WASHINGTON, Mar. 16.—Proponents of a plan to obtain government relief for a series of flood control dams on the Brazos River, revamped their plans to some extent today.

Henry Dunlavy, representing Brazos conservation, reclamation district, said that it now appeared that the proposed fifty million dollar loan from Austin might come from the $4,400,000 asked by the President.

Dunlavy said that lengthy congressional hearings before committees would be used by a special river board that the President may name.

Ten Distinguished Americans Are Wearing Shamrocks Today

NEW YORK, March 17.—"The ten most prominent Irish-Americans" asked John C. O'Connor, dean of Celtic editors in this country. "Why, there are tens of thousands of prominent Irishmen, especially on St. Patrick's Day."

"It would be easier to name a hundred than only ten," said an official of the American Irish Historical Society.

Dr. Joseph Campbell, editor of a magazine, "The Irish Review," and professor of Irish studies at Fordham University, insisted upon nominating 25, for good measure.

But out of the various selections submitted has emerged a St. Patrick's Day honors list with a clear majority for the leading ten. Each of them is an Irishman noted for a distinguished career in the United States. A few reached the top bracket by dint of outstanding services plus special pride and interest in Irish affairs. Nearly all are American born. The list:

General Hugh S. Johnson, Postmaster General James A. Farley; Pierce Butler, Associate Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court; George Michael Cohan, the actor-dramatist; John McCormack, the tenor; Clarence Mackay, capitalist and communications magnate; Cardinal William Henry O'Connell; James A. Farrell, capitalist and former head of U. S. Steel; Joseph Peter Grace, industrialist

FALLING MERCURY SATURDAY NIGHT; GENERAL REPORT Motorists Are Forced To Use Headlights On Highways

By ASSOCIATED PRESS
The worst dust storm in years drifted across north and western sections of Texas Saturday, obscuring the sun and befogging a vast area as it moved toward the gulf coast.

Temperatures were falling steadily.

Clouds of dust had poured into the Texas Panhandle since midnight Friday, spreading over a front 400 miles wide.

About noon, Fort Worth and Dallas were reached. Dust filled the streets and temperatures were dropping.

MIDLAND RECEIVES DUST 'HANGOVER'

Saturday's weather proved to be a curiosity even to the "old timers" of Midland, beginning the daylight hours with a hazy sky and slight north wind and gradually building up a dust-filled atmosphere which penetrated even the closest buildings.

The dust storm apparently was this section's share of the sandstorms and high winds of Kansas, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas Panhandle points.

At one time here it was possible to see the 12-story Petroleum building only at two and a half blocks or closer. The sun at that time, penetrating the dusty haze, wore a blue cast, with a blue circle about it.

Automobiles on the streets and highways burned their headlights a part of the time. Motorists coming from "dirt road" sections of highways under construction reported a blinding fog of dust which even the headlights barely penetrated.

The forecast Saturday was for freezing temperatures in the Panhandle at night, fair weather and rising mercury today.

Utility company reports Saturday afternoon said the dust storm here was general in the plains country. Lamesa, Lubbock and points on to the Panhandle reported heavy dust storms and lowering temperatures.

Preparations were under way late Saturday for freezing temperatures in these sections.

Travelers from the west reported that the dust storm did not extend as far as Monahans but dispersed in the Metz station region about 40 miles west of here. In that vicinity the sun was shining and no sand was reported.

Burglar Alarm Routes Thieves; Job Incomplete

A "feeble attempt" to burglarize the Walker-Smith wholesale grocery house here Friday night proved unsuccessful, the would-be thieves becoming frightened by the building's automatic burglar alarm system and barely escaping night officers who heard the call.

Fored entry of the rear door of the warehouse had been attempted. The company formerly sustained several losses by burglary, later installing the electric alarm which quickly notifies officers and watchmen of attempted entries. Three attempts have failed since the installation.

Midland Woman's Brother Killed

Mrs. C. E. Strawn left for Crosbyton Saturday on receipt of a telegram saying that her brother, George Collier, was killed in an automobile accident Friday night.

Collier, 53, is survived by a wife and several children.

Police Want Thief Hunter WAKEFIELD, Mass. (AP)—Reversing the usual order of things, Wakefield police appealed to the thief to help them recover their stolen automobile.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything without taking a stand on anything).

