WHOSE WIFE?

The Man and The Woman were in in a public place. They looked into each other's eyes and were conscious of a distinct sense of recognition, although they knew perfectly well that never before had they touched in passing. The Man felt impelled to take her at once into his arms and hold her there for all time. Thus they stood apart looking into each

Then the crowd surged and they were lost to each other.

For many months thereafter The Man sought The Woman everywhere. and when at last he found her she was watching two children at play and the smile in her eyes was the sort ' smile that has its well-spring

The Woman never knew what he came of The Man. She never saw him again after the day they had looked into each other's eyes and passed on. Sometimes she thought of him, but more often she did not, for her days were filled with duties to The Husband, and the children she brought him. Year by year she lived at his side, mindful of his creature comforts; sympathetic in the hours of his perpicalties, proud of his ene made him devoted to the chi dren God had given her, and in al she was not unhappy, although never once in her companionship with The Husband did she lift the veil which hung between him and her sou that he might see into the source of her being.

The Husband had been gone to the Land Rehind the Veil for more than two years before the woman thought of marrying again. He had been good to her, and he had left her comfort ably situated in the matter of this world's goods, but she was unutterably lonely. Their children had become old enough to be consumed by their individual interests and The Woman was desolate.

The Second Husband was also good man, much on the type of the

In the interim of her widowhood she had not, however, forgotten The Man. The thought of him always brought her a peculiar sense of peace, but somehow she ceased to hope that he would in any way cross the path of her life again. So she took up the threads which the First Husband's death had broken, and wove them into her new life with the Second Husband, but as it had been before, she gave nothing of her soul in the weaving. The bond between them was pleasant enough, but it was of the earth, earthly.

It often set The Woman to thinking, especially when the twilight hours brought their lengthening shadows, and a certain sense of cravng for one who could walk straight into the secret chambers of her soul times, in retrospective moments, The Woman wondered whose wife she upon she turned to the Nazarene's assurance of the Sadducees that "In the Anastasis they are as the Angels of God in Heaven. and in her heart she was glad, for somehow neither of her matrimonial ventures had created within her any keen desire for their eternal perpetuation, although the world called her a fortunate woman in the matetr of her

One day The Woman fell ill. The doctor assured the Second Husband that she would not live, and The Woman, hearing, was thrilled with a sudden sense of happiness.

She looked on the kind, troubled face of the Second Musband and knew as she looked that she was fond of him. She had also been fond of the First Husband. They were both good men and true and no woman could have companioned them in their respective homes without acquiring a sincere affection for either, but just the same The Woman was rather glad, in a feeble sort of way, that marriage was all done with. She lay in her bed very ill and very tired, and had a clear vision of the Sadducees asking the Master whose wife the woman who had seven husbands would be in the Anastasis, and she was is

THE GIRL AND THE GAME

6-FRANK H-SPEARMAN

Little Helen Holmes, daughter of General Holmes, railroad man, is rescued from imminent danger on a scent railroad by George Storm, a newsboy. Grown to young womanhood, Helen saves Storm, now a fireman, her father, and his friends Amos Rhinelander, financier, and Robert Seagrue, promoter, from a threatened collision. Safebreakers employed by Seagrue steel General Holmes' survey plans of the cut-off line for the Tidewater, fatally wound the general and escape. Her father's estate badly involved by his death, Helen goes to work on the Tidewater. Helen recovers the survey plans from Seagrue, and though they are taken from ber, finds an accidentally made proof of the survey blueprint. Storm is employed by Rhinelander. Spike and his confederate safebreakers steal Rhinelander's pay roll money. Helen pursues and, with a policeman's aid, captures two of them and recovers the money. Spike, befriended by Helen, in his turn saves her and the right-of-way contracts when Seagrue kidnaps her.

him, when a quiet voice at his elbow spoke just two words into his ear:

"Hello, Spike!"

Spike, who lived, as it were, at all times over a powder magazine of the unexpected, started a little as he turned to look into the composed gray eyes of Seagrue. He stood a moment bound by their spell.

Seagrue's face was lighted only by a pleasant smile. "Where you going, Spike?" he asked in friendly fashion. He looked about him with indecision, and as his eyes wandered he saw Seagrue beckoning to the sheriff to come over from the machine.

