FARMERS COURSE IS COMPLETED

Two-Day Session Is Great Success, Hannon Says

The Farmers short course, staged for two days at the Yucca theatre by the International Harvester company, ended Tuesday evening, with a crowd of 800 people present.

J. M. Hannon, who made an illustrated lecture, was the last speaker to appear, and he took occasion to compliment Midland on its civic pride, responsiveness and other qualities.

The meeting started with a number from the Midland Little Symphony orchestra, directed by O. L. Walton. This orchestra, which proved to be the hit of the short course, was loudly applauded.

Mayor Leon Goodman, presiding at the meeting, thanked in the name of the Midland chamber of commerce, the harvester company for selecting Midland for the short course, and expressed thanks to every individual who contributed to the short course success.

The Rev. J. A. McCall, pastor of the Church of Christ, offered the invocation. Mrs. Barney T. Smith sang, and then responded to an encore. The Rev. Winston F. Borum, pastor of the First Baptist church, led the audience in a community sing-song for 10 minutes.

Fifty-eight lantern slides, many of them in natural colors, were used by Hannon in his talk. These slides illustrated, among other things, the good and bad methods of landscape gardening.

Several of them showed foundation and border planting always used by the best landscape gardeners. Foundation plantings are composed of flowers and shrubbery so placed as to screen the unsightly foundations of buildings.

Border plantings, as the name indicates, are plants located along the borders of walks or driveways.

The slides graphically brought out the beauty of placing trees and shrubbery along the edges of the grounds, walks and drives and leaving the lawns open. Open lawns, Mr. Hannon explained, appear larger than those that are covered with trees or shrubbery.

Some of the slides illustrated the pyramid planting of plants, that is, with the highest growing plants in the rear, the next tallest immediately in front of them and the smallest or lowest plants in front.

The slides also illustrated the best methods of planting trees, shrubs, and flowers on the farm, especially along driveways and to screen out buildings, feed lots and other unattractive places.

While the slides were being shown, Hannon explained the pictures, pointing out the good or bad features of the method of landscaping illustrated.

Jury Dismissed In Darling Case

A mistrial resulted when the jury in the Jack Darling case Tuesday could not agree and was dismissed.

Darling was sentenced in Midland last year on a charge of attempted assault on a Midland child, but the court of criminal appeals reversed the decision on a technicality found in the judge's charge to the jury, and remanded the case to the lower courts for retrial.

The case has not been set for trial again.

A couple of default judgement cases were heard in court this morning.

Red Cross Comes To Aid Welfare

Assistance given the Midland Welfare association in its work in Midland through financing a major part of the work during the past few months by the Red Cross was brought forcibly to the attention of welfare association officials Wednesday when a check covering indebtedness created in welfare work was signed by Mrs. John Haley, president of the Midland chapter of the American Red Cross society.

Jesuit Priests Ordered Out of Spain

Spain's new revolutionist government had spoken—the Jesuits must go! And pictured here is the scene, highly significant in the world's history, as black-robed members of the centuries-old Catholic order were expelled from their native land.

Pope Prays for Peace

Inviting people of all religions to pray for peace, Pope Pius XI observed the tenth anniversary of his coronation. This picture shows the Pope seated on the Papal Throne in the Consistory Hall of Vatican City during a meeting of Cardinals when plans for the anniversary celebration were made.

RAINFALL TURNS TO ICE OVER THE AREA, REPORTED

Rain fell in Midland this afternoon and froze as it fell.

At 1:30 the temperature was 32 degrees, and rainfall had totalled .81 inch which, added to the .32 inch of Tuesday, makes a total of 1.13 inches for the week.

There was little rain over most of the area, reports received here said. There was a shower in Big Spring and ice, rain this morning at Wink, rain last night and this morning at Kermit, a heavy rain at McCamey, heavy clouds and freezing temperatures at Fort Stockton.

Sleet and a good rain fell at Florey this morning, ranchmen reported.

Schools to Observe Bicentennial Fete

Midland public schools will observe the Washington bicentennial with a holiday of Washington's birthday, Feb. 22, according to a decision made today by the board of education.

The Washington program of the high school will be presented Thursday evening at 7:30, in the auditorium. Other ward programs will be given Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Driving Contest Is Postponed by Rain

Inclement weather today caused postponement of the truck driving contest announced by the Willis Truck & Tractor company. Time for the contest will be announced as soon as the weather clears, Offie Walker, manager, said this afternoon. The contest is for truck drivers to see who can drive the farthest on one quart of gasoline in an International truck furnished by the company.

Barking of Dog Is Signal That House Is Afire in Attic

The incessant barking of a six-months-old pit bulldog, Bozo, aroused Mrs. Nannie L. Wright from sleep just in time to find flames leaping from the upper story of her White House rooms at 104 North Carrizo about 3 o'clock this morning.

The upper part of the house was badly burned and the lower part damaged by water.

The place was only partially insured.

"I kept hearing Bozo bark and I got up to see what was bothering him," Mrs. Wright said. "Just as I stepped from the back door it seemed I was enveloped in flame and heat."

The fire started in the attic.

Anti-Snoring Device Made

LONDON. (UP)—An anti-snoring device that sticks a pin into a sleeper, or gives an electric shock every time the sleeper snores, has been registered at the British Patent office.

It is predicted that the device will be in great demand where snoring is recognized as grounds for divorce.

FLYER IS CHARGED IN BANK CASE

Popular Officer Is Traced by Plate On Automobile

SEGUIN, Feb. 17. (UP)—Second Lieutenant Herbert C. Lichtenberger, 28, of Oklahoma City, a Randolph field pilot and a graduate of Creighton university, was charged here with holding up the state bank at Schertz, 20 miles west of here, Monday.

Six hundred and eight-four dollars was taken in the robbery. Five hundred of the loot has been recovered, officers claimed.

Lichtenberger was arrested following identification of the license of the car used in the holdup. The car was found in San Antonio.

Sheriff Albert Hausser made the arrest in cooperation with military authorities, who agreed to yield him for trial.

Two charges of robbery with firearms and one for assault to murder were filed against Lichtenberger, who is married and has two children.

One shot was fired at a customer during the robbery.

Officers declared the bank cashier, Thulemeyer, and his wife had identified Lichtenberger as the man who had robbed them.

ELLIOTT BARRON ANNOUNCES FOR COUNTY JUDGE

Elliott H. Barron, well known Midland business man, announced this morning his candidacy for the office of county judge of Midland county.

