NEGRO ANIMALS ASSAULT, MURDER

PARKER WILDCAT HITS SULPHUR; PREPARE TO TEST A Third Producer Is Added to Humble-Means Area

BY PAUL OSBORNE
Sulphur water encountered between 4,770 and 4,780 feet Sunday caused cessation of further drilling operations in the Honolulu-Liano No. 1 Parker, Andrews county wildcat test. The water amounts to about eight gallons per hour or three barrels per day, and oil continues to come in at the rate of about 35 barrels per day. Operations are today commencing back to 4,755 feet, preparatory to testing oil shows from 4,612-27, 4,685-92 and 4,722-31 feet.

In the Landreth-Humble No. 1 Scharbauer, northwestern Ector county small producer, acid treatment ate out the casing seat and allowed gas from behind the casing to come into the hole again. Until this gas can again be shut off, it will not be known whether or not the acid served to increase the 40 barrel per day average production that the well has been making. The Scharbauer is wildcat located in the southeast corner of section 20, block 44, township 1 north, T. & P. Railway survey.

A third producer was recorded for the Means area today when the Humble Oil & Refining company No. 1 J. S. Means, south offset to the discovery, made 148 barrels of oil in 22 hours on a drill stem test. Production is coming from limestone at a depth of 4,512-27 feet, which was bottom hole depth yesterday. The upper gas encountered in the well, because it is bradenheaded, served as a lift to give the drill stem test. In the same area, northeast of the discovery No. 1 R. M. Means, the Humble No. 2 R. M. Means on latest test made 35 barrels of oil and 8 barrels of basic sediment and water in a 24 hour gauge.

Humble Oil & Refining company No. 1 Walker railroad a depth of 4,500 feet over the weekend and after making steel line measurement began running tubing preparatory to unloading and testing. The Walker is wildcat located 5 miles west of the Honolulu Parker and south of the Fuhrman area in Andrews county.

Gulf Production company No. 103 McElroy had swung a water down to a depth of 8,200 feet this morning. With portable compressing equipment, air is being forced down behind the casing under 200 pounds pressure which is sufficient to raise the column of fluid in the hole about a thousand feet. A small amount of oil, about a gallon every 90 feet of water, is still showing. The No. 103 McElroy is an Ordovician test, how the deepest in the state with bottom hole at 10,978, located in western Upton county.

Western Union Man Known to This Area

R. O. Smith, who will act as vacation manager of Western Union for three months in the absence of District Manager J. R. Walker, is not unknown to Midland and the Permian basin of West Texas. Smith served as relief manager here in August, and has been in that capacity variously at San Angelo, Abilene, Sweetwater, Borger, McCamey, Monahans, Odessa and at several other towns along the T. & P. railroad.

He entered the service of the Western Union in 1928 as an operator and has seen transmission methods change from the old "key" to the telegraph typewriter.

The appointment of the Rev. Kenneth C. Minter to continue as pastor of the First Methodist church here was announced Sunday night at Abilene at the close of the Northwest Texas Methodist conference. Sully said that at first the young woman claimed the boy was her brother and that the boy verified the story and that the officer got him by himself and bought him an ice cream cone.

Later, under questioning of Police Capt. Dan L. and Sgt. Paul Jones, the prisoner said the boy followed her from Lexington and had hitch-hiked since.

At the meeting with the woman said she was "walking on Limestone Street in Lexington and the child was playing in the grass."

The child she continued, began to follow her. "I was eating candy and he asked me to give him some and I did," she said. Thereupon, she told the officers, she continued to follow her despite her instructions that he "go back."

Tired and not knowing exactly where the boy lived, the woman said they sat down and she intended to "run off and leave him." But when she started the prisoner related, the boy began to cry and she "became afraid" and decided to take him along.

"I decided to take him along with me and if they caught me I would tell them the whole thing."

The proposal was submitted to the President and both houses of Congress in the form of a formal petition, the league urging the balancing of the budget "to restore confidence and to supply the key to real recovery."

