GLAMOUR OF FOOTBALL DECEIVES ITS CRITICS

Along about this time every year, earnest and well-intentioned people are apt to become worried about the status of college football.

Week after week come the reports of gigantic crowds at college football games. The total figures on gate receipts look like payments on the international debts. News of the doings of the young athletes fill the front pages of the newspapers.

All of this, lumped together, comes under the heading of "overemphasis," as it is called. A game devised for the recreation of college students draws so much attention that in the minds of many people it completely overshadows the regular classroom activities. On the face of it, it looks like an extremely unhealthy situation.

Yet there is a great deal of loose talk about this. Critics of big-time football grow just about as mixed in their consideration of values as do the unthinking boosters. For it is not the fact that college football draws big crowds and creates black headlines that is wrong; it is the fact that in some institutions the responsible authorities are carried off their feet by enthusiasm for the sport, and let it take precedence over the regular curriculum, both in their own minds and in the minds of their students.

It needs to be emphasized that youngsters in college, for all their effervescence and high spirits, are a pretty level-headed lot. They are seldom really deceived by the glamour of football.

They enjoy the game, as participants or as spectators; they enjoy the excitement, the thrills and the publicity. But if they get anything approaching the right kind of leadership from their faculty, they aren't apt to be deluded by it all.

It is often true that the football coach draws a higher salary than any professor. But that only parallels the situation in other walks of life. Prize fighters make more money than clergymen, movie actors make more money than scientists, stock promoters outearn doctors.

Our whole system of rewards is askew; football simply gives the college student an object lesson in the fact before he leaves the campus.

College football is overemphasized, to be sure. But its very overemphasis is typical of American life. The youngster at Notre Dame, Michigan, Stanford, or Alabama is not nearly so apt to be fooled by it all as we outsiders sometimes suppose.

HELP NEEDED FOR HEALTH

One of the most baleful effects of the depression has been a great decrease in financial support for health organizations throughout the country.

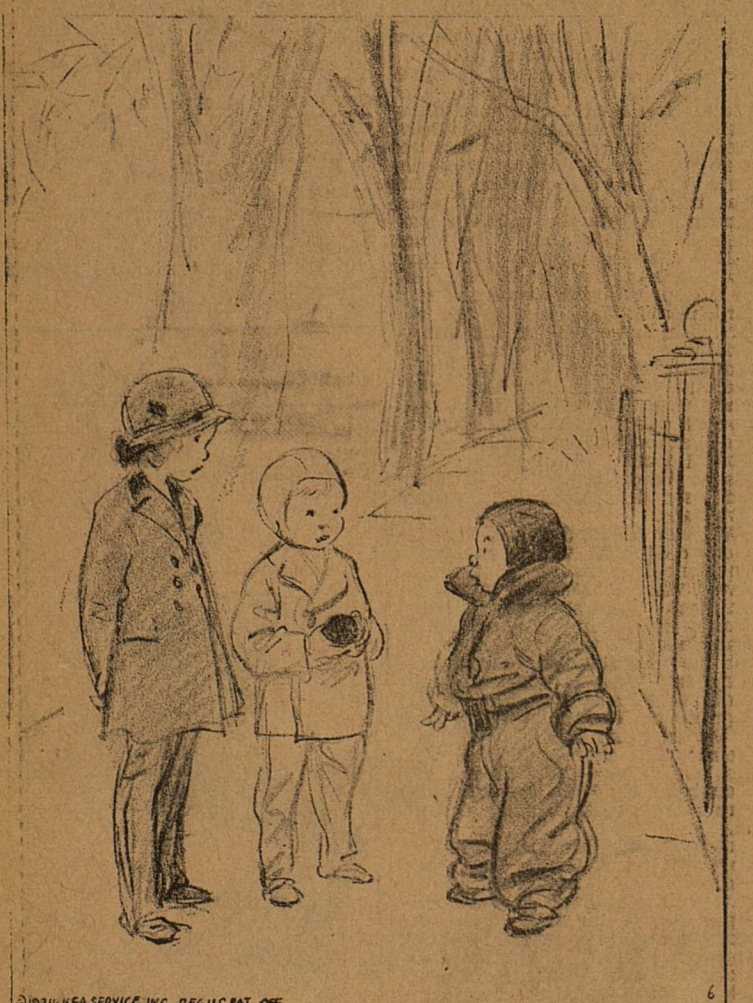

This has so hampered the work of those organizations that we may expect a considerable increase in illness and mortality this winter; furthermore, some of the most vital of our health agencies may have to go out of business altogether.

This warning is sounded by a committee of the National Health Council, in a report made public by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, president of the council.

It is pointed out that the government cannot take over these health agencies at the present time; it has all it can do, and more, to support such agencies as were already under its wing.

