Pay Up Last Month's Account This Month

It Will Keep Your Credit Good and Make Your Account Desirable

The Retail Merchants Association of Texas is conducting an advertising campaign to educate slow-paying customers in the justice and importance of paying their bills promptly when due.

Credit is a convenience based on confidence-not in your ultimate desire and ability to pay your bills, but in willingness and ability to pay them promptly when due.

Many persons have been negligent and indifferent in the past to the prompt payment of their bills, mainly, because they did not realize the importance of this rule. These people will readily respond to the mere announcement of the conditions that render the enforcement of this measure imperative at the present time.

There are others, however, who believe that because they eventually pay their bills their accounts are desirable. They think a fancied superiority to ordinary mortals, because of prominence in social, business, or political circles, releases them from the obligation of paying their debts promptly.

They assume the prerogative of saying how and when they shall pay their bilis. Or possible because of poor management of their personal affairs, they buy more than they can pay for. In other instances they put off paying from month to month, meanwhile buying more and more, until the amount of the account becomes almost unpayable.

Then they become indignant at the courteous requests for settlement. It is decidedly unpleasant for all concerned.

A banker will lend money to a poor man who pays promptly; he will not lend to his rich neighbor who allows his obligations to run into the overdue stage.

From now on all customers are asked to pay their accounts when due, between the first and tenth of month following purchase. If they will do this their accounts will be welcome in all stores. If they do not do this, they will soon find that their accounts are undesirable.

HOW WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

May Escape the Dreaded Sufferings of that Period by Taking Mrs. Block's Advice

Hopkins, Minn. - During Change of Life I had hot flashes and suffered for

It has been said that not one woman in a thousand passes this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms. Those dreadful hot flashes, sinking spells, spots before the eyes, dizzy spells, nervousness, are only a few of the symptoms. Every woman at this age should profit by Mrs. Block's experience and try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you have the slightest doubt that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will help you, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., about your health. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

Mental butterflying at 2 a.m. A great indoor sport for thoughtless people

One of the surest ways to become physically incapable of doing your best work is to get only snatches of sleep-broken by disturbing dreams.

If your sleep is being disturbed by drinking tea or coffee, you may be sowing the seeds of a nervous breakdown.

Do not wait until your nerves are affected by the drugs, thein and caffeine, in tea or coffee. Protect your strength, vitality and endurance.

Have sound, restful sleep, and wake refreshed and fit for any task.

Postum, the delicious cereal beverage, with its golden-brown richness and coffee-like taste, will let Nature restore your coffee-irritated nerves, and bring you sound, refreshing sleep.

Postum is wholesome and acts in a normal way. It possesses the advantages of a hot drink, without the ill effects of tea or coffee.

Drink Postum for a week or two. See what a difference it will make in you!

"There's a Reason."

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes. At all grocers.

Don't you! the quiet to get the better of the Red jangling and see-sawing back and forth of course, but the newspapers, fore the fire got to him. Kirgan had found an ax in the emergency box of our day-coach, and was chopping away like a madman.

The minute he got a hose big enough, the big master-mechanic dropped his ax and climbed down into the choking hell where the screams were coming from. Our fireman picked up the ax and ran around to the other side of the wreck where Jones, the engineer of the special, and his fireman were trying to break into the crushed cab of the 416.

The old major, the boss, and I stood by to help Kirgan, and the minute his head came up through the chopped hole we saw that he needed help. He had pried the screaming man loose, somehow, and was trying to drag him up out of the smoking furnace. It was done, amongst us, some way or other. Kirgan had wrapped the man up in a Pullman blanket to keep the fire from getting at him any worse than it already had, and as we were taking him out the blanket slipped aside from his face and I saw who it was that the master-mechanic had risked his life for. It was Hatch, himself, and he died in our arms, the major's and mine, while we were carrying him out to where Mrs. Sheila was tearing one of the Pullman sheets that I had got hold of into strips to make bandages for the wounded.

With the chance of saving maybe another one or two, we couldn't stay to help the brave little woman who was trying to be doctor and nurse to half a dozen poor wretches at once. But she took time to ask me one single breathless question:

"Have they found him yet?-you know the one I mean, Jimmie?" "No," I said. "They're digging away at that side now," and then I ran back to jump in again.

