

INSURGENTS ARE IN SIGHT OF BARCELONA

A 'MOVIE BRIEF' ON THE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

FATHER of Diane, cute daughter of the late Mrs. Hopkins, and three sons by divorced first wife, Hopkins occasionally takes time for play. Likes horse races, boxing, golf, poker, bridge, poetry and baseball, which he used to play to get money for college. He was born in Iowa, a harness maker's son.

INSPECTOR of public works, he frequently has gone trouble-shooting in person to get the lowdown. Thirty years' social service gave him deep humanitarian convictions, which some of his opponents say are "too deep" for sound economics in handling the billions of dollars in the huge relief fund.

SPENDER of billions (eight in five years—American record), lover of red galleons and hater of red tape, he's called genius of administration. Often eats (sailed, rolls) on jump. Has been accused of being unsympathetic toward business, though he says he is a firm believer in private enterprise.

ILL with stomach trouble early this year, Hopkins doesn't look well but still has plenty of fire in his eye. He's colorful talker, nervous, energetic. Opponents have often prefaced attacks with statement they think he is honest but that ideas on spending are wrong.

Hopkins Will Give Council His Ideas

New Commerce Secretary Will Meet With Advisory Group

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—Harry Hopkins may present to the business advisory council this week the first broad outlines of his program for improving economic conditions and increasing employment through the cooperative efforts of business and government.

The council meets Thursday, and Hopkins, who was confirmed by the senate yesterday as secretary of commerce, is expected to take the occasion to submit his ideas for business improvement.

These have not been divulged in detail even to some of his close associates. He is expected, however, to call for specific attacks on several problems, possibly including friction between business and the government, factionalism in organized labor, the construction lag in the utilities industry, and the railroad financial situation.

The senate approved Mr. Roosevelt's appointment of Hopkins 58 to 27 after opponents had criticized his administration of the WPA.

After being questioned for two days by the senate commerce committee, the presidential adviser and former WPA chief was raked over the coals for three more days on the senate floor by republicans and anti-administration democrats.

C-C Membership Drive Tomorrow

Organized for action, two teams of workers waited today for a breakfast pep rally to imbue them with further enthusiasm at 7:30 a. m. Wednesday morning at the Crawford before attacking the problem of enlisting more chamber of commerce members for 1939.

V. A. Merrick and Cliff Wiley, team captains, completed details of organization for the campaign at a Monday night meeting and said their teams were each ready to out-do the other Wednesday.

Ted O. Groehl, membership chairman, said the objective was to enlist enough support from new and old members to realize the chamber's $12,000 budget for the year. Approximately $3,000 additional is needed for this.

Both Merrick's and Wiley's teams were confident that they would win in a membership contest and would eat at the other's expense Wednesday at 7 p. m. at the Settles.

ARRESTED AFTER 7-YEAR SEARCH

DALLAS, Jan. 24 (AP)—Penniless from stock market gambles, Grover M. Yowell, sought for seven years as the embezzler of $75,000 from a Paducah, Tex., bank, was arrested by G-men in Memphis, Tenn., early today while he drove a milk delivery truck.

The former vice-president and managing officer of the Security National bank of Paducah, indicted in March, 1932, at Wichita Falls, Tex., on a dozen counts of embezzlement and misapplication of funds, was seized at a Memphis street intersection, FBI Agent E. E. Conroy announced here today.

The bank closed after his flight. The 53-year-old former banker and school teacher who covered his disappearance with a shroud that baffled federal men for years, signed a waiver of removal and will be returned to Wichita Falls, Conroy said.

Inquiry Into Labor Office Is Sought

Impeachment Of Secy. Perkins Suggested; Bridges Case Cited

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—Rep. Thomas (R-NJ) submitted to the house today a resolution directing the judiciary committee to investigate official conduct of Frances Perkins, secretary of labor, with a view to impeachment.

The measure also suggested impeachment of James L. Houghtling, commissioner of Immigration, and Gerald D. Reilly, labor department solicitor.

Citing testimony before a house committee which investigated un-American activities, Thomas' resolution contended the three "were and are guilty of high crime and misdemeanors in office" in failing to carry out deportation proceedings against Harry Bridges, west coast CIO leader.

Thomas said Miss Perkins, Houghtling and Reilly had "conspired to defer and to defeat the deportation."

Secretary Perkins quickly issued a statement, declaring she would ask for an immediate hearing to inform the country of the "true facts" in the Bridges case.

"I welcome the introduction of the resolution," she said, "and shall ask for an immediate hearing before the committee to which it may be referred so that congress, and through it the American public, may be fully acquainted with the true facts of the deportation proceedings in the Bridges case and the reason why they have been held in abeyance temporarily."

On motion of Majority Leader Rayburn of Texas, the resolution was referred to the judiciary committee.

Bridges deportation has been demanded by the Dies committee and the American Legion, among others. Dies committee witnesses testified he was a communist and an alien. Bridges was born in Australia.

The resolution provides that the judiciary committee "shall report its findings to the house, together with such articles of impeachment as the facts may warrant."