Barron was born in Midland county and has either attended school or been in business here all his life, save for the time he was away from home at Simmons and Baylor universities and in the service during the war.

Barron is in the insurance, abstract and real estate business. Prior to that, he was in the dry goods and the cattle business.

ALFALFA BILL AT BIG FETE

To Collinsville, His Birthplace for Celebration

COLLINSVILLE. (Grayson Co.) Texas, Feb. 17. (UP)—The "local boy who made good" comes home tomorrow amid the cheers of his boyhood associates.

William H. (Alfalpa Bill) Murray, who rose from a North Texas farm boy to Governor of Oklahoma and now is ready to start a campaign for the democratic presidential candidacy, will return to the city of his birth, Collinsville.

One of the greatest celebrations in the history of North Texas awaited his return. Tomorrow morning a motorcade to extend from Durant, Okla., to Collinsville will form a gigantic parade to greet the "commoner," famous for his "cottonfield" philosophy, his red gaulouses and five-cent cigars.

Although the governor had been invited to make a formal declaration for the democratic presidential nomination, he declared he was "coming home to reminisce."

Formal announcement of his candidacy will be made two days later, during the Oklahoma state democratic convention, his leaders announced. That, however, will not detract from the celebration here.

A tremendous crowd, variously estimated from 40,000 to 100,000 was expected for the celebration. Extra traffic officers were to patrol all highways to facilitate entry of the vast motor pilgrimage into Collinsville.

Hundreds of Oklahoma admirers were to follow their governor and join with "old-timers" from a dozen North Texas counties in honoring Murray.

A monument, honoring the governor and commemorating his birth on a farm near here, will be unveiled. A full day of festivities, interspersed with an address by Murray, giving his viewpoint on national issues, and talks by prominent Texans, are scheduled.

All this was for a poor Texas youth who fought his own way to earn an education, to become an authority on constitutional law and government and to become one of the most picturesque figures in the United States.

Murray was born on a farm near Collinsville. He describes his birth as "born in a Texas snowstorm and cradled in the lap of adversity."

This quotation he frequently uses as an introduction to his addresses.

When he was 12 years old Murray ran away from home. He earned his living by working on Texas farms. His early education consisted of that acquired in rural schools and in private study.

Then he worked his way through college at Weatherford, finishing a four-year course in twenty months. For a while he taught in rural schools in Grayson and adjoining counties, studying law at night. In summers he worked in the cotton fields, partly for recreation, chiefly for the money.

"It could never pick cotton," Murray said. "I would work until my back nearly broke and my hands were blistered and I couldn't get above the 100-pounds-a-day mark. Right then I decided that was no life for me."

Murray began his political life in Texas but soon migrated to Oklahoma where he became one of the outstanding figures in Oklahoma history.

After Sight-Seeing Blimp's Crash

Victim of a sudden, fierce gale, the Goodyear dirigible Columbia is shown above as it appeared—a jumble of wreckage—after crashing at Flushing, Long Island. The ship's mechanic was killed when he jumped or fell from this gondola as destruction neared; the pilot was unhurt. The blimp, which has been carrying passengers on sight-seeing trips over New York City since the summer of 1930, was damaged in a preliminary crash when a down draft of wind forced it to the ground near its hangar. The fatal crash occurred a half-hour later when the already partially disabled craft proved unmanageable.

HOOVER ASKS CONGRESS TO ALLOW A COMPLETE REORGANIZATION OF THE EXECUTIVE BRANCH OF GOVERNMENT

WASHINGTON, Feb. 17. (UP)—President Hoover asked congress for the authority to effect a complete reorganization of the executive branch of government.

In a special message, the president said that rapid growth business and commissions were costing millions yearly.

He charged that scores of these organizations overlap.

He said it was impossible to estimate the exact amount of saving but the government "could and should be made more efficient."

He proposed the consolidation and grouping of various executive administrative activities under a single-headed responsibility.

AGED SISTERS MAKE SUICIDE PACT, HANG SELVES; ONE LIVES

SCHULENBERG, Feb. 17. (UP)—Two aged sisters, despondent over financial difficulties and ill health, today entered a suicide pact, resulting in the death of one.

Annie Seydler 60, was found hanging by a rope inside a door. Mary, 62, was found under the bed of another room with a rope twisted tightly around her neck, still alive.

Justice J. P. Vogt returned a suicide verdict in the death of Annie and said Mary hanged herself in a similar manner but the rope broke. She is expected to recover.

ECTOR COUNTY HAS EMPLOYMENT AGENCY

ODESSA, Feb. 17.—The American legion post at Odessa will have charge of an unemployment bureau at Odessa, announced officials here today. Blanks have already been received and the legion has placed a number of unemployed to work. Each business house has been asked to cooperate to the fullest extent. The agency pertains only to Ector county people.

MARTIN COUNTY IS WELL REPRESENTED

Stanton and Martin county were especially well represented at the short course in Midland. Many school pupils were here for the sessions both days. Students from Martin county were here to study the best farm methods and expressed much appreciation for the reception given them in Midland. Mrs. W. C. Glazier, wife of the principal of the Stanton high school, was among the main performers on one of the programs. Public appreciation was expressed by several of the program managers for the fine attendance from Stanton and Martin county.

DEBUCHI INFORMS NIPPON

Stimson Excited, Jap Says, and About To Send Note

TOKYO, Feb. 17. (UP)—The United States will hold Japan responsible for any Americans endangered during operations in Shanghai, Ambassador Debuschi at Washington reported to his government today.

He reported that he had made "fruitless attempts" to dissuade Secretary Stimson from sending new representations which have not yet been made officially public.

Stimson was adamant and very excited, Debuschi's report said.

BRITISH SEAMEN KILLED BY SHELLS

SHANGHAI, Feb. 17. (UP)—Two British seamen were fatally wounded by Chinese shells striking the Hongkew wharf within the international settlement.

The seamen were taken aboard a steamer where H. G. Prior and H. A. Francis died.

Heavy bombardment ceased this morning at nine o'clock.

Diplomats of powers were continuing efforts for peace while Japanese and Chinese prepared for a big battle.

PEACE MOVE MADE BY BOTH COUNTRIES

SHANGHAI, Feb. 17. (UP)—A concerted move for peace was made by Japanese and Chinese authorities today just as Shanghai reached the darkest hour of nearly three weeks of terror.

Important discussions were arranged for Thursday morning between Japanese representatives and commanders of the Chinese Nineteenth army.

General Chiang Kai-Shek reported that he was en route here from Nanking. It is believed that he will attempt peace.