Down at Austin they have an expression "bumblebug legislator" having reference to one who rolls one way and looks the other.

Tom Nance very quietly announced yesterday that one of his Ken-bucky nephews had a colt. I was disappointed. I had expected the owner of the first colt to throw a big barbecue.

Picked up: Bobby: (Time: 9 a. m. Sunday) "Dad, did you go to Sunday school when you were a little boy?" Dad: "I sure did—never missed a Sunday!" Bobby: "There Ma, don't you see? I won't do me any good, either!"

And the kind of wife we're looking for is one who can sew. The and you can give a handful of buttons and say "Here, sew some shirts on these."

Astaire and Rogers Score a Big Hit in "The Gay Divorcee"

Mischievous, gay, spectacular and glamorous, RKO-Radio's musical comedy, "The Gay Divorcee" now showing at the Yucca is affording wholesome amusement for local theatergoers. It is a high-speed entertainment with no time for parking and co-stars Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, the delightful pair who made such a hit in "Flying Down to Rio."

In the story Fred meets Ginger under strange circumstances, too amusing to rob of its punch by telling, and he chases her hither and yea in a frantic effort to clinch their romance.

She runs because she loves him, but that can't be explained either, without revealing one of the smartest situations of the season. Finally, through mistaken identity, she issues him a strange invitation which results in a conglomerate mixup of loves and romance and people in one hotel suite!

The climax is a happy one, and the story is so entertaining that it could stand even without the remarkable song and dance features.

The cast includes Edward Everett Horton as a dumb English barrister, Alice Brady, who causes him to try every device to avoid marrying her; William Austin as a "meaney husband," Erik Rhodes as debutante professional Romeo, and Eric Blom as the funniest English butler seen on the screen in ages.

The film was adapted from Astaire's international stage hit, of the same title, which ran 288 performances in New York and six months in London. It was directed by Mark Sandrich.

A carved stone slab weighing more than a ton, believed to be one of the world's earliest printing machines and estimated to be more than 2000 years old, has been brought to England from China.

Mrs. H. L. Haag returned Friday from Lubbock where she visited her sons, Oliver and H. L. Haag. H. L. is a student in Texas Tech.

Among visitors from Stanton the latter part of the week were Mrs. Allen Kaderl and Misses Lorene and Florene Jones.

Mrs. S. R. Weaver and daughter Rebecca Ray, returned Friday afternoon from Memphis and Fort Worth. They had as their guest Mrs. R. Richardson of Big Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Cragin of Hobbs, former Midland residents, visited friends here this week end.

Hard Eggs SALT LAKE CITY, Utah. (U.P.)—Seven cases of eggs for $42 is a good buy, said G. F. Belosky, but a preposterous price to pay for 128 dozen ordinary rocks. Eggs covered only the top layers of the seven cases, he complained.

Class B Gridsters Show High Interest

AUSTIN, (U.P.)—Texas high school football players will set a new record, at least from the standpoint of numbers, in 1935. Roy B. Henderson, athletic director of Texas' Interscholastic League, predicts.

Last year 15,000 youths competed in organized high school football. From this number three fatalities resulted from regular play.

Greatest increase in interest is shown in Class B teams, representing schools with less than 500 students. Nine regional champions last year emerged from a field of 350 schools of this class.

For 1935, Director Henderson has increased the number of regions to 10 and the number of districts from 38 to 40. Eighty-five teams from schools with more than 500 enrollment will play for Class A state title again.

Want Sunday Checkers

BOSTON, (U.P.)—The New England Checker Association has started a campaign seeking to repeal an old Massachusetts "blue law" which prohibits the playing of checkers or chess on Sunday.

Air defense equipment now in use in China includes an elaborate system of electric sound detectors and direction indicators that enable listeners to discover the approach of a plane long before it comes within range of anti-aircraft guns or searchlights.

The majority of 1934 accidents took place on the open highways rather than on crowded city streets. Figures indicate that the traffic death rate in 86 principal cities last year was one-third lower than for the nation as a whole.

HEALTH WASH Cooked by MRS. ADDISON YOUNG

Of all causes of death in the United States, accidents rank as the sixth greatest cause. About 30% of death due accidents in 1932 were automobile fatalities.