President Sees Remarkable Changes

Progress is taking heavy toll of the picturesque in the New Deal development of the Tennessee Valley, but it is bringing comfort to that natives of the hill never dreamed of possessing. Above is shown a typical habitation of a family near the Norris dam site, one of many which will pass when the reservoir is flooded. Left is one of the modern stone and hand-hewn timber homes erected under the New Deal "raise the living standard" program. This is a part of the great social-planning project of the New Deal being inspected this week by President Roosevelt on his tour of the Tennessee valley. The modern home at the left is one of 350 erected under the new project.

Mrs. Abell addressed the convention Thursday afternoon on the "Organization of Child Psychology Classes over the State of Texas" followed by a lecture at the Hogg Memorial building given by Mr. Bouton who traveled with Adolf Hitler in his campaign; and visits to Henry's home and the Elisabeth Ney studio.

The Midland women also had the privilege of hearing Edna St. Vincent Millay, famous American poet, recitations from her books, including her last volume in which she sets forth the belief that the human race will kill itself off and so become as "extinct as dinosaurs."

The presentation of "Universal Hotel" by the Austin Little theatre group offered an opportunity for delegates interested in dramatics to see amateurs attempt the production of a play which "it would take a psychiatrist to understand," as one delegate said.

Mrs. John P. Haley, president of the City Federation and chairman of law and government from the sixth district, also attended the convention. She went from Austin to Houston to visit her daughter.

Hubbard Youths On Crime Orgy

WACO, Nov. 19. (U.P.)—Central Texas officers last night carefully laid traps for two young men, whose identity known, who killed one man, kidnaped five others and stole automobiles as fast as they needed them.

Their orgy began Saturday when they shot and fatally wounded James M. Stewart Jr., 25, who lived near Houston, because he resisted their efforts to steal his automobile. By nightfall they had abducted and released four other persons and kidnaped another man and his automobile.

The sheriff's office said one was 22 and the other was 25. Both have been accused in criminal cases before and both live at Hubbard, about 30 miles north of Waco.

The identity of the fifth person to be abducted was not known here. Reports came to the sheriff's office that the young men had been seen heading toward Houston and all officers along the Houston highway were warned to be on the lookout for them.

Officers expressed the opinion that the pair was after an automobile when they happened upon Stewart, yesterday morning, and that the young men had been seen heading toward Houston and all officers along the Houston highway were warned to be on the lookout for them.

ZACH MARTIN IS CHIEF BUYER OF LOCAL CALF CROP

Zach Martin of Kansas City has been the principal buyer of calves in the Midland area so far, a checkup today showed. Taking advantage of the fact that he has failed to climb to normal figures, Martin bought and shipped from here last week some of the top calves anywhere, for his northern feeder customers.

Heading the shipment were 250 head of creep fed mixed steer and heifer calves from the W. W. Brunson L-7 ranch, where the Purina feeding experiment is under way. The calves, reports said, weighed 538 pounds.

Grass cattle shipped included one lot of steer calves and yearlings bought from Willis Woody; 100 head of steer calves from Kenton Boone; 215 steer calves, 147 heifers and 101 yearlings from C. D. Bird and sons; 168 steer calves and 59 heifers from O. B. Holt's north ranch; 130 steer calves from his west ranch; 190 yearlings from C. D. Bird and sons; 101 steer calves from George Radtiff.

Art Shaffer recently bought the steer yearlings of the Ellis Cowden, Bill Wayne and Edith Gate ranches, shipping them to Arizona.

MORE HOPEFUL TRENDS

The forces of recuperation are steadily gathering momentum. From all parts of the country come reports of more favorable business trends and better than all else the substitution of a spirit of optimism for the gloom that has been too dominant in the national thinking.

Hard upon the heels of the announced purpose of the American Bankers Association to cooperate with the Government in the recovery program came a declaration of like purpose from the Investment Bankers Association of America. The task set by the latter group is indicated by President Crane's comment that the most vital problem of recovery is to reopen the capital market in order to revive heavy industries, and that this is more a function of investment bankers than of commercial bankers.

Retail trade has remained good in recent months, a fact which has contributed a persistent, cheerful feature to the business picture. Observers now predict for this year the best Christmas trade since the depression began. Everywhere one detects the substitution of optimism for pessimism—the replacement of a spirit of antagonism by a spirit of cooperation.

Merryle Stanley Rukeyser, well-known economist, struck the prevailing note of hope the other day when he declared that the prophet of doom who kept repeating that we were on the verge of collapse has been belied by the course of events. He added that the new attitude is to regard business men and bankers as instrumentalities for economic improvement through whom the President can work.

