PHILIPPINE INDEPENDENCE PLANS SLOW; CONSTITUTION UNDER WAY

By WILLIAM H. LANDER, United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, (U.P.)—Too rapidly to suit some people and too slowly for others, Uncle Sam is in the process of freeing the Philippine Islands.

The program now underway contemplates creation of the "Philippine Republic" in not less than ten years. Some groups, however, still insist that it is premature to free these far-away islands of the Western Pacific, while others still contend that "absolute, complete, and immediate" independence is the only feasible solution.

Freeing 14,000,000 people regardless of the various theories as to what constitutes the best method of freeing the 14,000,000 people, the fact remains that they are treated have started on the road to independence prescribed by the act of Congress.

The preliminary stage already has been passed. Congress has passed the independence act, known as the "Tydings-McDuffie" law.

The Philippine Legislature, which in 1933 rejected the program for independence contained in the Hare-Hawes-Cutting Law, has accepted the new Tydings-McDuffie law.

Matters now have arrived at the second stage—that of drawing up the proposed constitution for the "Philippine Commonwealth." This is to be a transitional government, which will be semi-autonomous, and is scheduled to continue for 10 years, after which the "Republic" may be proclaimed.

The Convention in Session
The Philippine Constitutional Convention has been in session at Manila since July 4, 1934. It is comprised of 202 delegates, sitting in a unicameral body. Although its work during the first few months necessarily was slow, it is expected to pick up speed in the next few months.

Lea County Is Hot Spot of Territory Covered by Oil Men Located at Midland

BY PAUL OSBORNE
Of the area covered by most Midland oil offices, the hot spot of development is Lea County, New Mexico, where nearly 40 drilling operations are under way, and where nearly every week at least one large producer adds barrels of oil to the potential of the Permian Basin.

It was the Stanlind Oil and Gas company No. 2-A Meyer, located in the center of the northeast quarter of the northeast quarter of section 22, township 24 south, range 36 east, which topped pay at 3,489 feet and gauged 173 barrels an hour, through one and a half inch tubing on three inch tubing, making an estimated million feet of gas along with the oil. North in the same area, Humble No. 1 Coates was abandoned when mud and cotton seeds failed to fill a cavity into

Operator of Filling Station Captured Hunted Pair

WACO, Nov. 21. (U.P.)—Sheriff W. B. Mobley of McLennan county said today Tuesday night, Joe Averett and Roy Curry of Hubbard had admitted the slaying of James Malcolm Stewart, Jr., whose body was found near here last Saturday night.

The two youths surrendered last night to a filling station operator at Coolidge, near here, after being trailed by a posse of 40 officers since the slaying and subsequent kidnaping of four persons Saturday.

Surrender to Officers
Dripping with sweat, exhausted, and asking for food, the two youths walked in H. L. Reynolds' filling station and requested him to call officers. They surrendered to Constable Henry Bennett and Deputy Sheriff John Cochran and were rushed back here by Sheriff Mobley.

In the presence of a Waco News-Tribune reporter and several officers, the youths, who said they had been without food since Sunday morning, detailed the slaying of Stewart.

Averett said he and Curry were walking along the Dallas highway, about 50 yards apart, when Stewart drove by in his machine, turned around and came back and picked up Averett.

Tells of Holdup
Stewart asked him if he was getting enough to eat, Averett said, and then started down a side road. Averett said he decided to rob Stewart and pulled a pistol out of a bundle he carried for water for Stewart. He directed him to drive back on the highway and pick up his partner, Curry.

Averett grabbed his pistol and a bullet tore through the windshield. Curry interrupted to say he hopped on the running board of the machine and attempted to climb inside.

"The man had hold of Averett's gun. It was pointed towards me as the car was turning all around among some trees, so I pulled my gun out of my belt and shot him in the arm to stop him. I was all excited by the dogs even knew I fired two shots until I emptied my gun later. I took the wheel when he slumped over and drove along to a country road where we turned off."

Had Identified Pair
Reynolds, the filling station man, was the one who identified the pair after they had visited his station Saturday night for water for the stolen automobile in which they rode with three kidnaped victims. It was on Reynolds' positive identification of the youths that murder charges were filed in connection with the slaying of Stewart.