JUDGE HILL NOT TO BE CANDIDATE, SAYS HIS LETTER

County Judge M. R. Hill, who has held that office for three terms, will not be a candidate for re-election, he announced today in a letter addressed to The Reporter-Telegram, and in which he expressed his appreciation to the public.

The letter follows: "I am taking this method of expressing to the voters of Midland county my sincere thanks and profound appreciation for the office to which I have been entrusted for over the past five years. I have decided to let my tenure of office expire with this term and I shall not be a candidate for re-election. "During the years of progress and development that have just passed (see JUDGE HILL page 6)

The dime a-dance girl
 BU JOAN CLAYTON
 AIFA READING SERVICE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Beautiful Ellen Rossiter, a salesgirl in Barclay's department store lives with her mother, Molly Rossiter, and her elder sister, Myra, and her young brother, Mike. The two girls support the family. Molly foolishly spends money saved to pay the rent. Steven Barclay, 57 and Ellen's employer, lends her an evening dress so she can secure a job night dancing at Dreamland. At the dance ball she meets fascinating Larry Harrowgate, an artist. Later she breaks an engagement with Larry when she learns he is engaged to Elizabeth Bowers, a debutante. However, when he comes to Dreamland demanding an explanation she makes another date with him for Sunday.

Her mother and sister favor Barclay's suit. Sunday morning Ellen and her mother quarrel when the girl declines an engagement with Barclay.

Molly bursts into tears and Ellen, repentant, promises she will do her best to fall in love with the older man.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII
 Ellen had not expected to enjoy that afternoon with Larry Harrowgate. She would have said that her mother's hysterics, her own dissatisfaction with the state of affairs between them, had spoiled the afternoon. But when at 4:30, only 20 minutes late, he appeared leaping up the stairs, she saw that she had been wrong.

"I'm a mountain goat," he shouted when he caught sight of her in this doorway. "I'm good for ten flights yet."

Ellen laughed. "You're panting just the same," she jeered. "Did you by any chance see Mrs. Clancy as you were coming up? She generally opens her door to investigate all callers."

"That party with the red face and the mob cap I flew past on the second floor?" he inquired as he reached the landing and paused panting. "Sure. She was so interested I thought she meant to join me on the last lap."

"You're lucky she didn't," Ellen advised him with a little giggle. "You'd have had to carry her, I'm sure."

"That was a break."

They stood for a moment laughing at the door of the living room where afternoon sunlight shone mercifully on the hedge-podge of furniture and leveled its rays as well on the shabby, worn carpet and the faded wall paper. Ellen had thoroughly swept the apartment and folded up the Sunday papers, but she had changed nothing. She felt an obscure determination that Larry Harrowgate should see them as they were. Now that he was there, as thoroughly at ease as though he were in the home of a millionaire, she breathed with relief.

He was no snob.

Molly and Mike had disappeared but Myra was there. She refused their urgent invitation to join them on the score of some darned she must do. So Ellen and Larry departed alone.

"Four sister's swell," Larry observed.

"She could see that we wanted to be alone," he went on. "I bet my hat she had no darned to do."

Ellen was conscious of not wanting to forget a word of all this. She knew she would want to remember often what he had said. It would have been better if he had not laughed so. Still there it was—he had said they wanted to be alone.

They giggled when Mrs. Clancy opened the door and peeped out at them. Ellen did not speak. That would have been too embarrassing for the kindly neighbor who was pretending she was invisible. Then they reached the street where a collection of grimy urchins, their Sunday clothes already hopelessly soiled, scrambled over a shining blue roadster.

"What a marvelous car," Ellen breathed.

"What you can see of it isn't so bad. At the moment it looks something like a human ant hill," he remarked carelessly. "Doesn't belong to me. I wish it did. But I've the use of it until seven."

Larry dug into his pockets for change and came out with a handful of nickels and dimes. For all the world like a pitcher preparing to hurl a fast one, he swung his arm, whispering to Ellen to watch. Coins sprung from his hand and clattered to the street in all directions, some of them rolling half a block away. At once the roadster was abandoned by the shouting, shrieking youngsters, who pounced after the elusive coins. Several fist fights had begun by the

Movies' Ultra Cinderellas Call Work Fairy Godmother

By DAN THOMAS
 NEA Service Writer

There's one story which never grows old or out of date in Hollywood.

It's the old Cinderella yarn—as good today as it was in the days of Gladys Smith, the little Canadian girl who, without money for carriage hire, her shabby pocketbook, got a job in the movies and rose to international fame as Mary Pickford, "America's Sweetheart."

With very few exceptions, popular screen stars of today have followed the Cinderella formula. But they say their "fairy godmother" has been plain, hard work.

Le Seur, Kansas City department store clerk, would some day become one of our leading screen celebrities. Lucilla chucked her job to go to New York and try to make her way in musical comedy. Finally Broadway offered her a chance, but the movies had captured her fancy so she left for Hollywood.

She changed her name to Joan Crawford. But the only fame she could gather was as the "hey-hey" girl who won dancing cup after dancing cup. It didn't seem possible that she some day would be a star. But that's just what she is.

There's not much new that can be told about Greto Garbo's years of struggle and eventual sudden rise to fame.

Years before the world ever heard of the great Garbo, she was modeling hats in a Stockholm department store. Later she was dressed in tricot clothes and cast as a comedienne in a number of one-reel Swedish and German comedies.

There wasn't any glamour about Garbo when she arrived in this country. She was considered only a fair bet, but one picture made her the sensation of American filmdom.

And so goes the story of Hollywood. A bum yesterday, a star today. A bum again tomorrow? Who can say?

One of Gable's closest friends is the man who holds the Cinderella—or should we say Cinderjack—record. Wally Beery is that man.

Nobody can tell him the meaning of poverty. He has been through it, not once but three times during his life.

He got his first job when he was 12 years old. A husky kid for his age, he managed to get on with a circus doing odd jobs.

From the circus, Wally drifted into musical comedy where he made quite a hit as a female impersonator. Pictures came more or less naturally as the next step. In those days starring, directing and writing his own scripts brought him the magnificent salary of $75 a week.

"It wasn't much but it was enough on which to marry Gloria Swanson," Wally once told me. "I'd like to see anybody try that now!"

But, as so often happens to good jobs, Wally's blew up. Then came his second rise as a rough and tumble comedian co-starring with Raymond Hatton. And then another tumble.

Now he's right back on top of the heap again.

Not so many years ago a cheaply dressed girl trudged the streets of New York searching for work so that she, her mother and sister could eat.