It was in this new spirit that representatives of code authorities for 34 durable goods industries assembled in Washington, adopted a resolution affirming faith in the NRA, and set themselves resolutely to the task of improving the working of their codes in the light of experience.

Finally there is the appeal in behalf of members of the National Industrial Recovery Board for cooperation from American business in reorganizing NRA, the NRA which will be called upon to function after the present recovery act expires next June. Arthur D. Whiteside, a member of the Board, has stated that if business men will formulate their ideas and send them to Washington in the form of conservative suggestions, their ideas will be used in shaping a new NRA. There is no reason on earth, said he, why the NRA should mean that business men lose individualism and become regimented.

These all may be only straws in the wind, but taken in the aggregate they indicate unmistakably that more favorable winds are blowing.

One person in every ten in this country, it is said, has defective hearing. The losers in the last election might say it's nine in every ten.

The Town Quack

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything with taking a stand on anything.) A wind that blows 24 hours is very tiresome. So is the man who blows that long. The Merry Widow

What Has Happened Before Sonia, richest and most beautiful woman in Marshovia, is a widow, and by law and custom must wear a heavy veil which hides her face completely. She must also live in utter retirement. Even the fact that her fortune supports the government in the taxes derived therefrom does not exclude her from the rules imposed upon Marshovian widows. Nevertheless she has intrigued Danilo, most famous lover in the country. He attempts to woo her in her garden one moonlight night. He pleads with her to remove her veil so that he may see her face. She repulses him—but she cannot forget him. She longs for his return, but his evident acceptance of her stand persuades her to leave for Paris where she may throw off the Marshovian restrictions for widows, and also Europe had gathered to meet, to toast, to woo their widow. Sonia was a sensation. Sonia was reported engaged to this Count, to that Duke, even to a Prince. Sonia was the ravishingly beautiful, the gorgeously young, the thrillingly rich mecca of every male heart on the Continent! Marshovian wisemen stroked their beards. Diplomats gazed fiercely through their monocles. Shepherds whispered doubtfully among themselves. All labored under the same fear. Suppose Sonia should marry in Paris? Wherever she gave her heart, she gave her fortune. And the day that Sonia's wealth left Marshovia, was the day when Marshovia was doomed. Her taxes were the financial backbone of the country. Half the peasants were in her employ. Something must be done. But what? The royal palace teemed with excitement. King Achmed could hardly find time to adjust his suspenders before harried aides and worried secretaries called him to the endless cabinet meetings. His valet tried to protect him by delaying his divers changes of uniform throughout the day and night. His only respite from the clamoring throngs was in the privacy of his dressing room. King Achmed looked at his valet in worried silence. "Any news, your Majesty?" asked the latter. "What do you hear?" whispered the king, confidentially. "Well," the valet hesitated. "Well, I overheard two shepherds." "Tell me, tell me," said his Highness excitedly. "That's what I want to know—the opinion of the shepherd on the street." "They say," observed the valet sadly, "that when the richest woman gets fed up with the country and leaves—" back to Marshovia. The queen beamed at him for his brains. "Who are you going to send?" she asked, excitedly. "Well, we're considering Count Gabrielowitch." "Oh, good," she assured him expertly. "Who else?" "Well, there's Sinkewitch, Niergush and Montelowsky." "Fair," she observed. "That's all that I can say." She looked at him firmly. "You'll have to do better than that." "I'm afraid not, I say," answered the King, "but the prime minister—you see, he depends too much on his wife's judgment. But, I say, no politics at a time like this. Let the peasants be man. And that's what the meeting is for. I'm expecting a real fight." He kissed her goodnight. She looked up at him lovingly, and, after a slight pause, murmured sweetly: "Darling, do you think it will take all night?" He closed his eyes in exasperation and hurried from the room. Outside the door a Captain of the Guard stood at attention. The King answered his salute without looking up and hurried through the anterooms and down the corridors. As he passed out of sight the Captain on guard gave himself a fleeting glance in the mirrored wall, smoothed his uniform and gently let himself in the bedroom door. Halfway down the corridor the King stopped short. He put his hand to his head. Hadn't he forgotten something? With all of Marshovia at his heels constantly he shouldn't wonder at himself if he had. Oh, that terrible widow! Nothing but cabinet meetings!

something very wrong about it. A light dawned in his eyes and he smiled. Of course! He had forgotten to buckle on his sword.
He turned back and hurried through the anteroom into the royal suite. As he opened the door his gaze riveted on the queen in the arms of a Captain of the Guard. The queen shrieked. The captain leaped to his feet. It was Danilo.