The above facts are found in the report of the Bureau of Census, which also show that there was a steady increase each year in automobile fatalities for the past ten years, until 1932 when there was a drop of about four deaths per 100,000 population. When, however, we study the figures on automobile registration, during 1931 and 1932, we find that there has been a considerable decrease in the number of autos on the road for that period, the percentage of decrease in automobiles being far greater than the percentage of decrease in fatalities caused by them.

What can be done to check this increasing death toll?

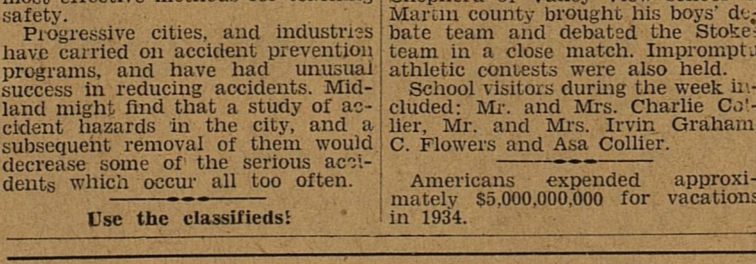

The joint committee on health problems in education, appointed by the National Education Association and the American Medical Association, states that since automobile fatalities reach their peak in the 5-9 age period it is important to place stress on accident hazards during the early years of life. This committee has suggested a course of study in safety to be used in schools, giving the objectives to be stressed at different age levels, and outlining the most effective methods for teaching safety.

Progressive cities, and industries have carried on accident prevention programs, and have had unusual success in reducing accidents. Midland might find that a study of accident hazards in the city, and a subsequent removal of them would decrease some of the serious accidents which occur all too often.

Americans expended approximately $5,000,000,000 for vacations in 1934.

Flubdubs

BY JESS RODGERS

We have heard of things happening once every "Blue Moon," but yesterday was the first time we have ever seen a blue sun. Just another of those freaks of nature that tourists are supposed to find so wonderful in this country, we suppose.

Well after a couple of weeks of inattention and hesitance we have finally managed to find something about the golf tournament here a couple of weeks ago.

Dale Scuggs, a fairly recent newcomer to Midland, was the winner of the championship flight when he turned in a score lower than any other person who braved a perfect sandstorm. Johnny Neal of Hobbs finished second best.

In the first flight matches a McCamey golfer, whose name is unknown to this department, carried off first honors while second honors went to Charlie Welch of Midland.

In the second flight matches Bill Simpson of Midland finished first and was trailed by Dave Blevins, Midland.

In the third flight matches two McCamey golfers, names also unknown, were winner and runner-up.

Below you will find a clipping from the Abilene Morning News which most of you have read, but for those of you who have not it should prove interesting.

Lloyd Wallace, 21-year-old hurler from Abilene, is apparently making good his professional debut with the Houston Buffs according to clippings from the Houston Press.

Ralph (Andy) Anderson, in his column, Sports Sidelights, has this to say about Wallace: "I saw a slim right hander warming up and had to take a second look to convince myself that it wasn't Dizzy Dean. . . . If you go to the stadium to watch practice get an eyeful of a chap wearing Uniform 15. . . . his name is Lloyd Wallace and he hails from Abilene. . . . he has every motion that Dizzy has, is about the same size and resembles the Cardinal star in appearance. . . . I pick him as the likeliest of the rookie hurlers."

Wallace, who has lived in Abilene for a number of years, pitched last summer for the Eastland and Midland semi-pro teams.

In our opinion the slim right hander is being rated rather highly.

Resolutions Are Passed by Lawyers

Resolutions of respect were passed and signed March 15 by the Midland County Bar association upon the recent death of Judge J. M. Caldwell, veteran Midland attorney.

The resolutions committee was composed of District Judge Chas. L. Klapproth, Frank Stubbeman, R. W. Hamilton, Joseph A. Seymour and J. M. DeArmond. Following is the document adopted:

When news came to the members of the Midland County Bar that death had taken Judge J. M. Caldwell, a feeling of loneliness crept over all. A dear friend was gone. For many years Judge Caldwell has been the Dean of this Bar, and he was loved and greatly respected by all the members. For the past thirty-five years he has practiced law in Midland. His practice has always been on the highest plane. Legal ethics were a part of his being and practice and he rightfully earned the high esteem of those in his profession, and the confidence of his clients.