Averett and Curry surrendered over a few hours after bloodhounds had trailed them along a creek bed between Coolidge and Minger. The trail grew cold, however, when a heavy rain pelted the section and erased the scent. A posse of 40 officers, 15 of them mounted, had given up the hunt until tomorrow after the dogs lost the trail.

Stewart, a resident of Katy, Tex., and an amateur actor who formerly studied in the Hollywood school conducted by Josephine Dillon, former wife of Clark Gable, screen star, was killed apparently as he resisted an attempt to steal his automobile.

The youths kidnaped four persons, including a rural mail carrier, in their flight, releasing them all after using their automobiles. Since early Monday they had been afoot, dodging the posse in the brushy section of Limestone county.

WHY NOT A LITTLE THEATER?

"Every week or so when someone 'comes back' to Midland, as so many are happily doing these days, the question is asked: 'And what ever happened to the Little Theatre?'"

Back in early 1929, the Midland Little Theatre was organized, and for three years it enjoyed a healthy, normal growth. Some 19 patrons and patronesses supported this civic achievement, and more than a hundred played in the well directed casts. Really, it was quite all right, and many who came the first time to gaze at some brave neighbor who had joined the band of amateur actors returned thereafter purely for the enjoyment of seeing legitimate stage plays.

It used to be that there was a "Little Theatre Season" during the winter, and townspeople looked forward to the three plays given. For example, curtains of the Grand and later the Yucca Theaters rose on: "The Brat", "The Whole Town's Talking", "Three Wise Fools", "Call of the Banshee", "Sun Up", "Adam and Eva", "The Inner Circle", "Aren't We All", and "The Gossipy Sex". Real people carried away large audiences, and the Little Theatre was an admirable part of Midland.

And so, why not again? Or, first perhaps, why, at all? To those who wish to "play in", what a splendid chance to follow a hobby, uniting with others in creative endeavor, playing beside, perhaps, one who has done considerable work along the line elsewhere, relaxing by working at something outside their daily grind. To others, who heartily endorse the movement but don't want to act, Little Theatre provides another civic endeavor to work for, something to make them even more proud of Midland. And to the rest, the audience at large, a touch of culture, a pulse to bring them beauty and refinement. These are the whys.

The why not seems to be singular; there just isn't organization. But let those who would again like to see a Little Theatre band together—there are many among the old and the new here who are interested. Let them discover talents—there is bound to be talent among citizens of the calibre of Midland's. Then let them organize, let them choose a play, let them discover among them a director, and let them play.

Midland would benefit. Why not January, 1935, for a starting month?

Guests at the Duke of Kent-Princess Marina wedding will have to wear hats, so they won't talk altogether about the bride and groom.

(Reserves the right to "quack" about everything with taking a stand on anything).

Along comes a note from "A Troubled Reader" wanting to know if there is such a word as "enthusiasic" or "enthusid" or is it "enthusiastic". He or she adds that in 1911 Rommie E. Boyd taught me that it wasn't any such word, also had me write 'do not emulate the cow'. The reader also asks, "Is the world flat?"

Answering the last question first. No the world is not flat but it was until a few months ago. Things have been getting better since the latter part of 1933.

As to the "emulate the cow" quotation, I get the meaning. Inferring that I also went to school to Rommie E. Boyd because I used

A local woman sent me in her opinion of men in general. The only reason I print it is that if I don't she may have more reason for thinking she's right.

Why shouldn't woman take the place of man? Man is an abject failure. Man, and not woman, brings on wars that are not only hideous in themselves, but leave a terrible aftermath. Man has failed as a diplomat, and as a result, nations constantly fight at each other. Man has failed in economies and has failed to devise a plan that would do away with depressions. The world is unsatisfactory, and is all due to the bungling methods of man. Woman, come forth. Take charge of things. Try your hand. Man is a fraud. Man has no sense of the fundamental. Man is the "bure."