Scagrue, meantime, put his hand in his pocket. From it he drew a wern

turned over his first leaf in the book of gratitude proved a difficulty for Helen. But it seemed to her the first thing to be attempted was to get him well away from Seagrue's influence. Seagrue, with the ample backing at his disposal, had established an elaborate construction camp well out on the desert, where he coupled with his railroad building enterprise as much of fraudulent deceit and force as he dare display toward Rhinelander and the men in the Copper Range & Tidewater construction work. The prize for which both roads were playing in the tremendous effort of each to get ahead of the other was a substantial one, and Seagrue was never called to account at his headquarters for his strategy in the construction

On the morning that Helen took Spike down street to a Las Vegas clothing store, had him fitted out with new clothes and provided him with some pocket money, Seagrue was on his way over to his camp, accompanied by the two strong-arms, known by no more respectable names than Bill and Lug. He saw Helen on the street with Spike and watched the two for a moment. Dispatching Bill then to the garage for his motor car and bidding Lug, on his life, not to lose sight of Spike, Seagrue, himself. hastened to the office of the local

Explaining to this official, already made complacent by generous offerings, that he had on his hands a contract laborer who was trying to jump his job, he engaged his promise of vigorous co-operation to bring Spike to time

Seagrue led the way with him to the machine, which Bill had brought up, and, getting in with the sheriff. Bill drove toward the station. Helen had returned with Spike to the office, she had paid for a railroad ticket which was to carry him to the city, where, she believed, freed from Seagrue's contaminating influence, Spike would have a chance to get back on

Spike, in a comfortable frame of mind, was looking down at the ticket in his hand and reflecting what an extraordinary friend Helen had been, his pocket. From it he drew a wern little pamphlet, and affecting careful deliberation, held it in his hand before Spike's wavering eyes. In the blackfaced type on the cover a name and description were printed, but what What to do with Spike after he had Spike saw staring at him were the figures and the words:

"$500.00 REWARD!"

But to Spike that one line of type meant infinitely more than it could mean to any other man.

Seagrue watched closely the changing expressions on the hunted criminal's face; he was even quiet and pleasant in his demeanor as he muttered: "You shouldn't try to leave me, Spike. At least, not until I say you may go."

"Seagrue," Spike almost hissed, "I can send you to the chair; man-tlo you know that?"

Seagrue lost none of his composure. He returned Spike's angry look undi'sturbed: "Do you know what will happen when you do?" he asked in ever tones. "After they lift me out of it, they'll lift you in for the next shock, Spike. When you're ready to commit suicide, I'm ready to go to the straps ahead of you or after you-that's asthe sheriff may prefer. But until that moment comes, Spike"-a threatening intonation made itself felt within the studied utterance-"until that moment, Spike, you will take your orders from me-understand?'

Spike looked gloomily down at the ticket he held in his hand. He realized he was utterly helpless. "All right," he said gruffly.

Seagrue shook hands with the sheriff as he followed Spike across the platform. "I don't think I'll have any more trouble with him," he said in an undertone. "Thank you just the same. sheriff."

With the rival construction crews, matters were reaching a somewhat critical stage in their race. Both the Colorado & Coast and the Copper Range & Tidewater companies had reached the limits of the city of Las Vegas, where, owing to the topography of the country as well as to the difficulties of getting through the town, possible rights of way were exceedingly scarce. A section almost immediately in front now of both construction gangs was occupied by a weather-beaten pioneer who bore the name of Cassidy, and his comfortable cottage obstructed both surveys.

The advent of two railroads building neck and neck across the desert and how considerately she had treated | through the little town had naturally pitch of excitement. Small wonder that Cassidy's head had become in some degree confused as to values, and by the time Rhinelander got around to see the bronzed pioneer with a check for two thousand dollars -the price first put upon the property by its veteran owner-valuations had risen and Cassidy declared that he would sell for ten thousand dollars and not a cent less.

Rhinelander, considerably taken aback, impatiently assented to the exorbitant sum named, and going inside the cottage, wrote out his check for it. In exchange he received Cassidy's rather uncertain signature, on the customary legal form, granting to the Copper Range & Tide Water Railway company privileges over the Cassidy land as a freehold owner.

Seagrue, arriving from town, learned from his foreman of the status of the insignificant plot of ground, adverse possession of which might frustrate their persistent plans for obstructing Rhinelander. With his surveyors Sea grue hurried to the end of the work, and reached the ground just in time to encounter Rhinelander coming out of Cassidy's house and the agreement

The move was not lost on Seagrue When he saw Rhinelander board the car containing the telegraph outfit, he summoned his own operator and dis patched him to a spot between Rhine lander's car and the main line with ever messages passed. Rhinelander operator tick off his message to Helen and her reply came promptly:

Attorney will meet you on arrival. Special will be ready to leave any time after eleven. But Seagrue's operator industriously copied both message and answer and turned them in to his employer. Storm, in the meantime, was making the most of his opportunity, and with his men on Cassidy's place was preparing to push possession as far as

'Run the steel cables around the house, George, and we will swing it in

After giving this order, Rhinelander ad hastened to the station to meet however, had been Seagrue's dispositions that his redoubtable scouts, Bill and Lug, were already at the station with instructions from Continued on Page Four