Unless private citizens give liberally to support them, such activities as visiting nurse services, child welfare clinics, infant feeding stations, and so on will be badly crippled. Such a result would be truly disastrous.

WHEN IS GRAPEFRUIT RIPE?

WESLACO, (P)—Just when is a grapefruit ripe?
This is a question which is agitating the lower Rio Grande valley. In view of the fact that many of its best citrus markets have been hurt by shipment of immature fruit.
And, since the suggestion of some valley growers is "don't ship it until you will eat it yourself," the establishment of official tasters to sample the fruit and pass on its maturity is considered.
But it is considered feasible to increase the present chemical tests can not be so changed as to give a better indication as to the maturity of the fruit. It is possible that no chemical tests can be found that will work satisfactorily, although the valley is preparing now to seek amendment to the present law that might work.
The law as it stands provides for a certain ratio of sugar to acid content, and for a minimum of juice. It is impossible to increase the ratio of sugar to acid, as the present ratio is almost the maximum which the fruit reaches.
But it is considered feasible to increase the juice content and more from the solution to the problem. L. E. Pratt, in charge of the green fruit force now at work in the valley, said that tests are being made as to juice content, and these will be continued further into the season, to determine whether a change here would benefit the situation.
The sentiment of shippers and growers alike in the valley as expressed in a recent survey is that "we should not ship the fruit until we are willing to eat it ourselves," and a question put at a citrus meeting earlier in the season elicited the information that practically none of the people who grew and shipped fruit were willing to eat it.
That the green fruit shipments this season have damaged the market for Texas and all other grapefruit is unquestioned, and it is also practically certain that some measures will be taken, even if it be necessary to prevent artificial coloring, to keep green fruit from moving to markets.

Woman (to tramp): "Go away, or I'll call my husband."
Tramp: "Oh, I know 'm. Es the game here Friday night. They will be respected more and more from the brilliant fight of that sliding line, and for the hard drive, blocking and tackling of backs."
Mrs. Geo. Abell, dramatic director in odd moments, told one of the boys this one:
A gentleman who, according to the Svenska Dagbladet, is well known in Stockholm, visited a theatre where a revue was being given. For some reason he left the theatre immediately after the first act. The director of the theatre next day sent the gentleman a letter in the following gracious terms:
I have pleasure in returning to you Kr. 450, being the balance on the price of the tickets for the act of my revue, which last night you unfortunately were deprived of.
Yours truly, N. N.
By return of post the director received the following reply:
I beg to acknowledge with thanks receipt of Kr. 450 as compensation for the act of your revue which I did not see.

Ulmer to Mr. Barron Kidd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Kidd Sr., of Brown wood, made at a tea given Saturday afternoon by Mrs. Elliott Cowden at her home 201 North C street.

At the end of the hour Mrs. Parks gave a musical reading, "To Marry or Not to Marry," after which the strains of the Wedding March ushered guests into the dining room where announcements of the approaching nuptials were found.

On the tea plates, which were laid with silver doilies, white-tinted scrolls bearing the words "Helen Margaret and Barron, November 29" were thrust into white china slippers on which perched golden daisies.

FEMININE FANCIES

BY KATHLEEN EILAND

Armistice day naturally calls to mind the beautiful poems that have been written concerning the World War and its effect on men.

We are rather inclined to accept the belief that mankind's deepest thoughts flow naturally through the channel of poetry rather than prose.

And surely war is one of the things which brings out a fundamental expression of men's souls.

There is of course, that forever-beautiful "Flanders Fields" and that expression of beauty-loving youth's patriotism beginning "I have a rendezvous with Death," to mention the outstanding ones that come to mind.

Here is something new and worthwhile that a friend gave us. Written by Galsworthy it has the serious nobility that we might expect from such an author.

VALLEY OF THE SHADOW
By John Galsworthy
"God, I am traveling out to death's sea,
I, who exulted in sunshine and laughter,
Thought not of dying—death is such waste of time!
Grant me one prayer: Doom not the hereafter!
Of mankind to war, as though I had died not—"

Sox Suppers Are The Latest Thing For "Red Schools"

AMARILLO (AP)—Little red school houses, dust-worn, desolate looking things to be highway traveler in the western plains, frequently flare into centers of activity, community entertainment. Almost any night, especially during the school session, dozens of automobiles, saddled horses and even wagons can be seen around the school house. And on the inside, entertainment far from the Broadway type is in full blast. There was a "sox supper" over at Midway, near Clarendon, the other night. What is a sox supper? Persons who go to the suppers take pairs of sox, new or freshly laundered, filled with "anything good to eat." The auctioneer then sells the well-filled sox. And who knows—boy friend may buy girl friend's offering and later enjoy a chat and a meal. Such chats and meals have been known to turn into situations whereby boy friend bought sox he never thought of eating from.