Her name is Mrs. Irving Thalberg, better known to screen fans as Norma Shearer.

Norma was determined to become a film actress but there were times when even extra jobs were scarce and the family had to eat. Finally she was brought to Hollywood with a six weeks' film contract.

That was the beginning of her ascension. But it cost a lot of hard work. Small roles, featured roles, stardom. That's why she has stayed on top.

Nobody ever dreamed that Lucille time Ellen and Larry, laughing helplessly, stepped into the empty car and drove off.

"You'll never be rich if you throw away money like that," the girl said after a while.

"Ho! Ho! So you're another one of those people who's going to tell me things for my own good," he commented with a sideways and delighted glance at her.

"Certainly not," she assured him with indifference.

Nevertheless her color rose and even as she entered her swift denial she was wondering who those others were. Certainly this charming, irresponsible young man needed to be told things for his own good. Was he referring to Elizabeth Bowers, his fiancée? Briefly Ellen experienced a twist of pure pain. Then she determined sensibly that no such speculations should spoil the afternoon.

For a few hours at least Larry belonged to her exclusively. She must get what fun she could from those hours.

"I did tell me that you were poor," she ventured.

"That's right. A poor man with a rich man's habits. Don't you feel sorry for me?"

"Can't say that I do, exactly."

He laughed, and called her hard-hearted. Soon they were wrangling gaily, pleased with each other and with themselves, pleased to be together, riding in a smooth, luxurious car on such a glorious day.

"That's a nice frock," Larry said as they swept out of Pine street and toward Manhattan.

"I wore it last night," Ellen responded innocently. "This is the same one with the jacket added."

"You're a smart little girl, aren't you, Ellen?"

"Girls have to be smart about clothes," Ellen confessed, hiding her exultation with the compliment.

"With or without the jacket, that dress is just your ticket," Larry summarized it.

The car slid over Brooklyn bridge. Ellen, glancing up, surprised an odd expression on Larry's face. He spoke but the roar of Sunday traffic drowned his voice. Helplessly the girl shook her head.

Lower Manhattan was quieter. Empty office buildings frowned down upon empty canyons that on week days were filled with scurrying stenographers and clerks and brokers and customers' men. Nothing open, not a restaurant, not a drug-store, not a news stand. A few pedestrians idled along lower Broadway, a few cars idled along the deserted street, but everywhere was the peace of Sunday. Ellen waited for Larry to speak. He had wanted something; he had said something on the bridge. His persistent silence disturbed the girl, made her nervous and absurdly anxious.

"Well," she said at length.

"Well," he repeated after her.

"You said something to me on the bridge, but I couldn't hear," she told him stiffly.

"So I did," he agreed exasperatedly.

"What was it?"

"Something I hadn't any right to say to you."

"Oh, for heaven's sake!" she cried

GET CIVILIZED OR PERISH!

The authorities in British East Africa, who have ordered the execution of 60 natives for the murder of an old woman who was supposed to be a witch, evidently believe that untutored tribesmen can be civilized by sheer force.

Sixty scaffolds in a row ought to make an imposing spectacle. The surviving natives, whatever their private emotions about the affair may be, will at least be impressed by the fact that the old custom of killing witches is not approved by the government.

So, in the course of time, it will happen that no more witches are killed in British East Africa. And the natives—whose mental processes will still find nothing wrong in the idea of killing witches—will, in spite of themselves, take on one more attribute of civilization.

This is all rather interesting to meditate upon, especially since all the rest of us are more or less in the same boat.

We have managed, without intending to, to get ourselves into a spot in which we must very speedily take on the customs of a higher civilization or perish.

First we mechanized the world. We made possible the production of goods on a scale infinitely greater than anything previously dreamed of. We improved transportation, so that all distances shrank to a fiftieth of their old length. We improved communication systems, so that every man had the world for a neighbor. We erected an enormously intricate and complicated financial-industrial system, so that the whole world has to stand or fall together.

Having done this, we failed to understand that a civilization of that sort could not be conducted by men and women whose mental outlook was just about what the mental outlook of their great-grandparents had been.

Our troubles today come chiefly from the fact that we have not yet been able to live up to this glittering new civilization. Our minds, for instance, still accept such things as ignorance, poverty, prejudice, international rivalry and war as natural features of human society—although our new civilization must inevitably go to pot unless such things are eliminated.

We stand pretty much where the African natives stand. We must get civilized or perish.

INTERNATIONAL POLICY

Senator Borah is undoubtedly entirely correct in saying that no government will give serious consideration to the French proposal for the establishment of a powerful international police force.

One need only recall the shudders that the mention of "Article X" aroused in the United States during the 1920 campaign to imagine how that proposal would be received on this side of the Atlantic. And there is little chance that people in Europe would be much more hospitable to it.

And yet, when you stop to think about it—isn't it, in its essentials, extremely logical? We want disarmament, we want some system of settling international disputes that everyone will accept, we want to "outlaw war"; isn't it, after all, perfectly sensible to propose a powerful international organization that can compel acceptance of these ideas? The French proposal is doubtless utterly impractical; but it deserves consideration, just the same.

THE NEW CHINESE SOLDIER

The course of some of the recent fighting around Shanghai will probably make some of us revise our preconceived opinions about the capabilities of the Chinese soldiers.

Heretofore, Chinese armies had been considered more or less inefficient. The ease with which Japan mopped up in Manchuria strengthened that opinion. Again and again the Japanese met "armies" that far outnumbered them, and again and again they routed them in short order.

But the fighting around Shanghai has been different. The Chinese have shown a surprising ability to give as good as they receive, and the job that the Japanese expected to do in a few days wasn't that kind of job.

These particular Chinese soldiers happen to be well-drilled and well equipped. Under such circumstances, apparently, the Chinese make excellent soldiers.

Climatic Extremes Drive Them Crazy

Sir Saiyid Taimur Bin Faisal Bin Turki, Sultan of Muskat, Arabia, and ruler of the hottest country on earth, is quitting the throne.

He can't stand the climate. Sir Saiyid, according to news dispatches, is turning over his job of being sultan to his heir this month. Courtiers had just brought him the annual weather report.

The thermometer bubbles at 189 degrees in the sun a good part of the year. It averages nearly 100 degrees day in and day out.

His capital is the chief city of Oman. At the mouth of the Persian gulf it is considered an important city by the British.

"Phew!" said Saiyid when they told him the annual rainfall in his Arabian desert province averaged only three and one-half inches annually.

"I'm going north," he muttered, dismissing his court.