COWGIRL SPONSORS TO BE INVITED TO RODEO HERE

Directors of the Big Spring Cow-boy Reunion and Rodeo association have approved a plan for adding cowgirl sponsors to the annual show as a feature attraction.

Cities in this area will be invited to send their entries to Big Spring to compete in what will be the earliest major rodeo in this section this year.

The dates of June 23-24-25 were affirmed by directors who pointed out that it would mean that the rodeo would not be in conflict with other West Texas events on July 4, hence better performers could be had.

Johnny Nall was named advertising manager of the association by the board of directors.

Last Defenses Fall; Govt. Moves Out

Crushing Three-Way Drive Points To Capture Of City

FERPIGNAN, France (At The Spanish Frontier), Jan. 24 (AP)—An official telephone message from Barcelona tonight reported the insurgent armies were attacking the outskirts of the government capital.

HENDAYE, France (At The Spanish Frontier), Jan. 24 (AP)—Insurgent forces today smashed the last natural defenses southwest and northwest of Barcelona and their guns began pouring high explosives into the Spanish government capital, military dispatches said.

A crushing three-way drive was reported to have crumbled these defenses and insurgent columns this afternoon were said to be ringing the city between six and seven miles away.

The government was rushing its ministries and civilians out of the capital into the protection of the mountainous area to the north toward the French frontier, but government troops were still holding out before Barcelona.

Reports reaching the frontier said General Jose Mina himself, the "savior of Madrid," was called to fly from the central zone to command the last-ditch defense of Barcelona.

Even though Barcelona should fall, the government already was installing its forces in other towns.

Under nightfall Barcelona was under direct siege.

Insurgent bombers flying ahead of the land forces raided Barcelona repeatedly in a campaign evidently designed to break resistance of the government troops.

A hall of bombs, particularly on the thickly populated lower quarter of Barcelona around the port crumbled entire blocks of buildings and took many victims, but the capital remained calm, dispatches said.

Government officials in Barcelona were counting on their forces to hold off the insurgents until the capital's defenses could be organized under the new martial law orders issued yesterday.

Evacuation of noncombatants and foreigners was proceeding under constant danger of the heavy aerial bombardment to which the city has been subjected during the past few days.

The United States cruiser Omaha was en route from Villafraña, France, to Catalonia to take American citizens out of the

RACE COMMISSION BILL SUBMITTED

AUSTIN, Jan. 24 (AP)—A bill creating a state racing commission and paving the way to possible legalization of race track betting was slipped into the house hopper today.

Bitter Broadside Fired Against O'Daniel Tax

Solon Calls Transaction Levy The Result Of Study By 'Robbers'

AUSTIN, Jan. 24 (AP)—A thundering attack on Governor W. Lee O'Daniel's proposed 1.6 per cent transaction tax was fired by Rep. W. J. Galbreath of Wharton in the Texas house of representatives today.

Shouting amid cheers of some of his colleagues, the first term lawmaker who is a blacksmith by trade, asserted:

"This so-called transaction tax is the result of careful study of the biggest robbers and thieves in the state. The backers of the move to abolish the ad valorem tax on property are those who bought it all up when delinquent taxes forced a sale."

Galbreath said that should the ad valorem levy be abolished, the owners of lands so purchased should return them to the "poor people" who were forced to sacrifice them.

"The whole thing has no value," he roared into the house microphone, "seems to me the governor would have found out what this stink bomb was before he exploded it here right in our faces."

"I would like to make it a felony and hang a heavy fine on anyone who came before this assembly with such an insult to the people of Texas and their representatives in this house."

Cheers of "pour it on 'em," "give 'em the works," "let him go on," were heard as Galbreath talked.

He was reminded by Acting Speaker Homer Leonard of McAllen he would have to confine his remarks to the issue under discussion, a resolution asking the federal social security board if the pension plan suggested by O'Daniel would permit federal fund matching.

"Don't stop him," shouted someone.

"I just want to tell you what I think of this thing," Galbreath said.

Leonard permitted him to continue.

"From now on," the Wharton man continued, "I'm going to oppose with everything I've got, anything and everything Gov. O'Daniel suggests."

A short time previously, in his press conference, the governor had indicated the more criticism he got on the tax proposal, the better he would like it. He said he wanted a thorough-going discussion.

O'Daniel said a third message to the legislature, which he expected to have prepared at an early moment, would concern abolition of special funds into which a large part of the state revenue is placed.

A member moved to print Galbreath's remarks in the house journal. The motion was adopted but a few moments later was rescinded.

Galbreath's attack came in the midst of discussion of a resolution by Rep. John K. Russell of Cleburne which would have instructed the house clerk to ask the social security board to rule on whether O'Daniel's plan to administer old age assistance through county judges would permit federal matching of pension funds.

Wool Men Convene In San Angelo

SAN ANGELO, Jan. 24 (AP)—Hundreds of broad-based westerners, members of the National Wool Growers' association, convened here today to form a policy toward trade concessions and seek means of dealing with such problems as fluctuating wool prices and low mutton consumption.

Roscoe Rich, Burley, Idaho, president of the association, prepared to attack in his annual address the reciprocal trade treaty policy of the United States.