At The Ritz

"Sox suppers" are little different from box suppers and pie suppers, the main difference being that sox are used instead of dainty boxes and paper pie plates. Revenue from such entertainment usually goes for community or church improvement, such as a lighting system, a piano or a library.

If a sox, box or pie supper doesn't happen to be in progress at the school house where the cars are, a spelling match of community-wide interest may be getting down to the point where only the best spellers still are in line.

Spelling matches are frequent, the main time for them being Friday afternoon, when school is dismissed and turned into a contest at afternoon recess. The community matches, however, usually are annual events, and it is no uncommon thing for a student of the "old blue-back speller" to stick it out until all available words have been used. Rural communities are, not the only scenes of spelling bees, however. Recently old spelling feuds were renewed at Dalhart. In this particular contest, the main point of interest was to determine whether men or women were best spellers, counts of the previous year being up for settlement.

The little school house, vacated and desolate in the afternoon, may be full of life that night. It may be the meeting place of persons who had thought a lot about it in the afternoon.

ing the rest period, to the Stanton 2, where play ended in a fiasco, Stanton stopping everything Midland had to offer in the way of an offense.

The ball was put in play by Stanton on its 20 and punted to the Midland 37 a moment later, Midland gained only five yards and punted out on the Stanton 20. Two Stanton aerial heaves carried to the Midland 35, a first down was punted and Pat Cope garnered in a Stanton pass to stop the drive. The quarter gun found Midland with the ball on the Stanton 47.

Summary of period: Midland easily won the edge in this chapter, unless one discounts the moral victory the Buffs hung up as a result of holding the Kennel on its goal line. Stanton got no closer to pay zone than the Midland 35-yard line, and its drive was cut short a moment later by a pass interception.

FOURTH QUARTER

This was the exciting 15 minutes, as two touchdowns were made, one by each club, and two definite scoring threats developed, one of which was stopped by the gun when Midland was on the Stanton 8-yard line.

to the Stanton 18, where Pollock thrilled the crowd with his pass interception and dash of 82 yards to cross the Midland goal. One play later he did what Wink was unable to do—plunged the Midland line for an added point. Stanton was in the lead, 7-6.

Midland received on its 30 and marched 70 yards for a touchdown. Like this: Line plays gained 10, Montgomery on an end-round play picked up 10, a drive netted 17, two passes to White gained to striking distance and Midkiff plunged the ball across. Prothro converted by placement.

Midland kicked off and Stanton returned to the Midland 35, where Stanton was tussled for a 15-yard loss. The ball went over and Midland drove to the Stanton 15, only to be set back by a 15-yard penalty. Again the Kennel came back, this time to the Stanton 8, where the whistle stopped play.

Summary of the period: Midland, with its two scoring threats and one touchdown, upstaged the Stanton touchdown and showed more power in this period.

ed on the gambol. He plunged across for the added point.

Midland, which all night had been plugging considerable yardage and first downs, was forced to the limit to stage a comeback. The Baumgarten machine began functioning as it faced defeat. A drive that combined plunges, sweeps and passes carried 70 yards, Midkiff waltzing over from the 3-yard line. Prothro's placement kick was squarely between the uprights.

Midland was wearing down the stout invaders by this time, and twice more was inside the Stanton 20-yard line in the closing minutes of the game. A 15-yard penalty set back the Kennel the first time on the Stanton 15, but the golden clads were back on the Stanton eight when the whistle ended the game.

Statistics show Midland was a superior club both offensively and defensively, but Stanton deserves the more recognition for the night. Once the black shirts blocked a Midland punt, and so rushed the kicker on the other attempt he was able to get off a boot of only 23 yards. Stanton frontals and secondary rushed the Midland passer until he was scarcely able to pick out his target.

The Stanton passing game, so far as yardage gained was concerned, was superior to Midland's—the Buffs completing six out of 13 tries for 94 yards. However, four Stanton heaves were intercepted, Midland tried 10, completed three for 35 yards and had one intercepted. Midland's rushing game was greatly superior, resulting in 277 yards to 133 for Stanton.

Penalties set the Kennel back for a total of 65 yards. Holding accounted for most of the distance.

Doctor Explains How to Nurse One Back from Death

This is the second of two stories by Dr. Robert E. Cornish, California scientist, telling how he would try to bring the dead back to life. Dr. Cornish won worldwide attention with his experiments in which he restored life to dogs pronounced dead for several minutes.

By DR. R. E. CORNISH Suppose a man were executed by lethal gas, and revived as explained in my preceding article: How should one proceed to nurse him back to health, and how assure complete return of mental powers?