Professor X, the mysterious exile of Bulun, a scrub village in northern Siberia, known as the coldest inhabited spot on the globe, is staying on.

He has to stand the climate. Marked on the banks of the Lena river, in sight of the sluggish Arctic ocean, he has to grin and bear it.

Temperatures there have registered 126 degrees below zero. Through 10 winter months it averages 90 degrees below.

In midsummer the thermometer staggers up to only 40 degrees at the highest.

For about six weeks it is above freezing. Two feet below ground lie eternal frosts that never thaw.

Along with his few instruments, a handful of books and his memories, Professor X went into exile for some mysterious offense against the Russian Soviet government.

"The howling of the dogs through the endless winter nights is driving me insane," he told his last visitors.

Miss Derryberry Honored by Gold Star Club

Members of the Gold Star home demonstration club held their regular second Friday meeting with the Misses Campbell as hostesses. Nine active members were present. Mrs. McCormick and Mrs. Vest were visitors.

Miss Genavieve Derryberry, county agent, who met with the club for the last time before her administration ends on March 1, was honored at the tea hour with a treasure hunt. The treasure, a luncheon cloth, was found by the honoree who followed clever directions.

Year books and score cards showing the approximate canning budget were distributed by Miss Derryberry. This work will be carried out as outlined.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Bill Countess on the fourth Friday.

The guests were served refreshments reflecting the Valentine motif. Sandwiches were cut in heart shapes and cakes were covered in pink and white icing.

Officials of the club told of the profit received from the demonstration work and expressed their regret in the discontinuance of the office.

Peppy Partner Party

Choice Cooks' Corner

Fish Mush

1 cup oatmeal
3½ cups boiling water
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups flaked fish
¾ teaspoon pepper

All 1 teaspoon salt to boiling water and slowly sift the cornmeal, stirring constantly. Cook over the flame for ten minutes, stirring to prevent sticking. Then cook over boiling water for three hours. Add remaining salt, pepper and fish with skin and bones removed. Turn into a well-buttered brick loaf pan and let stand overnight, or until thoroughly chilled and firm. Cut in slices about ¼ inch thick and roll in flour. Sauté in hot fat in frying pan until a golden brown.

Scrambled Eggs with Smoked Salmon

½ lb. smoked salmon
1 cup solid canned tomato
1 sweet green pepper
2 onions
1 tablespoon butter
¾ teaspoon pepper
5 eggs

Cut salmon in thin slices and soak in water for three hours, changing five or six times. Drain. Hold pepper over flame, turning to prevent burning. Scrape off blistered skin, holding pepper under cold water. Cut flesh in shreds, discarding pith and seeds. Melt butter in frying pan and add onions peeled and minced and prepared pepper and cook until soft. Add tomato and cook a few minutes longer. Place salmon over top of vegetables and cook until it separates into small pieces. When ready to serve pour over eggs slightly beaten. Mix with a fork and season with pepper. Cook, lifting lightly with a fork until eggs are "set". Serve at once.

Helpful Health Suggestions

By Martha Bredemeier

Health Questions

Q.—Please tell me briefly just what and where are tonsils and adenoids.

Ans.—Tonsils and adenoids are composed of glandular tissues. The tonsils are arranged in small masses on either side of the throat and found where the nose and throat join. Together with another very small mass on the back of the tongue called the "lingual" tonsil, these glandular masses touch each other when swallowing and form a closed ring through which everything swallowed must pass. This tissue helps to catch and destroy germs and other impurities, and it may have other important uses that will be better understood when science may disclose more facts about "internal secretions." At any rate it stands as a "ring of sentinels stationed to guard the post of entry of the body."

Tonsils which are large but not diseased may not injure the health and it is a good plan to try and save them until a child arrives at puberty when they naturally tend to shrink.

Adenoids which are enlarged, however, interfere with breathing and may press on delicate structures in the nose and at the base of the brain. Adenoids should always be removed if they are large enough to really interfere with free breathing with closed mouth. Always consult

Q.—We hear so much about the necessity of sea-food in the diet. Just what is the value of sea-food?

Ans.—Fish contains a variety of mineral elements including calcium, phosphorus, copper, iron, manganese, sulphur, magnesium, iodine, and many others; such elements are essential to health. The calcium is largely in the bones but in many varieties of canned fish, such as salmon, sardine, etc., the bones are so softened or dissolved that they are quite frequently used with the flesh. The iodine in salt water fish and shell fish makes them a very valuable food as a protective against goiter. This is doubtless one of the reasons why people who live at or near the sea coast are not inclined to this disease. Sea foods are claimed to be 200 times richer in iodine than land foods.

Q.—What is a "carrier" of disease?

Ans.—A carrier of disease germs is a person in whose secretions or excretions the germs of communicable disease are present, but who does not present any clinical evidence of such disease.

Period of Eruption of Teeth

The time that the teeth come in varies slightly, but the following table is approximately correct:

Temporary Teeth, 20 in a Set

Central incisors, 5th to 7th month.
Lateral incisors, 8th to 10th month.
First molars, 12th to 14th month.
Cuspid, 18th to 20th month.
Second molars, 24th to 30th month.

Permanent Teeth, 32 in a Set

First molars, 5th to 7th year.
Central incisors, 6th to 8th year.
Lateral incisors, 7th to 9th year.
First bicuspids, 8th to 10th year.
Lower cuspid, 9th to 11th year.
Second bicuspids, 19th to 12th year.
Upper cuspid, 11th to 13th year.
Second molars, 12th to 14th year.
Third molars (wisdom teeth), 17th year or later.

Vegetable Base

Creamed dishes in summer time should use vegetables instead of toast as a base. Try par-boiling spinach and using it under creamed fish.

A Salad Suggestion

An unusual salad can be made by combining shredded cabbage with diced orange and grapefruit sections. Add plain mayonnaise and serve it on lettuce arranged on individual dishes. For a buffet supper, it is equally as interesting served in a large bowl and garnished around the edges with lettuce or parsley.

Bird Care

This is the time of year when you should make certain that your pet birds have their daily green. Pepper grass, a little heart of lettuce and other greens are much appreciated by them and will help to keep them singing.

Left-over Pork

Cold roast pork usually doesn't seem as easy to use as beef or lamb. You can make an excellent dish in the following way, however: Dice the lean cold pork and arrange in a buttered baking dish together with four sliced, hard-boiled eggs. Cover with a thin white sauce, top with bread crumbs and bake slowly for a half hour.