F. R. Marshall, secretary of the association, was to present his annual report and voice ranchmen's apprehension that the United States may make future trade treaties which will cause a reduction in wool prices.

How Franco's Drives Have Eaten Into Loyalist Areas

Four months after the war started in Spanish Morocco in July, 1936, the insurgents controlled western Spain and were closing in on Madrid. The government fled to Valencia.

Six months later, Madrid's defenders had routed an insurgent thrust north of the city, but the insurgents had advanced along the Mediterranean and were pushing back the Basques along the northern coast.

Government territory continued to shrink. By November, 1937, its only seaports were those along the Mediterranean. Barcelona now was the capital.

Franco smashed southward, and on April 15, 1938, cut loyalist territory in two.

Just before Christmas, 1938, Franco drove north and east at Barcelona. This is how Spain stood when the drive was four weeks old.

Credit Union

"All participants in the Credit Union are well pleased with its operation," Potter said in explaining the setup. "It has provided Cosden employees with a simple, systematic method of salary savings, through purchase of shares; and at the same time it has provided a fund whereby employees in need may borrow at a low interest rate and with easy repayment. It has provided credit to many who would be unable to get it elsewhere, and it has provided funds at a minimum cost. The loan turnover of nearly $40,000 in two years time, we think, bespeaks the success of the 'Credit Union.'" war zone. About 30 Americans from the Barcelona area were expected to board the Omaha, while an estimated 120 others were planning to stay. If the insurgents capture Barcelona they will hold 26 of the 49 provincial capitals of mainland Spain. In such cases important-held territory would have a population of about 16,000,000, with about 6,000,000 remaining in the separated government zones—northern Catalonia and central Spain.

tors remained on the floor but those who did listened intently. Adams, the bill's floor manager, said there "has been much misstatement of the situation—some innocent and some not innocent." Adams said "the issue has been presented as to whether or not there is to be a cut in the relief money." "The question is not on a cut," he added, "but on the amount which shall be added to a bill providing for additional relief funds." "Some of us representing the view that $725,000,000 is adequate," the Colorado senator continued, "resent the attitude—that some take—that we want to turn those in need out in the streets in the dead of winter—that we have no regard for the obligation of the United States to its citizens."

Besides her parents Elsie Jean is survived by four brothers, J. R. Jr., Virgil, Billie and Freddy Overton; one sister, Ruth Overton; and grandparents, Mrs. Sadie Overton of Lees and Mr. and Mrs. William Fannin of McCamey.

AUTO UNION DISPUTE GOES TO COURTS

DETROIT, Jan. 24 (AP)—The United Automobile Workers Union—a house divided—left to the courts today a vital phase in the struggle of its highest officers for control of the organization. The disputing factions prepared for a circuit court hearing Saturday of an injunction tying up the UAW's funds. The decision in this case would give one side a legal advantage.

Illness Fatal To J. W. Curtis

Services For Long-time Resident To Be Held Wednesday

A prolonged illness for John Wesley Curtis, 72, long-time resident of Howard county, ended fatally today at his home five miles north on the Lamesa road. Curtis, in failing health for some time, had been seriously ill for the past 10 weeks. He was a native of Arkansas but came to Jones county in Texas at an early age, later migrated to Fisher county, and came to Howard county to make his home 22 years ago. Curtis was well known as a farmer and as a realtor, having followed that trade for nearly 20 years. He was well known in Big Spring and over this area, was a member of the First Methodist church and the Woodmen lodge. Surviving are four daughters, Lola Curtis, Mrs. Lela Forrest, Mrs. Gertrude Canell and Mrs. Vera Crabtree of Big Spring; one nephew which the Curtis family reared, Floyd Ashley; and a number of other relatives including brothers and sisters-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Grover Broughton, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Broughton; nieces, Mrs. J. V. Davis, Mrs. Willis Potter of Big Spring, Mrs. Henry Sneed of San Angelo, Mrs. Oda Fleming of Knott; and three nephews, Lon Curtis, Norris Curtis and Grover Newton of Big Spring. Services were to be held at 2 p. m. Wednesday in the First Methodist church with Rev. J. O. Haynes, pastor, in charge. Burial was to be in the Mount Olive cemetery beside his wife who succumbed March 8, 1928. Eberly Funeral home was in charge of arrangements.

O'Daniel Defends Choice Of Labor Commissioner

AUSTIN, Jan. 24 (AP)—Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel today sent another batch of appointments to the senate for confirmation and in a press conference defended his appointment of Joe Kunschick of Austin as state labor commissioner. Organized labor has voiced opposition to Kunschick on grounds he is a "company" union man. He is an employee of the Southwestern Bell Telephone company. "Kunschick is a hard-working, able man of fine family," O'Daniel said. "I have known him since 1933, and I appointed him because I thought him qualified and believed he would make a fine commissioner." "I was not trying to play politics. I don't know how. I spent a long time attempting to find a man every one would like. It's a hard thing to do." Asked if the appointment was satisfactory to Sen. W. C. Overton of Dallas, O'Daniel replied it was. A reporter suggested the appointment occasioned much surprise because Kunschick was "generally unknown." "A lot of us were generally unknown," laughed the man who never had been heard of politically in Texas until last spring and then on the governorship in a single primary over a big field of seasoned opponents.