What Has Happened Before
Sonia, rich and beautiful young widow leaves Marshovia for Paris to forget Danilo, most famous lover in the country. He has never seen her face because Marshovian law demands that widows wear heavy veils. Sonia's departure causes a panic as the government fears she will marry outside of Marshovia, taking her fortune, which is the financial backbone of the country with her. King Achmed sends Danilo, upon advice of the Queen, to Paris to woo and win Sonia. Danilo decides to spend the night before he must meet her at the Marshovian Embassy, at Maxim's where all the girls love him. Sonia follows him to Maxim's.

CHAPTER V
Midnight at Maxim's
Sonia stared, fascinated, as the girls stared. Danilo, they milled about him, pushing, forcing, elbowing their way to him. He laughed at her astonishment as the whole throng carried him along with it out of the foyer and into the cafe proper.

A waiter pushed past her in haste, shouting: "Don't stand in the entrance." The manager hurried to her and in a quick and businesslike tone ordered: "Go over to table fifteen. Order lots of champagne."

Her amazement rooted her to the spot, but another Maxim's beauty, coming here, propelled her forward. "Any Americans here tonight?" asked the newcomer.

"I don't know," faltered Sonia. Then it dawned on her. The waiter, the manager and now this girl took her for a Maxim's beauty!

"New here?" asked the girl. "Rather," "I'm Marcelle," offered the other. "Take my advice, dearie. If you want romance—grab an American. They treat you like a lady because they don't know better."

She stopped as her eye caught the girls crowding Danilo on the dance floor. She was electrified. "Look who's here! DANILLO!" she shouted.

Danilo, hearing his name, broke away and rushed over to Marcelle. He kissed her, looking at her tenderly.

"Remember last year," he murmured. "Do I?" She lifted her skirt and removed an elaborate bejeweled garter. She showed it to him with pride and then handed it to Sonia. "Pretty, isn't it?" she asked. "He gave it to me."

Sonia took the garter and turned it about in her hand. Beneath its jeweled clasp was the inscription: "From Achmed to Dolores." Her look changed from amazement to amusement as she turned to stare at Danilo. "What a terrible, wonderful man," her eyes said.

Danilo walked to her, lifted her head like an expert looking over a piece of merchandise. She lowered her eyes, blushing. "Not bad," he said to Marcelle. "Who is she?"

"She's new here. What's your name, dearie?" "Fifi," answered Sonia, quickly. She pointed to Danilo as she questioned Marcelle. "Who is he?" she asked.

"Don't you know me?" demanded Danilo. "No," Sonia's voice was disinterested. Danilo was nonplussed for a moment. Then he laughed.

"Well, she doesn't know me." "Why," said Marcelle in a tone that carried with it the explanation of everything. "Why, he's Danilo."

"Danilo?" Sonia was thoughtful. "Wait a minute. Aren't you the man who gave me this bracelet?" She pointed to one of the many on her arm.

"Listen!" said Danilo, his vanity pricked to the core. "If I ever gave you a bracelet, you'd remember it." "Besides," vouchsafed Marcelle, as she started to move away, "he doesn't give bracelets."

Danilo frowned with suspicion. What kind of Fifi was this to presume to upset his self confidence.

SOCIETY

Mrs. Norwood Is Honored at Party Tuesday

Mrs. E. N. Snodgrass was hostess to the Lat-a-Loc club Tuesday afternoon, honoring Mrs. Frank Norwood, former club member who is visiting here from Phoenix, Ariz. Two tables of bridge were played. A guest gift was presented to Mrs. Norwood. Refreshments were served to the honoree, Miss A. C. Francis, N. W. Bigham, Herbert Dunagan, Jim Tuttle, Addison Wadley, W. M. Schrock, B. C. Girdley, Jimmie Norwood and the hostess.

Personals

Mrs. Robert H. Currie, who was in a serious condition, having lost the use of her feet, when she was carried to Marlin several weeks ago, is reported to be a better being.

R. H. Currie was in from his ranch south and reported conditions good. Glenn Allen of Odessa transacted business here this morning.

R. V. Hyatt of Colorado is here on a business trip.

Percy J. Mills and Leon Goodman have returned from a trip to Lubbock, Clovis and north plains points.