Children's Coughs Need Creomulsion

Always get the best, fastest and surest treatment for your child's cough or cold. Prudent mothers more and more are turning to Creomulsion for any cough or cold that starts.
Creomulsion emulsifies creosote with six other important medicinal elements—it is truly an elegant prescription. It is not a cheap remedy, but contains no narcotics and your own druggist is authorized to refund your money on the spot if your cough or cold is not relieved by Creomulsion. (adv.)

The King motioned for silence. He locked all the doors. He turned to the culprits.
"Now," he commanded, "let's keep this scandal between you and me. This must be kept out of history. Not a soul must know."
"Nobody, nobody," promised the Queen. "I swear. Not a soul."
Danilo came forward eagerly. "We were planning not even to tell you, Your Majesty," he said.
The King looked at him menacingly.
"Listen, you," he said. "A firing squad is too good for you. Tonight you'll be taken to the mountains. You'll be cut to bits. First your ears will be cut off. Then your tongue—and then—"
The Queen screamed in horror. The King leaped to her side, stilling her cry with his hand. He motioned to Danilo.
"Where do you want me, Your Majesty?"
"Out," whispered the King. "And wait there. I'll attend to you later."
Once they were alone Achmed faced his Queen.
"No, no. That's not right, Dolores. You know very well I have to go down in history as Achmed the Great. And how do you cooperate? By falling in love with a captain of the guard. Oh! That's hitting below the crown."
"I didn't fall in love," she wailed. "I was defending myself. And splendidly. But you came back too early. You didn't give me a chance. If you had returned an hour later you would have found him where he belongs—outside the door."
The King brooded in silence and suddenly shot a question toward her: "How does he compare with Gabrielowitch?"
The Queen laughed contemptuously. "No comparison," she said. "Put Gabrielowitch and Sinekwitch together and what have you? Gabrielowitch and Sinekwitch. But Danilo?"
The King stopped her sternly: "Dolores!"
"Yes, Achmed," she answered in a timid voice.
"Dolores," he said, "with my brains and your intuition Matshovia

A BOY AND HIS DOG

A boy and his dog make a glorious pair. No better friendship is found anywhere. For they talk and they walk and they run and they play. And they have their deep secrets for many a day. And that boy has a comrade who thinks and who feels. Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels.

He may go where he will and his dog will be there; He may play in the mud and his dog will not care. Faithful he'll stay for the slightest command. And bark with delight at the touch of his hand. Oh he has a treasure which no body steals. Who walks down the road with a dog at his heels. —Jesse Lou Armstrong

MADAM BOLOGNA

Well, well, again I am with you to answer your many questions. The can't miss!"
He strode out the door to Danilo.
"Wooing a queen is treason—and treason merits death at sunrise. Will Danilo escape his fate? Tomorrow's instalment proves the King is craftier than the Captain."

THE SNEAKER
I don't understand why people do things that they don't want others to find out, when they know what I am going to tell on them. Hold on tight, for what I am going to tell you will really give you a shock. Here it is:
Frank, didn't I give you a warning last week that you would bettel be careful, and didn't I tell you that wifful glances are being cast on Betty? I would advise that you give her a little more personal attention.
I caught up with you, Fred. You knew that I would find out that you have had a different date every night this week.
Malcolm has settled down at last, his Betty Maness.
As fast as a worker as I am, it keeps me busy trying to keep up with Joanna and J. W. First they are in; then they are out. J. W. doesn't know what a prize he will lose if he loses Joanna.
I am afraid you are a little late, Josephine; Jessie has Clyde in the palm of her hand.
Anna Beth, you change up so fast that I can't keep up with you. First it's Gerald, and now it's Renfro. Can't you find one that will last longer than several weeks?
Listen to this one: Mary Elizabeth got a letter from a boy in Abilene, and she has never seen the boy.
Russel, you shouldn't be jealous of Pat Cope; Velma has that same feeling for you that she has always had, don't you Velma?
Ask C. A. what his "very peculiar mission" was, and if he won't talk, Isabel will, and how!
Wonder what lucky boy will win Marcelline's fair hand? "Quail" and Dee seem to be close rivals.
Did you know that our friend Josephine Ray (Alias Alice Coon) and Robert Howe are spreading honey?
Virginia has made several trips to Wink. Looks bad, very bad!
Who would ever have thought it; Robert Payne has started going with the girls. A tip Robert; Mary Beth thinks you are just about it.
You can't fool me Marcelline; I know you like Bob White.
Lizabeth Wolcott has fallen hard, and it is none other than Oland