SUSPECT QUIZZED IN TORSO SLAYINGS

CLEVELAND, Jan. 24 (AP)—Detective Peter Merylo took into custody today a middle aged salesman for questioning concerning Cleveland's 12 baffling "torso slayings." Merylo has spent the last four years seeking solution of the unsolved slayings. The man claimed to be a former New York doctor who was barred from practice and became a salesman of medical supplies, Merylo said.

AS HE GROWS, his empire grows, say people who some day will be ruled by Akihito (above), Japanese crown prince. He was five in December.

MARKETS Wall Street

NEW YORK, Jan. 24 (AP)—In one of the jumpiest sessions in recent months, the stock market today put on a fast early recovery, slumped sharply around midday and then achieved another comeback after noon to close generally higher. Gains ran to 2 or more points until around noon when a selling wave hit the list with sufficient force to delay the ticker tape as much as five minutes for a brief interval. Dealings soon slowed and losses of 1 to 2 were quickly cancelled and replaced with advances of as much. Improvement was retained in the majority of instances at the finish. Montgomery Ward stock was one of the strong spots of the proceedings as the company's review expressed optimism for business prospects. President Fairless of U. S. Steel sounded a hopeful note in an address, but "big steel" shares experienced rising difficulties.

Problem Of Relief Labor Before The City Commission

City commissioners, in their regular semi-monthly meeting this evening, will be faced with the problem of what to do with surplus relief labor, it was indicated. Now operating the airport project which provides for 150 WPA workers, the city may be asked to consider expansion of the project to provide for an additional 30 laborers and possibly 80 more when the state hospital roadway job is completed. The city has submitted a park project which it hopes would be approved in order to absorb a large number of laborers. Other matters to come before the commissioners included a renewal of the city recreational project and a decision on a grade level for the property at Second and Main where McCrory's plan to erect a building.

THE STATE'S CONSTITUTION

Coke Stevenson's defense of the Texas constitution, in his address after taking the oath as Lieutenant Governor, was a clearcut masterful presentation of the powers of that basic law to meet the needs—the legitimate needs—of the state of Texas. The people crying for its abrogation, for the writing of a new constitution, have never yet showed that something that should be done in Texas cannot be done under the terms of the constitution now. They have shown that the constitution permitted the doing of harmful things. As new problems arose which were believed to be in capable of being settled under the constitution the people have assented to such amendments as accomplished the purpose sought—sometimes. For the fact is that some of the amendments have had an opposite effect from what they promised, and as a rule the people are chary of making changes that might make matters worse. They have refused to sanction more changes than they have endorsed, and that is a good sign.

Demand for a new constitution comes from people who have never said what would be omitted from the old document nor what would be added, nor why. Until they can do that and make it apparent that a new constitution would make living in Texas pleasanter there is not likely to be a change, nor should there be.

DENTIST PAYS PITTSBURGH—Dr. Frank Hood is convinced there's a crook in the county jail.

The dentist treated nine patients in the jail yesterday. Later he discovered $4 in cash hidden in his pocket. His patients, questioned, said they knew nothing of it.

EXPENSIVE EXPERIMENT BERNE, Ind.—It cost Elmer Winterger, Jr., $10 to learn that a furnace draws air.

He told fellow workers in a furniture factory he'd learned in school that there was no inward air current in front of a furnace.

To prove his theory, Winterger put a $10 bill on the boiler room floor near the furnace. A draft carried it inside.

THIEVES STRIKE HOME POCATELLO, Idaho—Police Chief Robert M. Pugmire has offered a $10 reward for apprehension of the thieves who broke into a summer cabin near here and stripped it of cooking equipment, wall decorations and "everything that was loose."

Today And Tomorrow By Walter Lippmann

THE DIS-EMPLOYED

Except as a symbol of gesture of distrust for the existing relief arrangements, the action of the house in reducing the deficiency appropriation for relief is of no importance. To save 150 millions in an expenditure of 8,500 millions brings us no nearer in fact, nor even in theory, to an enduring solution of the problem. It will do nothing.

LIPPMAN for the national credit, nothing for the taxpayer, and it will probably inflict severe suffering and anxiety upon many thousands of families.

The fact of the matter is that as a nation we do not fully understand the problem, and no one in public life really knows as yet what to do about it. This is just as true of republicans as of democrats, of New Dealers as of anti-New Dealers. All of us are groping. One has only to look at what the critics of the existing system say, taking every charge at its face value and accepting every proposed reform as feasible, to see that they are not venturing to challenge the essentials of the system. They complain about politics in relief, they would like to spend a little less money, they would like to decentralize the administration. For my own part I agree with these suggestions. But the essentials remain, and they do not recognize, much less cure, the real trouble.

The essentials which remain are, first, the acceptance as a fact that there is a permanent mass of unemployed; second, the opinion that the able-bodied unemployed must have work-relief rather than a dole; third, the conviction that much more than half the cost of relief must come out of federal funds. Not all public men would subscribe flatly to all three propositions. For if they do, I believe, they will be found to challenge them when it comes to casting a vote for which they are publicly accountable.