By hard work and diligence he became thoroughly grounded in the law. His literary attainments polished his work with distinction and he was indeed an outstanding character in his profession and this Bar. His love for his chosen work remained until his passing. Though his body be subdued by death, yet his spirit was never conquered.

His widespread practice, both in his office and before the Courts of Texas, speak for him. Always a busy man, yet he invariably took time to assist the younger members of the Bar who went to him for counsel and advice. His research in the law, high legal ethics and devotion to his clients can well serve as a model for any attorney. His devotion to his family has demonstrated to the public the heart of Judge Caldwell. The patriotic service he has rendered his community and state will be of lasting benefit years to come. In leaving this physical existence, he has gone to a rest well earned and to a blissful happiness with his Creator and Savior, who he loved and in whose behalf throughout his life he tried to help by ministering to his fellowman.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED: That the Midland Bar express our profound sympathy and sorrow to the family of Judge Caldwell; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the Minutes of the District Court of Midland County and that a copy be sent to the Honorable Court of Civil Appeals for the Eighth Supreme Judicial District of Texas, at El Paso, to be spread upon the Minutes of that Court; and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of Judge Caldwell and that a copy be given to the Midland Reporter-Telegram for publication.

Respectfully submitted this the 15th day of March, 1935.

ly, for the simple reason that his number two ball barely had a wrinkle and his change of pace was nonexistent in the two months that he clanked for the locals last season.

It must be admitted that Wallace had very little defense and less offense while here but his earned run average was nothing to write home about.

However, if "Slim", as he was known here, does develop a good curve to go with his fast one he has a very good chance to go places for he really had speed on his number one.

James White, local hard-hitting youth, is still sticking it out in Jackie Taverner's rookie school but we doubt if his hitting ability will keep him on the club roster unless he improves his defensive ability.

At the time that this is being written, (Saturday p. m.) the rural schools are due to be holding their track meet out at Lackey and the Society Editor, an alumni of Stokes, insists that we go out and cover same, but in this kind of weather a pipe and a rocker in front of the fire is our ideal way of covering such an event.

N. M., and the Municipal Club of Big Spring are both clamoring to enter a club in the loop.

All clubs, Midland, Big Spring, Colorado, Stanton and Lamesa have been asked to vote on which club or whether they favor both clubs entering the league. Members of the Midland club will meet at one o'clock today to vote their opinion.

From comparative scores turned in so far the Midland line-up shows as follows: Kidd, Hemphill, Cram, Neill, Johnson, Forgeron, Ches, Sivalis, Armstrong, Shaw, Simpson, Riley, Moran, Bailey, Hart, Johnson, Wells, Whitcomb.

Blevins, Mix and Blount.

The Cat Claw club has disbanded for this year and the Midland second team will depend upon matched games with Crane, Seminole, Odessa and others to fill the place of last year's league games.

EARLY SCHOOL AND TRAINING SENT THREE NOTABLES IN "DEBATE OF A CENTURY" ON DIVERGENT CAREERS

The cloister claimed Charles Coughlin at the age of 12. It was then that he was sent away to St. Michael's College in Toronto.

The careerist boyhood which had no graver worry than parental insistence that he learn to play the piano, despite a preference for baseball, was over.

Preparation for Toronto University completed, he matriculated there in University College. He played baseball, football (rugby), and handball, with a great deal of zest, and the big frame of "Chuck Coughlin" was familiar one on all the playing fields.

English and debating were favorite studies, and his student fellows remember the sonorous voice that read the lines of Shakespeare with such telling force.

At this point, it is said, Coughlin wavered somewhat as to his career, owing to his deep interest in law, economics, and politics.

Life as a farm boy didn't appeal to Huey Long. He was sent to teach for a year at St. Basil's College in the healthful climate of Waco, Tex.

When he was 10, he tried to run away from home, but was caught and brought back. A few years later he tried it again, with no better success.

A railroad cut through Winnfield. The town grew, and the Long farm was cut up into lots.

At 13, Huey, Jr., took up the printer's trade, working at it between school terms. He auctioned off wagon-loads of books among the men of the sawmill camps, sometimes taking his pay in books.