It is known that the brain is sensitive to failure of its supply of oxygenated blood. Thus Stewart and Rogoff showed with animals that if blood supply to the head were cut off more than 10 or 15 minutes, without heart or breathing ever stopping at all, release of the arteries to the head might then result in considerable gradual recovery, but not in complete return to sanity.

In man, because of lower metabolic rate, this time might conceivably be extended to 30 minutes.

But in the canary, with its heart rate of 1000 beats a minute, and its otherwise rapid pace of life, obstruction of the brain circulation for more than two minutes might well cause permanent mental derangement.

In our resuscitated dog "Lazarus IV" for some weeks after his revival his improvement was striking and rapid.

For several days his nourishment had to be given by injecting glucose solution under his skin, but soon he was able to swallow liquids from a tube.

Today he eats briskly from a dish by himself.

Better Nursing Helps "Lazarus V" also died four minutes, showed faster improvement, due perhaps to better nursing immediately after revival. He also, after a month of nursing, eats alone and will probably be soon walking, although it is difficult to teach walking to Lazarus IV.

It should be remembered that experiments such as those of Stewart and Rogoff do not in any way demonstrate that, by proper nursing, complete revival of the brain might not be obtained, even if circulation through the brain had stopped for many minutes.

In the first three dogs resuscitated by us, gradual return of the reflexes and of the senses, such as hearing, was noted for several hours, after which a regression seemed to take place.

A second and final death followed in from six to 12 hours after revival. In each case the heart had been stopped from three to eight minutes.

The most active period during the "second life" was usually characterized by considerable aimless activity. There might be a mechanical sort of barking, intervals of aimless jerking of the legs, panting, etc.

Wear Selves Out Of interest is the "pseudodiffactive" state recently produced in animals by Cannon and Britten, by removing only the highest part of the cerebrum, or seat of intelligence of the brain.

Such animals showed extreme nervous activity of a mechanical nature, and so wore themselves out in a few hours. The heart beat very fast, but could not keep up the blood pressure.

The fast heart rate could be prevented by suitable means to reduce the excessive adrenal gland secretions, but the blood pressure was low just the same.

There was still the same reduction in volume of blood, so that the blood stream becomes partly "dried up," just as in the dreaded "surgical shock."

Norman Freeman found that the fall in blood pressure and in blood volume of the "pseudodiffactive" state may be largely prevented by injecting a certain extract of the fungus "ergot."

Ergot Might Save Brain The resuscitated dogs "Lazarus IV" and "Lazarus V" maintained a very low blood pressure for several days after their "revival." The temporarily poor circulation from this cause might well account for the present mental deficiency of these two animals.

Use of the ergot extract might have prevented such permanent brain damage. If such animals can be kept alive a week, the crisis will have passed. The "pseudodiffactive" excitement disappears largely in a few days.

"Physiological salt solution" or the "gum arabic solution" of Bayliss, help keep the blood stream from drying out too much.

Both solutions are invaluable in sustaining "revived" dogs, but neither will prevent death from exhaustion of the heart during the first 24 hours. Something else is needed.

Barbital Found of Value The excessive heart rate in "revival shock" is probably caused partly from excessive adrenal gland activity, just as in the genuine "pseudodiffactive" state.

This may be controlled by morphine, but adequate doses are likely to stop the breathing and heart. In "Lazarus V" better results were found with a less poisonous compound, such as barbital.

It is of interest that during the few hours that the revived heart is gradually increasing in rate, a dose of barbital is able to check further increases, but does not seem to slow the heart. Hence to prevent heart exhaustion, the sleeping compound must be given promptly.

Holds Danger of Shock A very unfortunate circumstance is that the epinephrine used in the injecting fluid for starting the heart may in itself produce some of the symptoms of shock, so that after the heart has started the situation is much worse than if damage had come from asphyxia alone.

Prompt inhalation of amyl nitrite appears to somewhat counteract the epinephrine shock. Slowing of the circulation introduces a danger besides death of the intellectual brain—clotting of the blood.

We find that during the first few critical days, injecting some of the anti-blood-clotting heparin under the skin every eight hours will retard or prevent clotting, due to slowed circulation, although the brain is still liable to asphyxiation from inadequate blood supply.

But this is a genuine life-saving action in "shocked" animals. Now the medicinal leech has an anti-clotting substance, hirudin, in its saliva, and perhaps the former general use of leeches in all kinds of sickness had some real basis.

Hirudin under these conditions would be absorbed into the blood stream over a period of 12 to 24 hours.

We thus see that the science of resuscitation invades the whole science of medicine and most of the other sciences as well.

The End.