We may ask ourselves, then, how far it is true that these three propositions will control any system which can be set up. Taking them in reverse order, it is, I think, certainly true that the lion's share of the cost of all relief is bound henceforth to come out of federal funds. From January, 1933, to June, 1938, a period of five and a half years, the nation spent 15 billions on relief, and of this total almost three-quarters came from the federal government. Not even the Byrnes committee hopes to cut the amount to two-thirds; no one that I know of is on record as thinking it could be cut to a half.

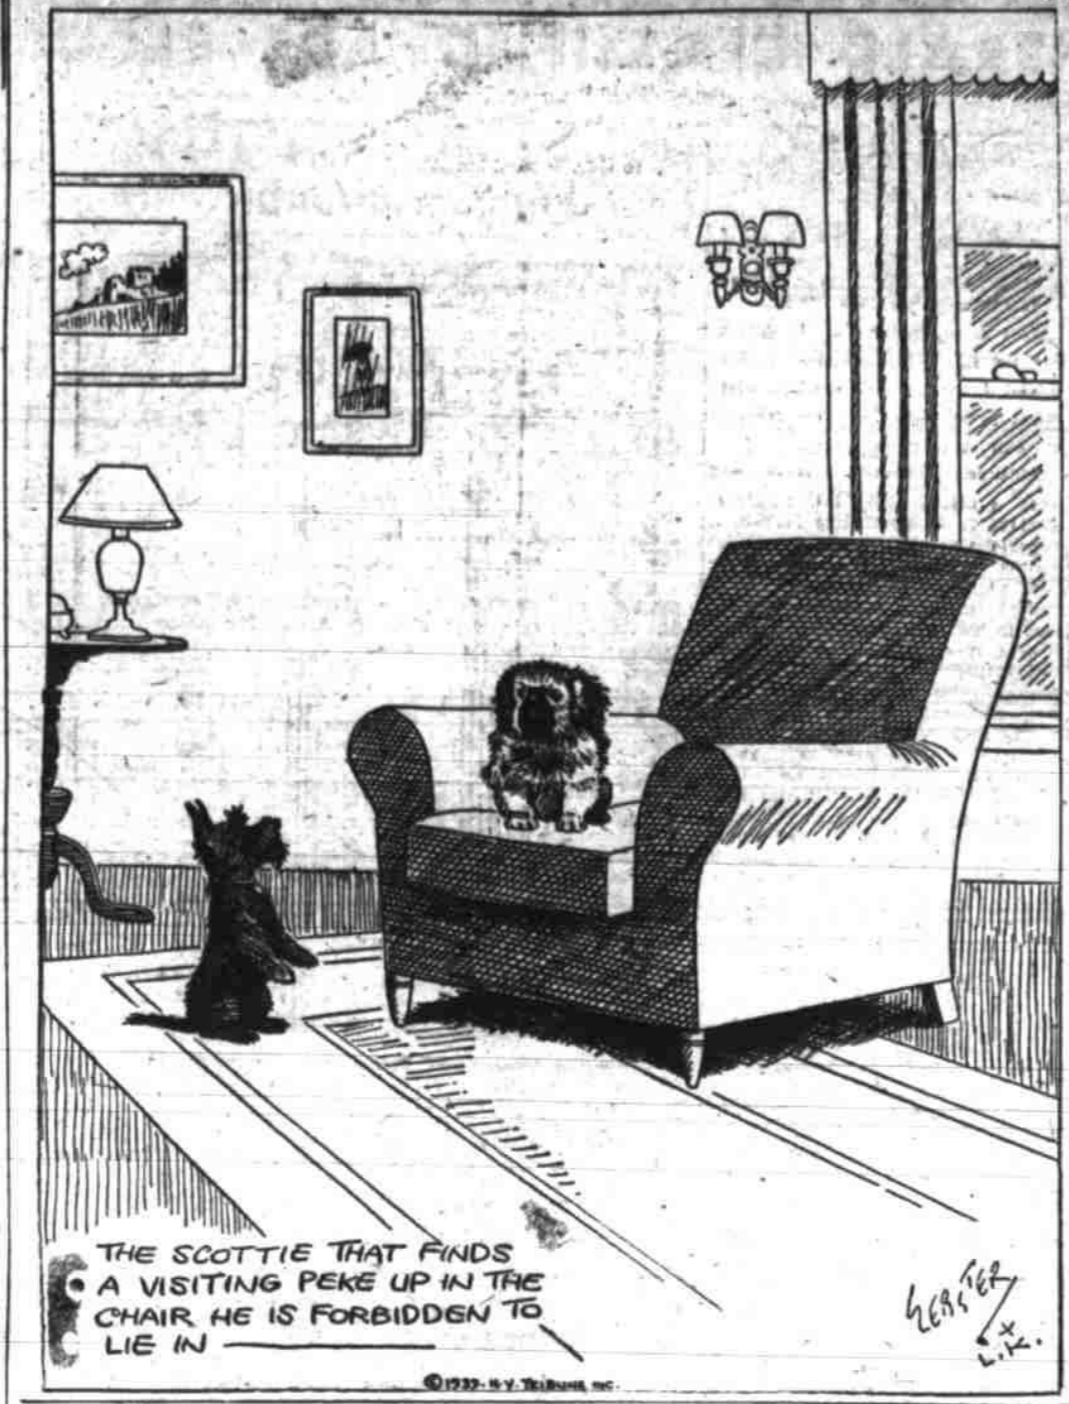

The reason is, I think, clear enough. The revenues of local and state governments are based primarily upon land, and in the past it has been the increase in the value of land which has provided them with increasing revenues. The expansion of local government has been financed out of the rising value of real estate brought about by the growth of population. Almost certainly this period has come to an end, with the reduction in the birth rate and the stoppage of immigration. As a result government has had to turn from the taxation of land values to the taxation of incomes. But local government cannot tax incomes as effectively as it can tax land. For the factories and services which produce incomes will move away from cities and states to escape heavy taxation. Land cannot move away. Therefore, as the burden is placed on movable incomes instead of on immovable land, only the federal government can tax successfully. For the federal tax collector is everywhere.

What are we to think about the proposition that there is a permanent mass of unemployed that nothing short of a great boom can temporarily absorb into private industry? We have to think, I am afraid, that in the prevailing economic philosophy of all responsible groups in America, a permanent mass of unemployed is, so to speak, ordained.

For all organized groups in American life, the farmers, the business men and the industrial wage workers, are, it would appear, thoroughly converted to the idea that the price of the thing they sell must be "stabilized" at some desirable minimum. They want a "bottom" under their prices, a "protection" against "shelshers." To accomplish this the farmers use the tariff, compulsory or induced control of production, government loans, subsidies and the retirement of marginal lands; the business men use the tariff, various kinds of agreements, mergers and other monopolistic devices; the wage workers use collective contracts, union rules against apprentices, wages and hours laws and the rule that the prevailing hour wage must be paid on relief and on public works.

The total net result of this combined price fixing is to fix prices above the true market level—that is to say, above the level at which the demand for goods and services will buy the whole available supply. There is thus a permanent surplus of labor and productive capacity which cannot be sold in the market. It is shut out of the market. It is composed of farmers who cannot make ends meet because what they are able to earn is not equal to the prices they have to pay for what they must buy; of potential business men who never become business men, or quickly fail because they cannot make a profit at the existing costs of production; and, above all, of wage workers whom it is too expensive to employ at the existing level of wage rates.