HORNED TOADS GRAB TIE IN SOUTHWEST CONFERENCE CAGE LOOP

AD DIETZEL SETS PACE IN THE SCORING

FORT WORTH, Feb. 17.—Led by their crack center, Adolph Dietzel, the T. C. U. Horned Frogs went into a tie with the Baylor University Bears for the leadership of the Southwest conference cage race here last night by defeating the Bears, 33-31, in one of the most bitterly contested games ever played in Fort Worth. The result leaves both teams with 6 victories and two losses and each has four more games to play.

Frogs Jump Out Ahead

The Frogs jumped into the lead on the opening play, when Dietzel sank a field goal. Only once were the Bears able to pull up even after that and the Frogs were out in front the rest of the way although only a few points separated the teams at any time. The half ended 19-15 for the Frogs.

Dietzel was the big factor in the T. C. U. victory. The lanky one, besides controlling the tip almost all the way, sank seven field goals, many of them of the circus variety, to lead in the scoring. He collected three personal fouls the last two minutes without another personal being called on him. Sumner's brilliant play, especially on the defense, was outstanding and Walker, Green and Brannon turned in great games.

Alford, with 9 points, led the Bears in scoring. Strickland played a great game and scored 8 points and Barnett came in from guard to count five tallies.

A Column of It's

If Uncle Robbie still were manager of the Brooklyn boys, a pitcher named Waite Hoyt would have a job.

If Joe Boley has a good year at shortstop, the Indians will be fighting the leaders right down to the wire.

If you think the conductor of this department ever will ride a bobbed or a pair of skis, you are not thinking correctly.

If Jack Sharkey licks Max Schmeling in June, I'm going to try to get my old job back driving a truck.

If Jack Dempsey ever gets into the ring with Max Schmeling, I won't know whether to laugh or cry.

If Jim Londos wrestles Rudy Dusk one more time the two of them should be sued for forming a combination in restraint of trade.

Fireman Jim Flynn announces that he licks Jack Dempsey once and can do it again. Next we ought to hear something from Fat Boy Willie Meehan.

Well, Who's Wrong?

If the filly Top Flight wins the Kentucky Derby, all the wise horsemen in the world will be badly fooled, except some horse people named Whitney, who will bet that all the wise horsemen in the world are wrong on this one.

If Gar Wood doesn't set a new speedboat record pretty soon and have it approved, your correspondent will be fit to be tied.

If Horace Ford, former Cincinnati shortstop sent to the Cards, thinks he is going to be the regular shortstop for the Cardinals because Charlie Gelbert is a hold-out, he is more optimistic than he should be.

If Eddie Delker from Rochester thinks Branch Rickey is sincere when he says Eddie Delker is a better shortstop than Charlie Gelbert, Eddie is a young man easily flattered.

If Gene Sarazan isn't the leading winter money winner when the golfers reach Pinehurst, it will be because he breaks his arm between now and then.

The Cardinals have about 700 ball players on their various farm teams. Wonder what a holdout like Charlie Gelbert thinks about?

'Twould Be a Break

If Jules Ladoumègue is barred from Olympic competition, the United States will have a chance to win for itself a 1500-meter race that France would win otherwise.

If the six-day bicycle races should run for 12 days, they would be twice as terrible.

If Burleigh Grimes loses a game to the Cardinals this year he will lose 14 other games, too.

If Jim Corbett doesn't hurry up and get out of the hospital, he won't be ready to meet the winner of the Schmeling-Sharkey thing, after all.

There is nothing much new in the world. Twenty-five years ago at this time of the year Addie Joss announced he would forsake baseball for business—if he didn't get $4000 a year.

Spring training is a season when a big league manager discovers that

RATHER THAN ONLY ONE GAME PLAYED IN MIDLAND, THREE MAY BE DRAWN

The Class A. District 4 football schedule for 1932 recently published is in error, according to local school authorities. According to the schedule as published, Midland would play only one home game in 1932, that with Colorado on Oct. 21; the Bulldogs meeting Sweetwater, Big Spring, San Angelo, and McCamey on foreign fields.

When the first conference schedule was made out in the spring of 1931, Midland made two-year written contracts with every team in the district, and according to these contracts, as made at that time or amended later, Colorado and McCamey will play in Midland again in 1932 and San Angelo must come to Midland if Midland offers San Angelo the same terms under which the game was played in San Angelo this past season.

In addition to having the majority of their conference games at home, the Bulldogs will undoubtedly play at least three strong Class B teams or non-conference A teams on Lackey field, offering a minimum of six good football games at home.

Intersectional Games Likely

It is very likely that the relations so pleasantly established with the Austin high Panthers of El Paso will continue indefinitely and that the Bulldogs will open the 1932 season with a trip to El Paso.

In the hope of providing a good trip at the beginning of every season, efforts will be made to make a two-year agreement with one of the other El Paso high schools, either El Paso high or Bowie high. In the event of such arrangement, the Bulldogs would go to El Paso each year and bring one El Paso team here each year.

Years of Study

Perfecting them has been a triumph of years of study by Dr. Burgess. He was just awarded the Perkin medal for 1932, given by the American Section of the Society of Chemical Industry for "distinguished services in the field of applied chemistry."

As he stood before the New York chemists and casually dropped one in a container of water and saw it bob on the surface like a cork he made this prediction:

"It appears possible that two bricks can be laid at one time. It has not been accomplished, as the technical practice has not been perfected, but, although the process is still in the development stage, the outcome looks promising."

His process for making the light brick is a closely-guarded secret.

HEAVY SCORING IN CAGE GAMES TUESDAY NIGHT

Southern Ice cagers walloped the Haberdashers of the United Dry Goods from pillar to post in an engagement of the two teams last night, and Clinic had an equally easy time in stowing away Prairie.

The first game resulted in a 42-17 score, the second 65-30.

One hundred and fifty-two points were scored in the two games.

The Clinic-Prairie game went down as unofficial, both teams recruiting players from outside their roster.

Floating Brick Is Revolutionary

NEW YORK.—A brick floating in a tub of water... A life preserver of cement bricks supporting a man in the seething ocean... A building five times as high as the Empire State building constructed of bricks little heavier than cork... Sounds dizzy, doesn't it? But such bricks are actually being made. Like the older type heavy bricks, they are made from clay—in 12 hours. Ordinary bricks require three full weeks.

Dr. C. F. Burgess, once a teacher of chemistry in the University of Wisconsin, is the inventor. He demonstrated these "cork bricks" before a gathering of noted New York chemists, and thereupon opened what may well be a new era in building construction.

