of these youngsters finds himself overnight a member of the club, one of the greatest attainments possible, in the conception of the youngsters.

The team this year has played 160 games, winning 122 and tying four. It has shown before big audiences in Michigan, Illinois, Indiana, North and South Dakota, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Kansas, Nebraska, Texas, Missouri and Oklahoma, as well as in every province of Canada lying between the Pacific and the Great Lakes.

LAST FUGITIVE ACCOUNTED FOR

BATON ROUGE, La., Sept. 25. (U.P.)—The last of the 12 convicts who escaped from a Louisiana penitentiary in a bloody foray a year ago was accounted for Monday when Walter T. "Heinie" Henderson, Shreveport, La., bandit, was brought back from Odessa, Tex., where he was captured.

Henderson was caught by getting drunk and raising a disturbance that landed him in jail at Odessa, Texas.

The convict who escaped, bitten and mangled, from penitentiary bounds after being surrounded near Brouillette settlement near Marksville, La., during a flight that followed a break from the Angola penitentiary that claimed several lives, and then walked right past the sheriff who "sent him up," admitted while on his way back to the farm that the mistake of packing four guns on a drinking spree was what cost him his liberty.

Add Controversy On Moonbow, Re Trauber's Version

Al Trauber, who long has fought for freedom of speech and for the right to challenge the umpire's decisions, comes to the fore to say that The Reporter-Telegram was incorrect in yesterday's story of the "moonbow" which was seen Sunday night by certain citizens.

Trauber does not deny that the phenomenon was witnessed. He merely challenges the expression "moonbow" and denies that it was a phenomenon.

"You don't call a rainbow a sunbow when it is seen in the daytime. Then why call it a moonbow when it is seen at night?" he asked.

"Many's the night I've stood on the deck between Honolulu and Guam and looked at these lunar rainbows. The mist rising from the mountains reflect the moon's rays night after night, causing a rainbow. Tourists look for them as one of the principal attractions there," Trauber, world traveler ex-sailor, said.

To be correct, according to Trauber, and it sounds highly logical, one should use the expressions "lunar" rainbow and "solar" rainbow when distinguishing between rainbows reflecting the moon's rays and those of the sun.

Irresponsibility Caused by Giving Too Little Work

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

The biographer of a famous man said recently, "Responsibility and industry at an early age made him what he is. From nine years on he got up at 3:30 to deliver papers, finishing at 6 o'clock. From then on until school time he sold papers on the corner. He worked evenings, too, after school, and then again after supper."

Today we would look on that as cruel and barbarous, and it most certainly was. But this man as well as many others who have fought a good fight and won goes back to his boyhood days for the answers to his triumph, the drill of sacrifice, the need for persistence, putting self in the background in the struggle to keep alive. They all play a part in success, both as to life and character. But above all is the habit of work. We cannot always work at things we like, or even prefer. We cannot always even be interested, although it is better so if possible. Newer methods in teaching must consider this and not lean too strongly toward the "play" attitude in study. Part of the training for life is to cultivate a contented acceptance of routine duty that does not consider desire or comfort. And it must be started young at that, to be really successful. There is such a thing as making a child very happy as a child, but at the same time sowing the seeds of future unhappiness.

Richest Often Unhappy
No matter where he is or what he does in the future, life will be somewhat of a battle. Perhaps it will only be a battle with himself if he has no great need to earn.

However, it is well known that the ranks of the unhappy draw heavily from the well-to-do class. The rich who lack aim or purpose in life usually have a hard time keeping content, and are often indeed the most unhappy of all.

And so it is not only for material success that children need to have the work habit ingrained in them early, but to insure against the drift towards purposelessness.

Driving Is Disastrous
Naturally there is a difference in children. Some take more readily to routine habit than others. What we often do mistakenly in this case is to begin driving a child, but unless we are very careful, by using such means we are only likely to make things worse, and set his face against work definitely.

The driving method is not the best way to approach any child, but it is disastrous with the temperamental one.

Approach him with easy but regular tasks that he will consider out of the ordinary. And, if he has lacked regular duties up to date, to have these small duties at first conform somewhat, if not altogether, to his ability and taste. In time there can be a gradual change toward the tasks he is not so fond of.

It is real kindness to create in the child the germ of industry. Watch it grow. There is a vast difference between the work-habit and the willing-to-work habit. It is the difference between the real hustler and the one who is always waiting for something to turn up.

But Play Is Essential
Children need play and lots of it. They need freedom and lots of it. They need time to call their own and do somewhat as they please.

Child labor is a destroyer and a scourge and for a boy of nine to get up at three in the morning is unthinkable. But let us avoid the other extreme that wraps them in cotton, figuratively, and feeds them a character diet of candy.