At 15, the talent for oratory became apparent, and he twice represented the Winnfield High School at state rallies of high school students. He won no medals, but he did win a scholarship to Louisiana State University.

There is a story, perhaps told jokingly, that Huey ran for every class office in high school, and was beaten for every one. Whereupon the class created the post of door-keeper and elected Huey. He barred them out by seeing no joke in that, but accepting the post seriously.

The scholarship didn't include books and living expenses, so Huey didn't go to L. S. U. He took a job selling a lard substitute from door to door, holding baking contests, and while doing this same sort of work he continued in school at Shreveport.

A succession of jobs as traveling salesman of medicine, vegetables, anything, took the youthful Long all over the south before he was 19. Houston, Memphis, Oklahoma City.

Stranded in Norman Okla., and ready to leave town for anywhere at all, he met a stranger on the train platform who staked him to money, a job, and credit for law books. He spent a year studying law there, working as salesman in off hours and during vacations.

It was during one of these that he married Rose McConnell. She had won a prize with a bride cake during one of the baking contests conducted by the young salesman in Shreveport.

of the blowing up of the Maine, and that Theodore Roosevelt was organizing his Rough Riders. Hugh had been going to the state normal school, and it didn't thrill him.

So he was one of several guardsmen who hopped a freight for Oklahoma City to enlist. At Guthrie his father caught up with him, and when the 16-year-old climbed stiffly off the brake rods, the parental hand collared him.

To appease the humiliated son, the father got him an appointment to West Point—as an alternate. The regular candidate was found ineligible, and Hugh took the examination. They did, and at 21 Huey Long was ready to face the world as a full-fledged lawyer.

The boy Hugh Johnson, growing up in the sprawling frontier town of Alva, Okla., showed early his military inclinations.

When he was only 15 (but looked older) he enlisted in the Oklahoma National Guard.

It seemed more adventurous than acting as his father's assistant in the postoffice, or the humdrum of school of the "little red schoolhouse" type where he got his elementary education.

In the postoffice, young Hugh used to sit so that he could see anyone who approached for mail. If there was mail for them, the letters would be ready when they arrived. If there weren't, young Hugh would tell them so, without looking in the boxes.

He knew every piece of mail in the place, and assured the inquirer there was nothing for him.

Hugh earned a little money by going out on the prairie and gathering up buffalo bones, which were shipped east to fertilizer factories in those days.

But into this rather sleepy frontier existence suddenly came word of the blowing up of the Maine, and that Theodore Roosevelt was organizing his Rough Riders. Hugh had been going to the state normal school, and it didn't thrill him.

So he was one of several guardsmen who hopped a freight for Oklahoma City to enlist. At Guthrie his father caught up with him, and when the 16-year-old climbed stiffly off the brake rods, the parental hand collared him.

To appease the humiliated son, the father got him an appointment to West Point—as an alternate. The regular candidate was found ineligible, and Hugh took the examination. They did, and at 21 Huey Long was ready to face the world as a full-fledged lawyer.

The boy Hugh Johnson, growing up in the sprawling frontier town of Alva, Okla., showed early his military inclinations.

Get Rid of those "Kitchen Hands"

No matter how busy you are, you have time for this amazing hand cream. Just rub a small pat of Pacquin's on your hands every time you dry them. It nourishes, whitens, beautifies almost immediately. It leaves no sticky film, no funny feeling.

Hugh was a turbulent cadet. Brilliant, he found studies easy, and worked at them just enough to "get by." He stood at the bottom of his class in "soldierly deportment and discipline"—rated in mid-class in general merit.

His motto then was "never bone when you can bugle"—that is, "don't work too hard if you can bluff it out."

When he graduated as second lieutenant, Johnson was assigned to the famous old First Cavalry. About this time he married Helen Kilbourne, daughter of Col. H. S. Kilbourne.

It is quite true, as Long and Coughlin have pointed out, that in 16 years of army service, Johnson never heard a shot fired in anger. But it is only just to add that it wasn't his fault; he tried hard enough.

Deer Herd Increases OKANOGAN, Wash. (AP)—Deer have increased rapidly in the Colville National Forest in recent years, a game commission census showed. The 1935 count totaled approximately 9,900 in the forest, compared to 1,500 in 1922. Rigid enforcement of game laws was credited with the increase.