Will Cut Costs

His invention means that the cost of big buildings will be materially reduced. Because the bricks are so light, two can be laid while one was laid before. The importance of this can be realized, as it is now known that it costs four times as much to lay a brick as the brick is worth.

It is expected that, once these new bricks are on the market in commercial quantities, building will be stimulated. Prohibitive costs will not force delays.

These bricks can be manufactured with a rough or smooth surface.

Mayor Suggests New Bridge Rules

SAN ANTONIO, (UP).—The bridge-conscious world today welcomed to their card tables a new system, designed and perfected by San Antonio's Mayor C. M. Chambers.

He calls it the "reproach-forcing" method because under its peculiar rules partners are so often forced to reproach one another. Some of the rules:

1. When a poor hand is dealt, signify it to your partner by exclaiming "who dealt this mess?"
2. If you have a poor partner, keep score yourself.
3. At every other round ask what is trump; it will show you're interested in the game.
4. Take your time; try several cards on a trick until you decide which you prefer.
5. Lead from your own hand or the dummy as convenient.
6. Always explain your plays before going set; it will impress others with your bridge knowledge.

Texas Teachers Are Good Wives

EL PASO, (UP).—Horace B. Fort, principal of the Austin high school, believes El Paso school teachers make ideal wives.

"El Paso teachers are broad-minded and make splendid wives," the principal said.

"Of course, the depression has hit the marriage market. Not one teacher in my school has been married this semester."

Regulations against married women teaching school have no effect on teachers planning to get married, Fort said.

"Teachers usually do not count on working after they marry."

WOMEN ENJOY TALK MADE ON FOOD METHODS

At the short course Tuesday, Miss Grace Marian Smith discussed the subject, "Feeding the Family" from two points of view—first, feeding the family to keep it in good health, and second, doing it in a way to make less work for the women folks.

"Preparing food does become a tiresome job," she said, "and sometimes we don't think it isn't a worthwhile occupation, but if we will check over the things we consider important we shall find that feeding the family is our most important business."

Declaring that the selection and preparation of food must not be left to ignorant, untrained help, no matter how faithful they are or how good their intentions, Miss Smith added: "The proper selection and preparation of food has to do with our health and a happy family life. Good food, rightly selected and properly prepared, helps build good spirits, good judgment, good health and good disposition. Most grouchy folks have stomach trouble. Most lazy folks have bad eating habits.

"Sometimes it is the man's notion that he 'doesn't like this and he doesn't like that.' But when he has chronic stomach trouble because of his poor eating habits, he'll doze himself with gallons of nasty tasting tonic. He doesn't like them either and generally they do him no good whatever because he's making new trouble for himself every day by wrong eating habits. Sometimes mother is to blame for serving too much rich, unwholesome food and omitting foods which contain minerals, vitamins and roughage.

"The man who eats a soggy, poorly prepared breakfast and goes out to trade mules with a neighbor who had a well-cooked, correctly selected breakfast will get the worst of the deal because the other man's brain is working better."

The speaker explained that the reason we think cooking is just a "no-count" job is because we have done it poorly. There is just as much science in selecting and preparing food as there is in other forms of chemistry. She complimented the special systems of dieting, home economics a required subject, and especially advocated its study in the intermediate and grammar grades before a large percentage of the pupils have left school.

Continuing, she stressed the need for everyone—men, women and children—understanding how to select their food to make a balanced ration. "We don't expect an automobile to run on water or vinegar or even good milk," she said. "It's made to run on gasoline. The human body is made to run on certain food elements. It can't run without them."

Emphasizing the fact that meals should be planned, not scrambled, she said, "Correct eating habits are the best health insurance. Train the family to like what is good for them. Children don't come into the world crying for sweets and pastry. You taught the boys and girls to like what they do eat. Teach them to like all the good foods."

"We plant our farms to provide what is needed to feed the live stock during the winter, yet only a few of us plant a garden big enough to provide what is needed to feed the family the year round. The food supply for the family is at least as important as that for the stock. We plan the feed for live stock to supply proteins, starches, minerals, and roughage, but we eat just any old thing ourselves. Until recently we did not realize that folks, too, need balanced rations."

She insisted that, "Cooking three meals every day is too much of a job for Mother," and as a remedy suggested, "long distance cooking, that is, cooking all at one time food for a number of meals and putting it on the shelves—in other words, canning meats, fruits and vegetables, so that Mother can open cans and serve ready cooked, balanced meals."

"During 20, 30, 40 years of her life, Mother cooks—one thousand meals a year. Then there are the dishes to wash, the cleaning and sewing to do, and the children to care for. Men dislike to milk cows twice a day—but what about Mother who cooks three times a day?"

The speaker took a good-natured dig at Dad. She said that sometimes Dad helps get the Sunday dinner. Things taste just a little extra good and he feels well satisfied with himself. He sits down and smokes and rocks and reads. He can't see that it is much of a job to get dinner. But while he is reading and smoking, Mother is in the kitchen washing the dishes and cleaning up things. About the time she gets through and is ready to sit down to rest, Dad comes in and wants to know if it isn't about time to eat. It generally is and Mother has the whole thing to do all over again.

Sanitation is one of the essentials in working with food. We must be clean. Not only is it a matter of decency, it is also a matter of health. We must never forget that we are working with food for people to eat.

"Milk," she reminded her hearers, "is the nearest perfect of all human foods. Every child should have at least a quart, and every grown-up a pint of milk a day. This does not mean that the child must drink a quart of milk a day, though most of them will if given a chance at good, clean, whole milk. It also means milk soups, creamed vegeta-

Barrymore at Ritz In Mighty Drama

What the name Morgan means to finance, Ford to the automobile industry and Rockefeller to the oil business, the name Barrymore means to the theatre—leadership. It is considered the "royal family of Broadway," and few are the persons who have not heard or seen one or more of its illustrious members on the stage or screen.

Lionel Barrymore, who plays the leading male role opposite Elissa Landi, in Raoul Walsh's Fox production, "The Yellow Ticket," opening today at the Ritz theatre, is its senior member, the brother of John and Ethel, and the son of the late Maurice Barrymore, long famous on the stage and George Drew Barrymore, equally as prominent as her popular husband.

Lionel was born in Philadelphia and made his stage debut in a play in which his parents starred. He was educated in New York and has travelled the world over. In Paris he took up painting and made his mark in that branch of art. A talented pianist, he took up composition and has to his credit several splendid concertos.

On the New York stage, he scored tremendous hits in "The Copperhead," "The Jest" and "Peter Ibbotson," and at the height of his stage career D. W. Griffith lured him to the silent screen to play in his picture called "Friends."

