Opportunity For Area Development Presented

The abundance of feed ripening on West Texas farms and the plenteous of sleek cattle on ranges of the Edwards Plateau reminds again of one of this area's greatest opportunities.

Texas was fed, without waste, to West Texas cattle and sheep, the amount of wealth coming to this area from the cattle marketing centers would be infinitely greater.

thinking out loud. 'I've built every production around her. Everyone in the cast a contrast to her. Every set a background for her.'

On the great question before us in America we are not having a debate; we are having a collision of vehemently uttered opinions.

Does Our Free Speech Deserve To Continue?

By WALTER LIPPMANN

If free speech is not to degenerate into mere shouting and name-calling, we shall have to define this issue and debate it.

That is why, as a matter of fact, a certain underlying disgust with liberty had developed in those countries—for example, in pre-Vichy France and in pre-fascist Italy—where the press was corrupt, the parliament irresponsible and demagogic, public utterance malicious, tricky and cunning.

On the great question before us in America we are not having a debate; we are having a collision of vehemently uttered opinions.

The other view is that America is coming nearer to war, not because of what is being done in Europe, in Asia, in Africa and in South America by Germany and Japan, but because of what Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Stimson, Mr. Knox and Mr. Willkie are doing in the United States.

That is the question on which the people, as the final judges, must deliver a verdict. They must decide whether the peril of war originates in Berlin and Tokio or in Washington. For the whole collision of opinions between isolationists and interventionists, between Senator Wheeler and President Roosevelt, between Mr. Landon and his former running mate, Mr. Knox, between Mr. Hoover and Mr. Stimson, between Colonel Landon and Mr. Willkie, is a controversy between those who say that the real warmongers are in Washington and those who say that the real warmongers are in Berlin and in Tokio.

This is the issue, and the verdict is of supreme practical importance. If, as the isolationists argue, the real warmongers are in Washington and not in Berlin and Tokio, then it is not only right but necessary to obstruct and weaken the administration in all possible ways.

But if the verdict of the people is that the real warmongers are in Berlin and Tokio, then what we need for our security is not a weak American government, but the strongest possible American government.

For if the peril of war originates not here at home but in capitals of the great aggressor states, then we must lead from strength and not from weakness.

Remember 1936? Edward Was Quitting His Throne Then

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — I was leafing through some old files in the attic and I picked up a newspaper that was dated New York, Saturday, December 12, 1936.

In the lower left hand corner were pictures of Welch miners carrying huge placards: "Cheer the King"...

The late Arthur Brisbane was alive then, very much alive, and he succinctly summed up the situation with said: "London Urching Sing, Mrs. Simpson Stole Our Kings"...

In Broadway movie houses Charles Laughton was going through the mannerisms of "Rembrandt" and Freddie Bartholomew was starring in "Loyds of London"...

For if the peril of war originates not here at home but in capitals of the great aggressor states, then we must lead from strength and not from weakness.

Colman Handles Interesting Role In Interesting Way

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—"My Life with Caroline." Screenplay by John Van Druten and Arnold Belgard from play by Louis Verneuil and Georges Berr.

This could be substituted, "Milestone Takes a Holiday." The director, best known for such serious, earthy, or lusty pieces as "The Front Page," "All Quiet on the Western Front," and "Of Mice and Men," here tries his hand at light and frothy comedy.

Caroline is a pretty, giddy, and romantically susceptible young wife married to a suave, but very busy, publisher who understands her foibles, including her propensity for falling in love with romantic young men.

As the story opens, Caroline (Lee) is madly in love with a handsome Latin (Roland) and is all set to fly back home to break the news to her husband. At the airport, having received her wire that she has something important to tell him, the patient spouse appears. This, of course, is Colman, suave, distinguished, and thoroughly master of the situation.

Watching Caroline's fond goodbye to her new lover, Anthony turns to the audience and gets chummy. He knows what's going on, he says, and he'll tell us all about it in a minute. He does, and so we dissolve into the story of "His life with Caroline."