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon B. Gresham moved to Midland today from Tyler.

J. N. Wilson, independent operator from Tyler, moved to Midland Tuesday.

D. L. Del Home of Reed Roller company, Oklahoma City, is moving today into his new home at 310 N. Whittaker.

Jio. M. Gist of Odessa is in town today.

Dr. P. M. Bristow of Stanton was here Tuesday.

Then he laughed again. "Shall we sit down?" he asked. "Sonia eyed the crowd inside. "Well," she said hesitantly, "there isn't much going on here tonight. No Americans," she finished expertly. She turned to him sweetly. "Are you a banker?"

"No." "Oh!" Her voice was disappointed. "I was just in the mood for a banker." She looked disinterestedly away as Danilo felt his self-assurance leave him by leaps and bounds. "You understand, don't you?" she apologized.

"Sure, sure," he said tersely. She came close to him and placed a caressing hand on his lapel. "I didn't mean to hurt your feelings," she murmured.

Danilo made pretense of dismissing the whole matter. "Quite alright. Never mind." Sonia looked him over from head to foot. She smiled. And quite in the expert manner in which he had estimated her charms, so now she raised his chin in her hand and appraised him carefully. She patted his cheek in approval. FEMININE FANCIES BY KATHLEEN ELAND

"To cure that middle-aged feeling, get a new RED dress and hat," advises Dr. W. Beran Wolfe, psychiatrist. He says that when patients come to him—middle aged women—the first thing he does is to send them out for a red dress, a red hat, a permanent wave, and a manicure. When they come back, he begins treatment but he says patients are already better by that time.

We can't speak for Dr. Wolfe's book-learning, but he evidently understands women. A new dress and hat, whether red or not will make any woman feel better, no matter what her age.

Fruit cocktails are now passe, if we are to believe the announcement of Miss Helen Dryden, artist, and authority on table arrangements. Also the "serbet" glass has been retired from active use. First courses such as shrimp cocktail are now served on flat plates. The dessert, too, is always served on a plate.

The dining room is now being experimented with by the apostles of change. Among the unusual in dining room furnishings we have noticed mention of the following: dolles and napkins of woven cotton-phant, a white organdie cloth with double fold of white net, and a table of plate glass whose top alone weighs 350 pounds.

We vote for the table that is wooden and comfortably old-fashioned.

Helen Welshimer's lovely poems have wakened a haunting response in the hearts of hundreds of women. Less widely-known, perhaps, are her prose articles on philosophy and life, particularly as they pertain to her sex. Here is an extract from one of her recent articles:

"Some values are eternal in this world of shifting fashions. Not many, of course. But truth, integrity, decency, and love have never lowered their banners. The world may pretend that it is too sophisticated, too blasé to be interested in homely values. But there are no others. Fluff and nonsense blow away in the first strong wind. Only the homely virtues are left. People go through the same cycle of emotions, meet responsibilities, bear them or shift them, just as they have always done. It's a pretense, this guise of being hard-boiled which the twentieth century thought would make a becoming sartorial affect."

Every "far advanced" case of tuberculosis was an "early case" once. Early discovery means early recovery. Christmas Seal funds help find the early case.

Advertisement for 200,000 Motor-Minded Men, featuring the text 'See Why Germ Processed Oil Cuts Motor Wear and Saves You Money!'.

AFTER seeing the demonstration of oiliness and film strength pictured below, at least 200,000 motor-minded men have been convinced that "Any oil would be better oil if Germ Processed!"

Every well-known motor oil in America has been tried in this instrument. The addition of a drop of Germ Essence to every oil used gave an increase in film strength and oiliness that could be felt, seen and heard!

Diagram 1: Assembled instrument. Split bearings and shaft, lubricated with competitive oil, are clamped between "jaws" of instrument. With set-screw, extreme pressure is applied.

Diagram 2: Crank is now used to turn shaft. Oil film ruptures and bearings "seize." Shaft extremely hard to turn. You can even hear the metal-to-metal contact!

Diagram 3: Drop of Germ Essence is added to oil in bearing. Same pressure applied. Shaft can now be turned easily. Smooth, quiet movement—no seizing, no sound. Proof that Germ Processing increases oiliness and film strength of any oil!

