In the course of writing thi s column weekly. I have become a close friend to Game Management Officer Bobby Goff of Lubbock who works Lynn and Terry Counties for the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

It's become a common practice for us to discuss the hunting and fishing happenings over the county while having a cup of coffee. Last week Bobby asked that 1 mention the fact that several sportsmen have been taking undue advantage of area landowners by driving across fields and pastures instead of using turnrows and roads designed for that purpose. He says he has received several complaints lately from landowners stating that if such practices weren't stopped, the land would be closed to all hunters.

Foolproof Fudge

This unique fudge recipe takes the guesswork out of a normally tricky candymaking effort. You don't need a candy thermometer, either. Just have a kitchen timer handy— it is important to boil the chocolate mixture a full three minutes so the will cut easily. The semi-sweet chocolate that goes into this fudge is the perfect type for candymaking—it is naturally shiny and contains extra cocoa butter for richness.

Books Color-Coded to Courses Are Great Organizers for Good Grades study time invested. Try to avoid late-night study session

The days when high school and college students could use hit or miss techniques in setting up their study habits have all but disappeared. On the contrary, today's intensified class programs whether on the semester or quarterly basis - demand maximum concentration from the student who hopes to end the term with better-than-average grades.

To free your mind for work on course material, it's smart to think through your study techniques well in advance of the opening of the term. Here are a few things to consider:

Stock your desk with all necessary study supplies. Once a term has started, time is at a premium and there is little left to shop for study supplies. Therefore, gather all the materials you will need during the weeks to come, and keep them within arm's reach at your study center.

Decide where you study most effectively. For many students, a library atmosphere is best in this respect. At-home study hours should be spent at a place set aside specifically for home work, i.e., a corner of the bedoom or a particular spot in the den, attic, or basement. Be sure the spot you choose has good lighting and is quiet. Schedule your study time when you are most wide awake. People vary as to the time they are most "with it". Decide whether you are a morning person or an evening person and try to keep your time free for study during that period so you can reap the greatest return on

Dear editar: Last week during the Democratic National Convention a friend asked me to come over to his house and watch the show in colormy set is black and white when it's functioning and mostly snow the rest of the time, which is confusing because half the time the fun is in watching the delegates read newspapers or walk around since most of the speeches are the same anyway-and the first thing I noticed when I settled down in front of the set was that the speaker on the platform was wearing a blue shirt. "Blue shirt?" I asked. "How come?" figured it was only natural to wear a white shirt at funerals, weddings and political conventions. "Oh, this is color television," it was ex-plained, "White shirts don't show up too good in color."

I got to looking closer and sure enough, practically all the men had on blue shirts. What I'm wondering now is, as more and more people get color T.V., will they paint the White House blue, and what'll they do in the winter time about photographing a snow

Another thing that impressed me about the Chicago convention, the same as the one in Miami Beach, was the fact they ran out of

They had enough to go around the convention hall on the outside, but if they'd had more they could have run it down each side of the aisles, say about seven strands high, to fence the delegates in.

It's the only way I see they'll ever keep the aisles clear. I don't know where the convention people, both Democratic and Republican, get their sergeants-at-arms, but I've never seen one yet that could clear the aisles, makes no difference how many times

If I'd known they had a shortage of

Ran Short

(Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm reports on last week's convention.) Dear editar: Last week during the Democratic National Convention a friend asked me to come over to his house and watch the show in colormy set is black and white when it's functioning and mostly snow the rest of the time, which is confusing because half the time the fun is in watching the delegates read newspapers or walk around since most of the speeches are the same anyway-and the first thing I noticed when I settled down in front of the set was that the speaker on the platform was wearing a blue shirt. "Blue shirt?" I asked. "How come?" I figured it was only natural to wear a white shirt at funerals, weddings and political conventions. this is color television," it was explained. "White shirts don't show up too good in color." I got to looking closer and sure enough, practically all the men had on blue shirts. What I'm wondering now is, as more and more people get color T.V., will they paint

the White House blue, and what'll they do in the winter time about photographing a snow

Another thing that impressed me about the Chicago convention, the same as the one in Miami Beach, was the fact they ran out of barbwire.