Though the fire was now licking at everything in sight, Kirgan, who had taken the ax from our fireman, had managed to cut some of the car timbers out of the way so that we could see down into the tangle of things where the cab of the 416 ought to have been. There wasn't much left of the cab. The water-gauge was broken, along with everything else, but in by a little way behind Kir- spite of the reek of smoke and steam dized that his plan was | we could see that Hogan and his firethe stopping of the spe- man were not there. But down under at the very catastrophe we the coal that had shifted forward at out to try to prevent was the impact of the collision we could make out the other man-the murderour man waiting at the maniac-lying on his back, black in the face and gasping.

> That was enough for the boss. It looked like certain death for anybody to crawl down into that hissing steambath, but he did it, wriggling through the hole that Kirgan had chopped, while two or three of us ran to the little creek that trickled down on the far side of the "Y" and brought back soaking Pullman blankets to try to delay the encroaching fire and smother the steam-jets.

> I couldn't see very well what the boss was doing; the smoke and steam were so blinding. But when I did get a glimpse I saw that he was digging frantically with his bare hands at the shifted coal, and that he had succeeded in freeing the head and shoulders of the buried man, who was still alive enough to choke and gasp in the furnace-like heat.

> Kirgan stood it as long as he coulduntil the licking flames were about to drive us all away.

"You'll be burnt alive-come up out of that!" he yelled to the boss; but I knew it wouldn't do any good. With Collingwood still buried down there and still with the breath of life in him, the boss was going to stay and keep on trying to dig him out, even if he, himself, got burned to a crisp doing it. Loving Mrs. Sheila the way he did, he couldn't do any less.

It was awful, those next two or three minutes. We were all running frantically back and forth, now, between the wreck and the creek, soaking the blankets and doing our level best to beat the fire back and keep it from cutting off the only way there was for the boss to climb out. But we could only fight gaspingly on the surface of things, as you might say. Down underneath, the fire was working around in front and behind in spite of all we could do. Some of it had got to the coal, and the heavy sulphurous smoke was oozing up to make us all choke and strangle.

Honestly, you couldn't have told that the boss was a white man when he crawled up out of that pit of death, tugging and lifting the crushed and broken body of the madman, and making us take it out before he would come out himself. We got them both away from the fire as quickly as we could and around to the other side of things, Kirgan and Jones carrying Collingwood. The poor little lady we had left alone with the rescued ones had done all she could, and she was waiting for us. When we put Collingwood down, she sat down on the ground and took his head in her lap and cried over him just like his mother might have, and when the boss knelt down beside her I heard what he said: "That's right, little woman; that's just as it should be. Death wipes out all scores. I did my bestyou must always believe that I did my best." She choked again at that, and said: "There is no hope?" and he said: "I'm afraid not. He was dying when I got to him." I tried to swallow the big lump in my throat and turned away, and se went around and knett down on the other side of Mrs. Shella. I would have given my look me in the eye and tell me that New York.

like some savage monster gloating over its prey. In the red glow we saw a man limping up the track from the west, and Kirgan and I went so meet him. It was Hogan, the missing engineer of the 416.

He told us what there was to tell, which wasn't very different from the way we'd been putting it up. They-Hogan and his fireman-hadn't suspected that they were carrying a maniac until after they had passed Bauxite and Collingwood had told them both that what he wanted to do was to overtake the special and smash it. Then there had been a fight on the engine, but Collingwood had a gun and he had threatened to kill them both if they didn't keep on.

"I kep' her goin'," said the Irishman, "thinkin' maybe Jonesy'd keep out of my way, or that at the lasht I'd get a chanst to shut the 'Sixteen off an' give her the brake. He kep' me fr'm doin' it, and whin I saw the tail-lights, I pushed Johnnie Shovel off an' wint afther him because there was nawthin' else to do. Johnnie's back youndher a piece, wid a broken leg."

Just then Jones, the special's engineer, came up, and he pieced out Hogan's story. The wire to Bauxite had warned him that a crazy man was chasing him and overrunning stopsignals. He had thought to side-track the chaser at the old "Y" and that was what he had stopped for.

Thereupon the three of us went after the crippled fireman, and when we got back to the "Y" with him it was all over. Collingwood had died with his head in Mrs. Shella's lap, and the boss, fagged out and half dead as he must have been, was up and at work, getting the wreck victims into our day coach, which had been backed up and taken around to the other leg of the "Y" to head for Portal City.

