John E. Grimmett, flying a Lockheed Vega, took off from the airport at 12:15 this afternoon in an effort to set a record for the Midland-Fort Worth flight.

Grimmett has been stationed at the local port for almost two weeks, taking flights over West Texas and New Mexico, to afford Ed Owen, geologist for L. H. Wentz of San Antonio, an opportunity to see and photograph parts of this territory from the air.

Four navy planes which left Dallas at 10:20 this morning are expected here this afternoon, though it is conceded that they will be delayed by the head wind they are battling.

ALLRED MESSAGE TO LEGISLATURE POINTS WAY TO COORDINATION OF STATE, NATIONAL RECOVERY WORK

AUSTIN, Jan. 16. (P).—Governor Allred today recommended the immediate establishment of a state planning board to coordinate state and national recovery efforts, in his initial message to the legislature. He said a planned recovery constituted the major hope for the state and nation to emerge from a financial morass.

and nation to emerge from a financial morass.

Until benefits from such a program can be obtained, the governor requested the legislature to authorize the sale of $3,500,000 state relief bonds to carry the relief burden. This amount is all that remains from the $20,000,000 issue.

He asked the legislature to give thoughtful consideration to the old age pension, which he classified as "inevitable;" also to submission of repeal of state prohibition, strengthening of the state's hand in crude petroleum conservation, regulation of public utilities, taxation, crime and law enforcement and laws to safeguard labor.

A state liquor monopoly was suggested as a practical method for control of the liquor situation.

Editor Reporter-Telegram:

Editor Reporter-Telegram:

Through the columns of your friendly and fair paper, I want to take issue with Messrs. H. L. Haight and H. G. Bedford in regard to the stock law election that we are to vote on next Tuesday, Jan. 22nd.

First, I would like to state what a stock law is. The wording of the law is very plain. The one we are to vote on says "it shall be unlawful for mules, horses, jacks, jeanettes, cattle, sheep, hogs, etc., to run at large." I think a more suitable name for the law would be "Anti-Trespass Law," simply making it unlawful for me to let my stock trespass on my neighbor and destroy his crops and yards, that he and his family have worked hard with for twelve months in the year to bring forth from the bosom of old mother earth, and any man who is not in favor of this kind of a law, in my opinion, is not a fair-minded man, and does not believe in treating his neighbor as he would like to be treated.

A stock, or trespassing, law is not a new thing. Away back yonder in where he came from they must have had a law that compelled the farmers to tear down their fences, No. I think Mr. Haight underbook to write about something he knew nothing about; just took the other fellow's side of the question and made a poor attempt to write some thing he was told to write.

A stock, or trespassing, law is not a new thing. Away back yonder in the days of the Prophets there was an established penalty for the violation of it. To quote from Exodus.

Mr. Haight, before you came from Yankeedom (New York state) to Midland, just a few short years ago, did you ever live in a county where it was not unlawful for your neighbor's stock to frespass on you and destroy your crops and flower beds? You state in your article of January 11th that if this law is passed, that the cownan's cattle will wander into the farmer's feed?

You state in your article of January 11th that if this law is passed, that the cownan's cattle will wander into the farmer's feed?

Now, the average cowman does not now his cattle to the shipping peak of it, or will they graze their heads off, or will they graze their heads off the farmer's feed?

Now, the average cowman does not now his cattle to the shipping peak of it is until the feed of it is not right to transplant to make the cown will actually graze their heads off the farmer's feed?

Now, the average cowman does not now his cattle to the shipping peak of it is until the feed of its of the cown will actually graze their heads off the farmer's feed?

Now, the average cowman does not now his cattle to the shipping peak of its why our law-maker and that wandering cow your speak of is why our law-maker and that wandering cow your speak of its why our law-maker and that wandering cow your speak of its opt the stock law on our statute books; did it to provide the same protection for the little man as for the big.

Which, Mr. Haight, before the down the fall that is killed.

The statement Mr. Bedford's now every effect when the fall wander in the town of Midland, as it already has a slock law. It is claimed that town and the wander in the town of Midland, as it already has a slock law. It is claimed that town and the wander in the town of Midland as the statute books; did it to provide the same protection for the little man as for the big.

Which, Mr. Haight, suffers the more serious hardship, for the farmer and his family to work hard all the year and have their crops (which is all they have) destroyed by the wandering cow, or for the cowman, in moving his cows once or twice a year, to have to put on one or two extra men in getting his cows to the shipping pens?