There are, of course, ups and downs of employment, due to the business cycle. But there is also a permanent pool of unemployed in good times and in bad, and this permanent unemployment is the direct consequence of the general national belief that all prices for goods and services must be stabilized. The cost of relief for the able-bodied unemployed is the charge the nation has to pay for the parity price in agriculture, the stabilized price in industry and the minimum prevailing wage rate in employment. If fixing these prices is a desirable form of protection, then permanent relief to what we ought to call the disemployed is the cost of that protection. The problem of permanent unemployment is insoluble, given the prevailing economic dogmas of the nation.

This brings us to the third proposition and raises the question of what kind of provision the nation ought to make for its disemployed. It cannot let them deteriorate in idleness with no more than a few groceries and a few bags of coal to keep them from perishing. No one who looks at the human realities will seriously propose to do that to able-bodied men and women. On the other hand, the vice of work relief as now conducted is that it does not do enough to equip the workers for real employment. It does something. The CCC camps and the National Youth Administration do in part at least train some young men for eventual employment at the existing wage rates. But that is not done, I should think, for most of the WPA workers, not even for the 30 per cent of them who are under 35 years of age.

Yet surely the sound human approach to this problem would be to regard the young and able-bodied disemployed not as "relief cases" but as persons, somehow handicapped, who need to be retrained and re-equipped for the struggle of life. They are not inefficient enough to be profitably employed at prevailing wage rates. If the wage rates are to stay, then their efficiency must be raised or they must be supported at public expense.

If they were being educated and disciplined for self-support, the country would, I believe, feel quite differently about the money that is being spent. For then there would be some prospect of solving the problem eventually; whereas today the kind of relief that most of them get makes it likely that they will always need relief. And that is the kind of spending which the people as a whole do not want fastened permanently upon them.

Hollywood DANGEROUS SERVICE

Sights And Sounds by ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—If every movie biggie read every movie story would-be movie writer asked him to, there wouldn't be any movie biggies. All the same, like the story about the true man and Irving Cummings.

Cummings was having some work done on his trees at home, and the true surgeon got to talking with him. Said he'd written a yarn and would Cummings like to see it? Well, a movie director is a busy man—and a movie director is always getting a director to read people's yarns. Irving sidestepped it—and so Wassel didn't see his book away, it got published, it got to be a best-seller, and Paramount has just bought it. It's called "F.O.B. Detroit."

So it seems fitting that Cummings should be directing—with more enthusiasm than he's had over any assignment in a long time—another movie yarn, almost slipped through the executive fingers: "The Life of Alexander Graham Bell."