When it came time for us to move Collingwood, Mrs. Sheila pulled her veil down and walked behind the body, with the good old major locking his arm in hers, and that choking lump came again in my throat when I remembered what Collingwood had said to the boss the night he came to our office: "Sheila made her wedding journey with me once, when she was just eighteen. The next time she rides with me it will be at my funeral."

I guess there's no use stretching the agony out by telling about that mournful ride back to Porta! City with the dead and wounded. We left the wreck blazing and roaring in the shut-in valley at the gulch's mouth because there wasn't anything else to do; Kirgan and Jones and one of the firemen handled the engine and pulled out, while the rest of us rode in the daycoach and did what we could for the suffering. At Banta we made a stop long enough to let the boss send a wire to Portal City, turning out the doctors and the ambulances-and the undertakers; and though it was after three o'clock in the morning when we pulled in, it seemed as if the whole town had got the word and was down at the station to meet us.

I couldn't see Mrs. Sheila's face when the major helped her off at the platform; her veil was still down. But I did hear her low-spoken words to the boss, whispered while they were carrying Collingwood and Hatch, and two of the others, who were past help, out to the waiting string of dead-wagons.

"I shall go east with the body tomorrow-today, I mean-if the strikers will let you run a train, and hat. Cousin Basil will go with me. We may never meet again, Graham, and for "We've got to get busy. And there that reason I must say what I have to | isn't going to be any receivership." say now. Your opportunity has come. The man who could de the most to defeat you is dead, and the strike will do the rest. If I were you, I should neither eat nor sleep until I had thought of some way to take the railroad out of the hands of those who have proved that they are not worthy to own it."

I didn't know, just then, how much or little attention Mr. Norcross was paying to this mighty good, clearheaded bit of business advice. What he said went back to that saying of hers that they might never meet again. "We must meet again-sometime and somewhere," he said. And then:

"I shall always believe that you are one of God's own gentlemen, Graham," she said, soft and low; and then the major came to take her away.

CHAPTER XX

P. S. L. Comes Home

By nine o'clock the next morning, as soon as I'd swallowed a hurried bite of breakfast in the grill-room I swiped a camp-stool and a magazine out of the lounge and trotted upstairs to plant myself before the boss' door, determined that nobody should disturb him until he was good and ready to get up.

He turned out a little before twelve, looking sort of haggard and drawn, of course, and having some pretty bad burns on the side of his neck and on the backs of both hands. But he was all there, as usual, and he laid a good, brotherly hand on my shoulder when he saw what I was doing.

"They don't make many of them like you, Jimmie," he said. And then:

"Have you any news?" I had, a little, and I gave it to him. Fred May had come tip-toeing up into my sentry corridor about ten o'clock to tell me that Mr. Perkins had arranged with the strikers to have a special go east with the major and Mrs. Sheila and Collingwood's body to catch the Overland at Sedgwick; and I told the boss this, and that the train had been gone for an hour or more.

Also, I gave him a sealed package that a strange boy had brought up just a little while after May went away. We took the elevator to the grill-room for something to eat, and at table Mr. Norcross opened the package. It contained a bunch of affidavits, eleven of them in all, and there was no letter or anything to tell where they had come from.

He handed the papers over to me, after he had seen what they weresort of frowned across the table at me and said: "Do you know what it means-this surrender of those bribe affidavits, Jimmie?"

I said I guessed I did; that Hatch being dead, and Collingwood, too, there wasn't nerve enough left in the Red Tower outfit to keep up the fight: that the surrender of the affidavits was a kind of a plea for a let-up on our

the short comment. "Reach over and get that telephone and tell Mr. Ripley and Mr. Billoughby that I want them to meet me at my office at half-past twelve. Any news from the strike?"

"Nothing," I told him, while "Central" was getting me Mr. Ripley's number. "Fred May said it was going on just the same; everything quiet and nothing doing, except that the wrecking train had gone out to pick up the scraps at Timber Mountain 'Y.' Kirgan is bossing it, and the strikers manned it for him."

Nothing more was said until after I had sent the two phone messages, and then the boss broke out in a new spot. "Has anything been heard from Mr.

Van Britt?" he asked. "Not that I know of."