Before the handsome Latin, it was the understanding sculptor, Paul (Gardiner). And there was the same spirit of deathless romance between Caroline and Paul. It was all very cricket, of course, and Caroline was going to tell Anthony of her pending divorce, and elopement. But Anthony found out first, and by devious clever means—especially clever in a husband who "didn't understand" his wife—thwarted all developments.

The picture is consistently light, consistently frothy, consistently suave and gay—almost too much so. There are times when a little more action and less talk, preferably on the slapstick side, would be welcome.

Winning, as the father-in-law who trails patiently in the romantic wake, worried lest his future bread be unbuttered by Caroline's new prospect, is capital, and Gardiner and Roland do well by their suitors' roles. O'Connell's butler is the kind that ought to be in every home—for laughs.

No one spoke. It was as though all of us were searching our minds for the right thing to say and there was no right thing. At last Philip coughed again and stood up.

"It's a beastly business. I wish there were something I could do. I know there isn't. Just... if ever you have anything for me again, Clint, I'd consider it a privilege to play for you."

The doors closed. It was impossible for Ashley not to have seen us, but his eyes gave no flicker of recognition. His face was dead pan.

"Well," I said, "so this is Wall Street. Taxi!"

Street."

"Yeah."

"But why should he do that?"

"Maybe he wanted to find out about Lee Gray before we did. We'll see."

Parker's secretary announced me over the telephone without first asking my name. That made me feel fine and smug. That girl and her colleagues had almost nipped my theatrical career in the bud until one day I had managed to slip past her, and Vincent Parker had given me my first part in New York.

Mr. Parker would see me in a few minutes. In answer to Jeff's question, the secretary told him that Philip Ashley had not been in to see Parker within the last few minutes or, as far as she knew, ever. Jeff sat down beside me.

"Halls," he said, "let me do the talking about L. G."

Vincent Parker opened his door and beckoned to me. He looked like five and a half feet of rainbow with his dark-blue shirt, yellow knitted tie, brown tweed suit and very conservative, battleship gray spats. His face split in a grin that shook his ears. When Jeff followed me into the office he flattered me by looking disappointed that I wasn't alone.

"She's my girl," Jeff explained. "I never leave her alone with strange men."

"If you think I'm strange you oughta see my brother!" Parker said. When he had stopped laughing I introduced Jeff to him and we seated ourselves, Parker behind his huge, streamlined desk, Jeff and I on a luxurious divan that Vincent must have bought secondhand from some insolvent Caliph.

"Nicely appointed chamber," Jeff said. He had nearly broken my neck to get us up here and now he was being the suave, casual Philo Vance type. "Who decorated your office? Billy Rose?"

"Billy Rose? Naw. Great little fellow, though. I knew Billy when he was shorthand champion of the world. Billy thinks a lot of me and I've always admired him, too."

"I understand you're going to do a play, Mr. Parker," I said, trying to get Jeff to the point.

"When you call me Mr. Parker, Halls, I don't know to who you are referring. The first name is Vincent. It ain't as if we were mere acquaintances. I give you your start on Broadway. Tell me if I'm wrong."

"Vincent," I blurted, "who is Lee Gray? What is she, where is she?"

Parker beamed. "You want to know, too, huh?"

"Too!" Jeff barked. "Who else has been asking?"

"The cops. One of the drama-page boys on the Post tipped them off when he seen my press release. I figured it would raise plenty of comment."

"Well, who is Lee Gray?"

"Frankly, Halls, I don't know."

Camp Meeting Slated Here

Beginning Thursday, the Assembly of God church here will be host to a 10-day, bi-sectional camp meeting under a tent at W. 4th and Bell streets, the pastor, the Rev. Homer Sheats, announced Monday.

Approximately 25 churches will be represented in the meeting, which draws members from the South Plains and Pecos sections of the denomination's West Texas district.