Scott.
L. H. must be going in for a sophomore, and his choice isn't so bad either.
Verna Leene is to be highly complimented on her progress with Darrell in so little time.
James does Wanda know that you ask Betty Minter for a date?
Doris Danagan is showing her greatest affections for Glen lately. Could it be his new hair cut or his new Plymouth?
Guess Bob R. has given Mildred up; he says that he is looking for a girl.
S'tong, friends!

WE WONDER
Whether Gerald will progress with Mary Elizabeth.
Whether May Beth and Cleo will make it a habit.
Whether Franklin knows that Lorena Dunagan has a crush on him.
How Betty Minter got Roy Skipper's tie pin.
Whether Elizabeth Payne will add another one to her string.
Whether J. B. Thomas will ever fall in love with a girl.
How Harriett makes such swift progress with Roy Jones.
Whether Edna can keep both Vann and J. W.
Whether Joanna was ever known to catch on to any thing at the right time.
Whether Margaret is so anxious to receive a letter from New Mexico.
Whether every one knows that Bill, the Traan boy friend, gave Gertrude a gold watch.
Whether W. E. Lynch still likes Wanda George.
Why dates for the football banquet are being made so early.
Why Eze is still courting, and Billy Noyes are still courting.
Why Elmer Huff did not go to the Sophomores party Friday.
Whether Dorothy Barnes is looking for a boy friend.
Whether Hunter could get a date with the girl from Angelo.
Whether it is Marcelle or Dorothy that draws such a crowd of boys to the library.
What new student thought Nie Bound was a girl.
Whose pep squad sweater Renfro had on Thursday night.

WOODPILE CUTS POPULARITY
WALWORTH, Wis. (U.P.)—It is believed that henceforth Walworth, formerly a popular stopover for tramps, will be passed up more frequently than as of yore. The village marshal has installed a woodpile near the "transient hotel" and all guests must work.

Facetiously Gives "Barretts of Wimpole Street" Schools Compliment

Containing largely personal interest, a humorous but highly complimentary letter concerning the Midland school system was received today by Superintendent W. W. Lackey from Rudolph Prins, who recently visited Midland with C. S. Lackey, brother of the Midland man. Prins is a merchant broker of Dallas. The letter follows:
"Although this note of thanks is rather belated, I want you to know that I thoroughly enjoyed my visit with you in company with 'Brother' Charlie.
"I must admit that I was indeed surprised to find such a fine school system functioning in the 'wilds of west Texas. It does credit, not only to Midland, but—as Charlie would say, to the entire 'western hemisphere."
"The neatness, exactness, and discipline which prevails throughout your schools gives mute testimony to your twenty-seven years of reign.
"As for the gentler sex members of the faculty, were it not for the fact that I keenly feel and sense the vows of a long ago matrimonial venture—I should be prompted to make Midland my home."

"Barretts of Wimpole Street" Is Outstanding

In "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature starring Norma Shearer, now playing at the Yucca theatre, through Tuesday, Producer Irving Thalberg and Director Sidney Franklin have worked hand in hand and achieved the finest filmization of a famous stage piece ever to be recorded in celluloid.
For "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" is a brilliant production—brilliantly conceived, written, acted, directed and framed. Norma Shearer and Fredric March do more than present a tender, poetic love story; they actually bring the inviolable Elizabeth Barrett and the poet Robert Browning to life. And as the grim, uncompromising father whose diabolical influence motivates the drama, Charles Laughton turns in a performance which compares well with his recent interpretation of Henry the Eighth.