Again he gave me that queer little scowl across the table.

"Jimmie, have you found out yet why Mr." Van Britt insisted on quitting the service?"

I guess I grinned a little, though I tried not to.

"Mr. Van Britt is one of the best friends you've got," I said. "He thought you needed this strike, and he wanted to go out among the pay-roll men and sort of help it along. He couldn't do a thing like that while he was an officer of the company and drawing his pay like the rest of us."

"I might have known-he as good as told me," was the reply, made kind of half-absently; and then, short and quick: "How's the stock market? Have you seen a paper?"

I had seen both papers, at breakfast-time, but of course they had nothing startling in them except a lastminute account of the wreck at Timber mountain "Y," grabbed off just before they went to press. They couldn't have anything later from New York than the day before. But Fred May had tipped me off when he came up to tell me about the Major Kendrick special. The newspaper offices were putting out bulletins by that time.

I told Mr. Norcross about the bulletins and was brash enough to add: "We're headed for the receivership all right, I guess; our stock has tumbled to twenty-nine, and there's a regular dog-fight going on over it at the railroad post in the Exchange. Wall Street's afire and burning up, so they

The chief hadn't eaten enough to keep a cat alive, but at that he pushed his chair back and reached for his

"Come on Jimmie," he snapped.

We reached the railroad headquarters-which were as dead and quiet as a graveyard-a little before Mr. Ripley and Billoughby got down. But Mr. Editor Cantrell was there, waiting to shoot an anxious question at the boss

"Well, Norcross, are you ready to talk now?"

"Not just yet; tomorrow, maybe," was the good-natured rejoinder. "All right; then perhaps you will tell me this: Do you, yourself, believe that four or rive thousand railroad men have gone on strike out of sheer sympathy for a few hundred C. S. & W. employees, most of whom are Tower crowd in some way?" demanded the editor.

"I can, indeed," was the smiling an-

Cantrell looked as if he didn't more than half believe it.

"Being a newspaper man, I'm naturally suspicious," he put in. "There are big doings down underneath all this that I can smell, but can't dig up. Everything about this strike is too blamed good-natured. I've talked with half a dozen of the leaders, and with any number of the rank and file. They all grin and give me the wink, as if it were the best joke that was ever pulled off."

Again Mr. Norcross smiled handsomely. "If you push me to it. Cantrell, I may say that this is exactly their attitude toward me!"

"Well," said the editor, getting up to go; "it's doing one thing to you, good and proper. Your railroad stock is tumbling downstairs so fast that it can't keep up with itself."

"I hope it will tumble still more," said the boss, pleasantly, with another sort of enigmatic smile; and with that Mr. Cantrell had to be content.

As the editor went out, Fred May brought in the bunch of forenoon telegrams and laid them on the desk. They were quickly glanced at and tossed over to me as fast as they were read. Most of them were plaintive little yips from a strike-stricken lot of people along the Short Line who seemed to think that the world had come to an end, but there were three bearing the New York date line and signed "Dunton." The earliest had been sent shortly after the opening of the Stock exchange, and it ran thus:

"Morning papers announce strike and complete tie-up on P. S. L. Why no report from you of labor troubles threatening? Compromise at any cost and wire emphatic denial of strike. Answer quick."

The second of the series had been filed for transmission an hour later and it was still more saw-toothed.

"Later reports confirm newspaper story. Your failure to compromise instantly with employees will break stock market and subject you to investigation for criminal incompetency. Answer."

The third message had been sent still later.

"Your continued silence is inexcus-"We'll begin to show them, in just able. If no favorable report from you about fifteen minutes, Jimmie," was by six o'clock you may consider yourself discharged from the company's service and criminal proceedings on charge of conspiracy will be instituted at once."

I thought things were beginning to look pretty serious for us if Mr. Dunton was going to try to drag us into the courts, but Mr. Norcross was still smiling when he handed me the last and latest telegram in the bunch. It was from Mr. Chadwick, and was goodnaturedly laconic.

"To G. Norcross, G. M., "Portal City.

"Just returned from trip to Seattle. What's doing on the Short Line?

"Chadwick."

"A couple of telegrams, Jimmie," said the chief, as he passed this last wire over, and I got my note-book ready.