This little number might now be resting in the story department's discard file except for the arr of coincidences which stretched longer than its custom. It happens that Kenneth MacGowan has a daughter. It happens she goes to Stanton U. It happens she has a friend, the daughter of Writer Ray Harris. It happened one night—the writer's daughter was visiting the daughter of MacGowan, an esteemed associate producer at 20th Century-Fox. The girl asked casually why her dad's fine story about the inventor of the telephone. So—

MacGowan, curious, looked it up. He read it, casually at first, then avidly. He went to Big Boss Darryl Zanuck. Together they did the nuptials, customary among executives who have found something. They bought it. It seems the rejected synopsis of the yarn had been enthusiastically concerned with the invention, and had skimmed over the Great Love Story, a procedure almost guaranteed to put a script in the discard file.

For once—which makes all the enthusiasm understandable—they had found a real life story in which an authentic great love was the theme and motivation. For once, instead of looking for material to bolster dramatically a historic tale, the script—Lamar Trotti—and the associate producer had to huddle endlessly on which of the abundant materials could best be omitted. It is the studio's proud boast that the final script "with the exception of one or two very slight and hardly noticeable liberties, is the true story of the invention of the telephone and the great love story which inspired Bell in his work."

The script, incidentally, has the approval of the Bell descendants, including Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Bell's daughter, wife of the president of the National Geographic Society. Don Ameche plays the title role—as yet unlearned, which is also authentic and Loretta Young plays Mabel Gardner Hubbard, who was to become Mrs. Bell.

An inventive hero whose sweetheart is deaf, whose scientific work is bent toward the great task of aiding her in her handicap, who was unlearned on to succeed by her unfeeling faith—no wonder they are doing handstands! "That there is fighting in the bazaar, that the Cooringhis are killing Burmese women and children and burning their houses, and that the Burmese must have revenge," translated Colin. "Stand quite still, and let them get out. We haven't a chance for that door. We shall only get crushed, perhaps knifed in that mob. A Burman doesn't care who he slashes with his dah, once he gets excited."

He had stood close to him, in order to hear him. The pandemonium was denuding. "No, that way is no good!" shouted Peter. He gripped Petronella and Jean by their forearms, and bore them forward. "Come on—over the stage! The other exit!" Even in that instant, Petronella had time to feel proud of Peter. Colin had spoken so grimly, and anxiously, Peter was laughing. He looked elated and excited. His confidence communicated itself to the others.

"She's Fainted!" "Of course! Never thought of that!" yelled Hugh. They scrambled up over the footlights, across the roughly carpeted stage. They could tell, from the thudding sound of bare feet, jumping on to the stage, that hundreds of the audience were following their lead. "Out through here! Keep close together. Turn right for the car!" shouted Peter. But it was impossible to reach the car. It resembled an island, in the flood of the crowd from the Pwe. They stood aside, wondering, and let the throng from behind rush past them, running, jabbering. There was a fire up the street. It threw the ornate roof of a temple into silhouette, and the bobbing heads of the men and women running towards its blaze. A small pagoda reflected its light, red gold against the sky. There was firing, and shouting. High above everything else, they heard a terrible scream. It rose and rose, then was abruptly silenced. Petronella saw Jean jump forward and caught her.

"She's fainted." "We'll carry her." She felt sick herself. "We must get the girls out of this—come on this way." Peter and Hugh carried Jean between them. She came round, staggered to the ground and was with them, down two streets. Pedestrians were hurrying in the opposite direction, or reinforcing the shutters of their houses and shops. There was a taxi standing near

Man About Manhattan by GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—It seemed so incredible, so horrible, that for interminable moments none of us spoke. His words bit into us like lead hitting into a palmetto log. We sat there stunned, staring across the room to where a girl was sitting before a wide, high mirror in the bar. "Yes," he was saying, "the doctors give her about six months, then..." What he was telling us was that this girl had a reason, a most excellent reason for behaving as she had been for months on end, for haunting dim-lit bars and brightly lit bars night after night and all night, and always saying the same thing to the men behind the bars, "Brandy... more brandy..." What he was telling us was that this girl was dying of cancer, this lovely girl whose name is as pertinent to the theatre as moon, and tides and winds are to the ocean.

Hines for a second time on charges he sold political protection to the Dutch Schultz policy racket mob continued today. Two jurors were picked yesterday. Hines, white-haired political veteran recognized as a Tammany power for more than two decades, watched intently as his attorney, Lloyd Paul Stryker, and District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey questioned veniremen. General Sessions Judge Charles C. Nott Jr. deferred ruling until later in the trial on a defense motion to dismiss the conspiracy count in the 13-point indictment against Hines. The conspiracy count is the basis of 12-felony counts which accuse Hines of contriving a $20,000,000-a-year lottery. Hines' first trial ended in a mistrial last September. READING AND WRITING