All children are the better for some effort and small routine tasks that cost a struggle at times to finish. Their whole mental fibre will be strengthened by some work each day. School tasks do much more, but little home responsibilities are valuable because they are diversified from time to time. Some children have too much to do at home. Others not enough. It is a matter for judgment and thought. The mother must decide.

ART OF PLAYING IMPORTANT
PROVO, Utah, (U.P.)—Play is an enjoyable activity that fills leisure time, according to Athletic Director C. O. Romney of Brigham Young University. He predicted that the "art of playing" will be an important requisite for a successful life as leisure time increases under the new social regime of 30-hour weeks and six-hour days.

Skipping Grades Is a Burden To the Child

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Sally rushes in screaming: "Mother, what do you think? I've skipped a room. Number 10 was too crowded, and they put five of us in No. 11. We had the best marks and Miss Bradley said we could make up the work in 5A as we went along. I'm in 6B now. Isn't that grand?"

Sally does a hop and a skip around the room.

"Why, that's perfectly splendid, Sally. Won't your daddy be proud? That saves you a whole half year of school. And to think you started to school three months before you were six years old. You must be the youngest in the class."

Faces Great Struggle
"I am, mother. I'm sure I am. Wasn't I lucky? If there had been four instead of five I'd have been left behind. I was fifth from the top. My arithmetic pulled me down. I just can't get arithmetic very well." Her face clouds. "I hope the arithmetic in 6B isn't very hard."

"Never mind. I'll help you. You'll get along fine. I must go and call up grandma and tell her the news. She'll probably give you something nice."

So Sally goes back to school and a half year of struggle such as she has never known before.

From the first she was in water far over her head about the arithmetic. It seemed that every problem involved some process that the others had had in 5A. How could she find the selling cost of those apples in that simple looking problem without being able to divide decimals? How could she ever come to know that the whole structure of the problem in building depended on the ability to find the least-common denominator?

She fell behind. Her monthly grades were heart-breaking. But her heart was not the only thing that broke. Her appetite went. She couldn't sleep, she lost her color and developed headaches. And still something else broke besides her health. Her pride. She was a good little sport herself but she could not bear to disappoint her parents and relatives who had expected so much of her. She had been advertised as the smart little girl who had skipped a grade.

Task Was Too Great
At the end of the term it was decided that she had better take the grade over again. It was too late. Sally never did get the abstract process work that happened to be the keystone of all later arithmetic. The whole mathematical structure was undermined, and all her school work thereafter was doubly difficult.

There are times when a child can skip a grade safely, but unless he is unusually capable, extreme care should be taken. The pushed child may be facing a task too great for young nerves.

While it is true that grade-school work seems to be too long and there is a possibility of shortening it at some future time, it will be done by specialists and treated as a whole with no missing links. Let us have a care in this matter of pushing children and

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

Rainy weather isn't nearly so disagreeable if your raincoat is new and becoming.

If you're looking for the woman who is a darling of the gods, find the one who can walk down a west Texas street and still keep her slippers looking well-shined.

Have you noticed the air of youthfulness about the new sailor dresses?

The biggest blow to one's egotism is to come home from a trip and find that some one didn't even know you had been away.

The sweetest sleep is that last half hour in the morning that is probably going to make you late to work.

For an exciting sport we recommend: trying to make a pie by two different recipes at once—and having it come out fit to eat.

And speaking of cooking, have you tried adding a pinch of salt and a scant teaspoon of sugar to fresh fruit salads before the salad dressing is added? This improves the flavor.

The fashion these days is to sneer at sentiment. Even so, sentiment is about as agreeable as cynicism. Most of us prefer an overdose of sugar to an overdose of vinegar.

Plant Greens Now For That Winter Supply of Food

With the coming of of winter, and the failure of summer gardens, most housewives are considering what they can most profitably plant to supply their families with green food through the cold months.

Swiss chard, onions, lettuce, mustard, rape, carrots and beets are suggested by Miss Myrtle Miller as wise selections for the winter garden.

Cold weather will have little effect upon Swiss chard. When the leaves have made sufficient growth to be used as greens, be careful not to separate the veins. Some housewives complain that Swiss chard has a bitter taste. By removing the large, coarse veins from the leaves and using only the tender portion of the plant you will find that Swiss chard compares very favorably with spinach.

Onion sets can be planted now and the crop will be ready to harvest next May. Throughout the winter, onion sets planted now will furnish excellent green onions for the table.

A few feet of icicle or China winter rose radishes will add another tasteful variety to your table.

Beets, Miss Miller said, can stand about as much frost as turnips. Carrots planted now will produce an early spring crop. A little time, effort, and seed used rightly now will do much toward destroying the monotony of the average dinner table this winter.