SCIENCE IMPROVES ON NATURE By combining other elements with iron, science produced alloy steels of special strength and durability. Many of these alloy steels are used in your car. By adding Germ Essence to fine mineral oil, Continental scientists produced Conoco Germ Processed Oil, which has greater film strength and stability. Drive in at the Conoco Red Triangle to get greater motor protection and lower oil consumption!

The Merry Widow--

"Not bad," she commented. "Come on." And taking his arm she led the dumbfounded Danilo to a table. "Lots of champagne," she called to the waiter. Danilo regained his confidence. He moved his chair close to hers. "You're the freshest Fifi I ever met," he murmured in her ear. Sonia half closed her eyes as she whispered: "But a nice Fifi."

"How nice?" Her voice was languorous. "Not too nice." Danilo's arm tightened about her. "Your right eye says yes and your left eye says no. Fifi, you're cock-eyed."

Sonia faced him. "You're right," she agreed. "For instance, at the moment I am really looking at somebody else. And what's more her voice suddenly became subdued, but definite. "Take your hand away."

Danilo laughed. "You're charming, fascinating, delightful. . . . That's better," observed Sonia. "Now you're behaving like a gentleman." She jumped suddenly. "Oh! Give me back my shoe."

"On the contrary," laughed Danilo flirtatiously. He moved very close to her and spoke softly in her ear. "You know, I'm just on the verge of a nervous breakdown."

His expression changed to one of startled amazement. He leaped back squinting in his chair. "What's that?" he gasped. Sonia's bearing was elegant, her voice charming. "Just a little piece of ice," she answered sweetly. "And thank you so much for my shoe."

Both affected an air of nonchalance as the waiter filled their glasses with champagne. As Danilo raised his in toast, he observed that Sonia's glance had strayed beyond him. A man was signalling to her. She shrugged her shoulders as if to answer: "Sorry, but I'm engaged for the moment." Danilo's annoyance was complete.

"Girls who sit at my table don't flirt with other men," he told her, icily.

There was a moment of unpleasant tension. Then Sonia's face wreathed in smiles. Danilo turned to her tenderly and once more observed that her smile was charming—but was not for him.

An overweight Don Juan, wearing a bright fez, winked back at Sonia from a nearby table. Danilo rose from his chair and started for this new rival. The man hastened out of the room, but he failed to reach the door before Danilo grabbed him tightly by the coat collar. He found himself firmly deposited in a waiting carriage. Danilo slammed the door and called to the driver. "Constantinople," was his command.

He hurried back in Maxim's. From the doorway he saw three very elegant Chinese bowing gallantly to Sonia at the table. He closed in softly behind them and herded them out of the cafe and into a carriage. "Shanghai," he instructed the caddy.

On his way back he stopped his waiter. "Adolphe! I want a private dining room."

"Very well, Count." Danilo advanced into the cafe. Sonia smiled up at him happily and then looked about her. He leaned toward her menacingly. "The gentleman smiling at you—what country do you think he comes from?"

Sonia's tone was sweet. "He just told me. He's half Russian and half South American."

"Oh," said Danilo seriously, "that's a problem." The waiter bowed to Danilo and spoke in a low tone. "Number 7," he said. "Let's go," he said to Sonia. "Where?" she asked.

Her eyes opened wide and her face flushed as she heard his answer. "Upstairs," answered Danilo. What happens when a lady, too long cloistered, ventures into the domain of romance and champagne? Don't miss tomorrow's chapter in the Merry Widow's exciting love story.

ROBBED FOR FAMILY
WACO (U.P.)—Because he robbed a store to secure money so he could take his wife and child to a new locality where he hoped to find work, Gerald H. Johnson, 24, is facing the electric chair.

Through the bars of the county jail Johnson told a reporter that because he was out of work and his baby sick, he robbed the Bluebonnet department store. With the loot he was planning to take his wife and baby to a new community. Johnson had been given a conditional pardon less than a month ago from three 99-year sentences. Now he faces prospects of the electric chair under the habitual criminal act.