"WILD PALMS," by William Faulkner; (Random; $2.50). This is a curious and disconcerting novel. (The sentence is borrowed from the jacket of another novel to be published next month; we can think of no better.) William Faulkner always has been a disorganized talent; disorganized in a superlative degree; a superlative talent as well. "Wild Palms" is his latest novel and the best illustration of the point suggested above to have arrived so far. In "Wild Palms" Mr. Faulkner has an idea, which he simply does not bother to write well, although only careful revision would have been necessary to set things right. The idea is of almost idiotic simplicity, and is a great one, as so many ideas of the sort are: it is only a problem in what the publishers call "orchestration." Being slightly more musical, we should call it rather instrumental. It is a study of passion, one thread of which finds being in a pair of the dullest persons so far put on paper, a pair who (even today!) try to find safety in running away. It is obvious that although these themes are disimilar on the surface, a master could combine them into a symphonic fragment of importance. Faulkner has gathered all the materials. He even has written the first draft of a great prose symphony. Then he decided to play golf or tiddledy winks, leaving the publisher to take the rap. As the book is published, it is filled with typical Faulkner sentences, assembled by the crazy-quilt method. The old and lazy device of printing the thoughts of the characters in Italics is used. Instead of pruning out dull matter, Faulkner has waited until something definite had to be done to whip up interest, and then dropped in wholly unnecessary and irrelevant four-letter words. This type of production rouses bitter feeling in those who are not susceptible to the vagues of our writers. There are those who whoop with joy at the least production of a great talent, and these will gurgie at "Wild Palms." But even these will not be able to explain why one is supposed to feel the terrible physical power of the heroine when Faulkner makes her merely a wench out of a garbage pail.

As a sample of the "big man's" operations, Judge Reeves cited figures obtained by a federal investigator which showed he took $30,500 from one place alone in a little less than a year. American Medical Association To Open Fight On Monopoly Charges

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24 (AP)—The American Medical Association will begin a fight in federal court tomorrow to quash an indictment accusing it, along with some of its members and affiliates, of monopolistic practices.

While congressmen study the vast national health program submitted yesterday by President Roosevelt, the A.M.A. will try to show that it did not conspire to restrain trade in opposing Group Health, Inc., an association of federal employees providing medical service for a monthly fee.

The court hearing will be on a motion to question grand jurors about the evidence which government attorneys presented in a secret nine-week inquiry.

The question of prepaid medical service based indirectly by the A. M. A. indictment is expected to become the major controversy in congressional discussion of the proposed national health program.

It is the only phase of the program, drafted by a presidential committee, with which the A.M.A. took issue. The other committee recommendations involved extension of public health research and facilities, along with additional hospitals, and improved care of the indigent.

Contempt Case Is Development In Pool Litigation

Contempt proceedings filed by County Attorney Joe A. Faucett Tuesday apparently had forestalled an attempt to reopen pool tables here.

The county attorney filed proceedings in the 70th district court against I. R. Russell, charging that he had violated an injunction made permanent against operation of a pool hall by District Judge Cecil Collings on Jan. 14.

However, the case was passed pending the outcome of an agreement that the projected reopening would be abandoned, said the county attorney. His petition had alleged that a partition had been erected around pool paraphernalia at a local club and that pool was being played under a so-called club arrangement.

One other of 11 injunctions against the hall operators was made permanent Saturday against F. M. Bomar, who had his case continued previously due to illness. The hearing on the V. A. Gomez case was continued until Saturday.

Landmark Comes Down, Yielding To Service Station

One of the few outstanding landmarks of the downtown area—the McDonald building at East Third and Johnson streets—came tumbling down Tuesday as workmen began clearing the property.

Mrs. W. D. McDonald said that plans were under consideration for developing the corner into a modern and complete motor service and clinic station. Cecil C. McDonald, her son and a former resident of Big Spring, is expected to return here from California at a later date to join in formulating final plans for the new structure.

The two-story brick and frame house has been a familiar figure in the downtown area for more than three decades. It was built by C. C. Hinds, a lumber dealer, about 1907. S. A. Penix, a former Howard county judge, secured the home from Hinds, and later sold it to Pete Johnson, a pioneer railroad man. The late W. D. McDonald secured the property from Johnson with the idea of some day building a combined service station and garage on the corner.

Dr. J. E. Hogan left Monday for San Antonio, where he is in attendance at the International Post Graduate assembly in that city. He will return here next Friday.

Three Held Here On Auto Theft Charges

Three men were held here Tuesday pending their return to other points to face charges of car theft.

Two—James Washburn and James Loren McGoin—were wanted in Oklahoma and the third, Albert Gulley, was charged in Midland.

Charles Atkins, city traffic officer, spotted the car in which the Oklahoma suspects had been riding. He had been tinkering with a short wave radio in his spare time the night before and heard a police notice on a car number which he jotted down. Monday evening he saw that a car with that number was sliding in and out of traffic on East Third street, and he overtook the car. Four others in the machine were released after questioning. Officers said that both Oklahoma and F. B. I. authorities wanted the two youths.

Deputy Sheriff Bob Wolf and Constable Carl Mercer took Gulley into custody near here at 10 p. m. Monday on advice from Midland officers who reported charges had been filed in connection with theft of a car from Mrs. Con Sivalla of that city. Gulley said his home was in San Angelo.