The Rev. C. C. Robinson, Dallas, will be in charge of the evening services, and the Rev. H. M. Reeves, Plainview, district superintendent, will have charge of the 10 a. m. services. During the afternoon, visiting ministers will alternate as speakers. Music will be directed by W. M. Bozeman, Lamesa.

Fellowship Day will be observed Thursday when basket lunch will be spread at the tent. A revival campaign started recently by the local church will continue through Wednesday evening, said the Rev. Sheats.

Markets At A Glance

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP)—The stock market was more or less bid-high today and leaders generally failed to get anywhere in particular.

Dealings were moderately lively at times, with slow intervals frequent. Transfers for the full proceedings were around 650,000 shares.

Stocks favored at times included Santa Fe, Chesapeake & Ohio, General Motors, Chrysler, Willamette, Standard Oil (NJ), Union Carbide, North American Aviation and Sears Roebuck.

Wool Market

BOSTON, Aug. 4 (AP)—(USDA)—A few worried manufacturers were showing an interest in the Boston market today in graded good French combing length, fine territory wool, at prices ranging $1.03-1.04, scoured basis. Graded combing fine territory wools also were receiving a moderate call at 98-99 cents, scoured basis. Topmakers occasionally took a little original bag, fine territory wools, mostly odd lots, that were available at prices under a dollar, scoured basis. Fleeces wools were quiet, with quotations unchanged from last week.

Odessa Man Expires Here

Lloyd K. Hightower, 48, Odessa oil well supply dealer, died here Sunday of heart attack.

He succumbed at the home of his brother-in-law, Gordon Phillips, at 9:30 p. m. Sunday, shortly after he was seized by an attack thought to have been produced by lifting a rotary drill bit into a car.

The body was taken overland in an Eberley coach at noon Monday to Mineral Wells, home of his parents. Arrangements, however, were pending.

Hightower was born April 25, 1893 at Milap, Tex., had been in the oil business for many years and was well known in this area.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. L. K. Hightower, Austin; his parents, the Rev. and Mrs. I. E. Hightower, Mineral Wells; two daughters, Mrs. W. E. Stevens, Corpus Christi, and Frances Ann Hightower, Austin; four brothers, W. L., I. D., Willard and Warren Hightower, all of Fort Worth; and four sisters, Mrs. Tom Martin, McKinney, Mrs. Tom Harmon, Los Angeles, Calif., Mrs. Ward Luck, Denton, and Mrs. Fleet McDaniel, Ferris.

SIX, SEVEN MILES UP! In air no man can breathe—and live! Motors—now even pilots are "super-charged." On the stationary bicycle (above) Marshall Headle, chief test pilot of Lockheed, breathes pure oxygen for 70 minutes before a test flight in Lockheed's new interceptor—one of America's newest high-altitude fighters.

CLIMBS A MILE A MINUTE—dives at speeds which are Army secrets. They call her "Lightning." Test pilot Headle clambers into the cockpit, switches from a pocket oxygen flask to his cabin supply, and streaks for the stratosphere. He's test-flown 300 different planes. But when he lands, it's always... "Now for a Camel."

YOU CAN'T SEE HIM up there. You can scarcely hear the hum of his motors. Then his voice comes into the radio tower; "Headle—35,000 feet—diving now." And as he comes plummeting down in that shrieking power-dive, you just hope! Seconds later—yes, seconds—he's landing. And here he is (above) cool, calm, lighting up a Camel.

THERE may be little traffic at 35,000 feet, but test-diving any new, untried plane is no Sunday joy-ride. No, not even for a veteran like Marshall Headle (above).

Naturally, cigarette mildness is important to Marshall Headle. And in the slower-burning cigarette of costlier tobaccos... Camels... he gets extra mildness—with less nicotine in the smoke.

What cigarette are you smoking now? Chances are it's one of the five included in the nicotine tests reported above at the left—tests which trace Camel's advantage right down to the actual smoke itself. Obviously, the smoke's the thing! Try Camels. For convenience—economy—buy the carton.