I agree with Mr. Bedford, in a part of his article of January 14th. If the property tax-paying voters will make a close study of this law, there is no doubt in my mind of the outcome. Mr. Bedford told me, in the presence of the commissioners court, that the fences of the farmers in Midland county are the worst neglected and in the most rundown condition of any he ever saw anywhere. In this I agree with him, for, under the present law, it is not unlawful for me to let my stock trespass on my neighbor, and destroy his crop. However, I do not agree with Mr. Bedford when he says it would be detrimental to the farmers, ranchmen, and the business interests of Midland; and that it would mean the neglect and removal of fences.

We agree that we have the worst eglected and the most run-down ences of any place he knows of, and he states that it would force he comman to ship his cows from tanton, when he could, and thus eprive Midland of much revenue uping the course of the year.

deprive Midland of much revenue during the course of the year. I have been reliably informed that Stanton already has a stock law, but I don't see any Stanton cowmen bringing their stuff to Midland for shipment. Do you?

I differ with Mr. Bedford, too, when he states that the farmers would take their fences down, and then could not pasture the cowmen's stock during the fall and winter. Nearly every farmer in the county grazes his stalk fields and oat patches in the fall. Then, if this stock law carries, we will of necessity have better fences, and after that if Mr. Bedford came to me for pasturage for a bunch of cattle, he would say, "Dale, how are your fences? The law will not allow my

Mr. President of the Senate, Mr. Speaker of the House, Members of the 44th Legislature, Representaives of six million Texans, and My Friends:

Within itself, the constitutional oath of office just administered is sufficient to inspire the highest resolves and noblest impulses of the human heart. To assume that obligation, even in ordinary times, immeasurably thrills and stirs the souls of men. To take this time-honored oath, as I am privileged, amongst these historic surroundings, upon the centennial eve of our Lone Star state, is to me not only an honor beyond expression but a challenge to action.

To our great commonwealth of citizens, I shall ever be grateful for the honors bestowed upon me. May my every private and official act be acceptable in their sight and evidence that their faith has been well-founded!

I pledge you that this administra- needs.

If pledge you that this administration will continue to go forward with President Roosevelt whenever our state rights and duties may harmonize with the objectives of the National administration.

Our immediate Texas problems are recovery problems of They are not the problems of your Governor alone; they are not the problems of your Governor alone; they are not the problems of Texas. But, to a great extent, their solution depends upon a sane, intelligent and, above all, a patriotic approach by this Legislature and your humble servant.

Each generation, no doubt, feels that its problems most seriously threaten the stability of government. This new day in Texas is no exception. As we seek to revise our government to meet transition from old to new circumstances of life, grave doubts assail us. Too many of our citizens are on relief rolls; and fear clutches at the hearts of even those fortunate enough to be employed. The welfare of all our people seems to us at stake. Looking back a hundred years, however, to a state then forming with little material wealth and a total population of only a few thousands, with its then perplexing problems, we must say that the genius of Texas has gone a long way.

Truly then, our six million people with billions of wealth in oil, cotton, timber, cattle, and natural resources should have nothing to fear today. We are ready for a new cycle of progress. It shall be my concern that that progress may be directed primarily in the interest of Texas' six millions. This great state, with its unbounded resources and a citizenship in whose veins still flows the achieving blood of pioneers, can lead the nation in its still flows the achieving blood of pioneers, can lead the nation in its still flows the achieving blood of pioneers, can lead the nation in its still flows the achieving blood of pioneers, can lead the nation in its still flows the achieving blood of pioneers, can lead the nation in its still flow the achieving blood of pioneers, can lead the nation in its still flow the achieving

D. B. Greene, manager of Postal relegraph, announced today he had received instructions from New York to cooperate with committees received instructions from New York to cooperate with committees for the President's ball by accepting signatures at twenty-five cents each to be featured on a giant birthday greeting message to be presented to the president on his birthday, January 30. The entire amount so received will be turned over to the President's Birthday Ball Committee on Infantile Paralysis. The plan was approved by Henry L. Doherty, national chairman of the committee for the Victory ball for the president who stated, "While we estimate that four million people went to the six thousand parties held last year, there were ten million who had no opportunity to cooperate in any contribution. Secondly, every person has an opportunity not only to join in a message of goodwill to the president on his birthday, but to make this effective by supporting him in a work so close to his heart. Thirdly, no expenses are involved in this effort. Every penny collected, without any deductions goes to the fund being created to try to wipe out infantile paralysis." Those wishing to join in this greeting message, expected to be the largest ever created, are asked by Greene to leave their names as soon as possible at the Postal office. The greeting will not be transmitted by wire, but arrangements will be made to present the message with all contributing names to President Roosevelt on his birthday.