With the advent of talking pictures Barrymore found his stage experience invaluable and his finished acting ability helped greatly in making "The Lion and the Mouse," and "Alias Jimmy Valentine," the great successes they were.

Barrymore then decided that his combined knowledge of the stage and screen could be of better use to him as a director and he soon proved it with such brilliant directorial efforts as "Madame X," "The Rogue Song" and "Ten Cents a Dance."

In "The Yellow Ticket," Lionel Barrymore plays the role of the head of the Russian secret police, under the reign of the late czar, a heartless and merciless rake, drunk with power and overcome with greed.

In addition to Miss Landi and Barrymore, Laurence Olivier and Walton Byron are to be seen in important roles.

It was the custom among Romans to shave off the beard at the age of 21, and present it as an offering to household gods. A beard was grown after that age only as a sign of mourning.

SHORT COURSE ACCLAIMED FOR ITS GOOD WILL

Conclusion of the short course conducted by the International Harvester company Tuesday accomplished what civic leaders say was the most intensive and satisfactory good will building effort in the history of Midland.

Not only was much valuable information gained from experts who spoke, but the Midland spirit of co-operation was given new culture chamber of commerce officials say.

M. C. Ulmer, president of the organization, said the fine co-operation given by individuals, by the women's clubs, the churches, ministers, industries which entertained visitors, the high school, the orchestra, all performers on the programs, the Petroleum building and Yucca theatre management, the service clubs and all others who aided, showed Midland people can be accomplished through working together, and increased admiration and respect.

Coupled with the short course were goodwill trips to Stanton and Odessa conducted by the chamber of commerce, 12 personal contacts with rural schools, contacts through the chamber of commerce with schools in Martin, Ector and Andrews counties, the industrial tour which entertained and instructed rural school pupils and their parents and increased their appreciation for their community industries, which, in this instance happen to be in Midland; and the foot served each day, and the personal greetings extended at every session.

Civic leaders expressed sincere appreciation to the International Harvester company, that concern having borne the bulk of the expense, only a relatively small cost being borne by the Midland chamber of commerce for local expenses.

SPLASH-SPLASH
BOSTON—Michael Merino appeared at the Lynn police headquarters to lodge a complaint against a woman who hit her over the head with an umbrella. He explained he was driving a car past the woman. The car ran through a puddle of water and splashed it all over her. When Michael went back to pacify the irate woman, she cracked him over the skull several times with an umbrella.

"Men in Her Life" Colorful Romance

"Men in Her Life" tells the drama of a girl who, finding it madness to love, tried hating—and found it was folly to hate! Lois Moran plays the heroine of this picture, showing today at the Grand theatre, and Charles Bickford, Victor Varoni and Donald Dillaway play the men she either loves or hates.

The locale of the story is first France—Paris and a small village—and then New York. Julia Cavanaugh is an American girl traveling abroad in search of adventure with a romantic flavor—and finding plenty of both. Robbed by a Count who had promised to marry her but changed his mind when he found she had lost her fortune, she would have been in a sorry plight but for the retired racketeer who happened by. He had aspirations to be a gentleman and whenever he found Julia Cavanaugh's name in the social columns he always read about her. He knew her face so well from her pictures in the papers that he recognized her without an introduction. And this is the introduction to a romance that has plenty of thrills and obstacles before reaching a happy conclusion.

"Men in Her Life" is based on a story by Warner Fabian.

Judge Hill—

in our county, it has been my privilege by your ballot to be entrusted with this office of confidence and responsibility. The office has been one of vital concern to me to represent the people in such a way that the county business affairs should progress along with other commercial developments in the county; and looking back over the work during the past five years, I am happy indeed to reflect upon our county administration development. The people have placed their confidence and stamp of approval in this work by re-electing me to the office, and I have endeavored as chairman of the commissioners' court to lead the county in many new projects and have always tried to keep Midland in the class of progressive counties.

PLOWING STOPPED BLOWING

VERNON—To keep loose blow sand from blowing on his farm near Odell in Wilbarger county, E. L. Key plowed four acres 10 years ago to a depth of eight inches and so successful was this method that he has broken an additional acreage each succeeding year until now his entire quarter section has been plowed to depths ranging from eight to eighteen inches. Due to this deep breaking and a system of crop rotation he has more than doubled the production of this land, it is reported by R. E. L. Pattillo, county agent. The practice of deep breaking has spread from this example until the majority of farmers in blow sand sections have done some deep breaking. They have invariably found it profitable, Mr. Pattillo says.

very proud of all of them, together with many others. Especially am I proud of our county library, for all the citizens seem to take pride and delight in using it. Over 50,000 books were read from the library last year.

"On next January 1, I shall turn back to you and into the hands of the one whom you elect as my successor, this office of trust. I feel that you will receive it back more fully developed along your wants and needs than when you entrusted it to me, and I bespeak for my successor in office your confidence, support and esteem. By this means, I wish to thank you again for the confidence you have placed in me and assure you that from a grateful heart I deeply appreciate it. I shall ever be with you for greater progress and development of our county."

Odessa Hatchery Is Kept Busy

ODESSA, Feb. 7.—L. R. Lasseter of Fort Worth owner of the Imperial Poultry farm at Odessa has placed W. T. Harrington of Fort Worth in charge. The Imperial is the largest poultry farm in West Texas and the second largest in the state. According to Harrington orders have been coming in from various states for baby chicks. One of the 16,000 egg capacity incubators has been going full force for a week and another will start Monday night. Harrington said two separate settings of 8,064 eggs each will be off about Feb. 23 and that every chicken has been sold. Improvements amounting to several thousand dollars are to be made, not including the planting of 120 trees on the farm. The Imperial is the most modern and up-to-date poultry farm in this section of the country.

In the Lake Superior iron ore district there are 75 mines which are known to have shipped more than 5,000,000 tons of ore each in their period of activity.

Three young ladies put their heads together...

THEY WERE TALKING ABOUT SMOKING... whether girls should or should not smoke; but it came out that all three of them had been smoking for a long time. They were asking each other what made a good cigarette. And after discussing one thing and another, they agreed that a cigarette should be milder. They thought also that it should taste just right—that is, not over-sweet, but on the other hand, not bitter—just sweet enough. And everybody, they said, wants anything that is placed in the mouth just as pure as can be. Then they began to think what cigarette, if any, filled this bill; and agreed that CHESTERFIELD was milder—tasted better—and was pure. The girls were satisfied, because "They Satisfy."