They had enough to go around the convention hall on the outside, but if they'd had more they could have run it down each side of the aisles, say about seven strands high, to fence the delegates in.

If I'd known they had a shortage of wire I could have sent them some of mine. It's rusty and spliced in several places, but they'd been welcome to it, although I wouldn't have taken the job of stringing it. I'm not sure anybody could build a fence strong enough to turn a delegate.

Yours faithfully,

The President's Commission on Law Enforcement and Administration of Justice and the Eaton Yale & Towne research division have defined the following areas of city and personal responsibility:

1. Police call boxes should be left open, and clearly marked. 2. Cities should have a single police emergency phone num

3. Strict gun control laws should be passed in high-crime

4. Better salaries and benefits would attract highly qualified lawmen 5. Keep valuables in a safe deposit box.

6. Use pick-resistant locks. such as Yale pin-tumbler cylinder locks, on all outside en trances. Yale window locks give added security, and can be locked even with the window slightly opened at night.

Kitchen Traffic

The kitchen is one of the busiest places in the farm home -and one place, an official of the Texas Safety Association notes, where extra caution is essential to prevent home accidents that cause more fatalities and disabling injuries than accidents occurring elsewhere on the farm.

"The farm woman's domain is more than a food preparation center. It's the hub of activity on the farm-a place where her husband may transact business over a cup of coffee at the kitchen table and where family friends and neighbors gather naturally like ants at a picnic, Mrs. B. F. Seay, Andrews, Vice President for Women's Activities for the Safety Association. said and added:

"It's not only frustrating at times to have so many folks 'under foot,' but also an additional hazard to the farm woman who is busily preparing meals for her family and farm hands, canning or packaging food for her freezer, scalding milk pails, churning or performing some other kitchen task peculiar to farm life.

The potential for kitchen ac cidents can be reduced by staying alert for hazards and devel oping safe work habits, Mrs. Seay says. She offers the following suggestions to help pre vent accidents in the kitchen: To prevent falls:

· Wipe up any foods, liquids or grease spilled on floors immediately.

· Avoid using loose "throw' rugs-that's what they are. They'll throw you. Be sure door or floor mats are an chored securely.

· When waxing floors, apply wax and polish "evenly" to avoid building-up slick spots.

· Keep a small stepladder in the kitchen. Then, when you have to reach seldom-used items on the top shelf of a cupboard, you won't have to rely on climbing up on chairs.

· When washing large glass containers, wash separately placing bottom on firm footing, such as a rubber mat, Be careful handling suc items when soapy-they're slippery.

· Discard chipped or cracked china and glass immediately · When slicing meats or cleaning vegetables, slice away from your body-not toward

· Remove can lids completely and use a can opener that makes a clean-not jagged-

To avoid electrical shocks

· Don't overload circuits by using too many appliance

· Never put a fork or knife into a plugged-in toaster to remove bread. Unplug it.

· Check all electrical kitcher appliances frequently for frayed or cracked insulation on cords. Replace worn cords and damaged plugs.

 Be sure appliances and cords bear the seal of a nationallyrecognized testing laboratory, such as Underwriters' Laboratories, Inc. (UL).

· Keep the plug out of the outlet when appliance is not in

· Don't touch electric cords, wires or fixtures if your hands, feet or shoes are damp.

· Do not let appliance cords dangle or trail through water. Keep appliance mo tors dry.

· Never run cords under rugs. over stoves or through doors. To prevent burns and scalds:

· Keep matches in a fireproof container, away from the heat and from the reach of curious little fingers.

· Strike matches away from your body-if the head should fly off, it won't ignite your clothing.

· Turn handles of pots and pans so they point to the rear of the stove, out of the way when you brush past them and out of the reach of children.

. To observe food cooking, lift the side of a pan lid that is furtherest away from you to avoid steam burns.

· Make sure all gas conne tions are made with metal piping, not rubber hose Check on any suspected gas leak immediately-but don't test for it yourself with lighted match.

To avoid cuts: · Sweep up all broken glass right away, and pick up glass slivers with a dampened paper towel, not your bare hands. · Avoid hanging curtains, po holders or dish towels over or near flames and electric