"To B. Dunton, New York. Strike is sympathetic and not subject to compromise. Mails moving regularly, but all other traffic suspended indefinitely. My office closes today, and my resignation, effective at once, goes to you on Fast Mail tonight."

"Now one to Mr. Chadwick, and you may send it in code," he directed crisply. Then he dictated:

"See newspapers for account strike. Hatch and eight of his associates were killed last night in railroad wreck. Dunton has demanded my resignation and I have given it. Have plan for complete reorganization along lines discussed in beginning, and need your help. At market opening to-morrow sell P. S. L. large blocks and repurchase in driblets as price goes down. Repeat until I tell you to stop. Wire quick if you are with us."

Just as I was taking the last sentence, Mr. Ripley and Billoughby came in, and Mr. Norcross took them both into the third room of the suite and shut the door. An hour later when the door opened and they came out, the boss was summing up the new orders to Billoughby: "There's a lot to do, and you have my authority to hire all the help you need. See the bankers yourself, personally, and get them to interest other local buyers along the line, the more of them, and the smaller they are, the better. I'll take care of Portal City, myself. I've had Van Britt on the wire and he is taking care of the employees-yes, that goes as it lies, and is a part of the original plan; every man who works for P. S. L. is going to own a bit of stock, if we have to carry him for it and let him pay a dollar a week. More than that, they shall have representation on the board if they want it. And while you're knocking about, take time to show loud. these C. S. & W. folks how they can is down and out, now, and they can one little year, can't you, Graham?" keep it out if they want to."

. I suppose I might rattle this old type-machine of mine indefinitely and tell the story of the financial fight that filled the next few days; of how the boss and Mr. Ripley and Billoughby got the bankers and practically everybody together all along the Short Line and sprung the big plan upon them. which was nothing less than the snapping up on a tumbling stock market, of the opportunity now presented to them of owning-actually owning in fee simple-their own railroad, the buying to be done quietly through Mr. merely common laborers? Can you Chadwick's brokers in Chicago and forth, of course, but the newspapers, led by the Mountaineer, took hold, and then, pretty soon, everybody took hold; after which the only trouble was to keep people-our own rank and file among them-from buying P. S. L. Common so fast that the New Yorkers would catch on and run the price

They didn't catch on-not until after it was too late; and the minute Mr. Chadwick wired us from Chicago that we were safe, the strike went off, as you might say, between two minutes, and Mr. Norcross called a meeting of stockholders, the same to be heldbless your heart!-in Portal City, the thriving metropoles of the region in which, counting Mr. Chadwick in as one of us, a good, solid voting majority of the stock was now held. The Mountaineer printed the call, and it spoke of the railroad as "our railroad

The meeting was held in due time, and Mr. Chadwick was there to preside. He made a cracking good chairman, and the way he dilated on the fact that now the country-and the employees-had a railroad of their own, and that the whole nation would be looking to see how we would demonstrate the problem we had taken over, actually brought cheers-think of it; cheers in a railroad stockholders' meeting!

Following Mr. Chadwick's talk there was the usual routine business; reports were read and it was shown that the Short Line, notwithstanding all the stealings and mismanagements, was still a good going proposition at the price at which it had been bought in, A new board of directors was chosen, and as soon as the new board got together, Mr. Norcross went back to his office in the headquarters, not as general manager, this time-not on your life!-but as the newly elected president of Pioneer Short Line. And by the same token, the first official circular that came out-a copy of which I sent, tied up with a biue ribbon, to Maisie Ann-read like this:

"To all Employees:

"Effective this day, Mr. James F. Dodds is appointed assistant to the president with headquarters in Portal City.

"G. Norcross, President."

That's all; all but a little talk between the boss and Mr. Upton Van Britt that took place in our office on the day after Mr. Van Britt, still kicking about the hard work that the best was always piling upon him, had been appointed general manager.

"You've made the riffle, Grahamjust as I said you would," said our own and only millionaire, after be had got through abusing the fates that wouldn't let him go back east and play with his coupon shears and his yachts and polo ponies. "You're going to be the biggest man this side of the mountains, some day; and the day isn't so very far off, either."

It was just here that the boss got out of his chair and walked to the other end of the room. When he came back it was to say: "You think I have won out, Upton, and so does everybody else. I suppose it looks that way to the man in the street. But I haven't, you know. I have lost the one thing for which I would gladly give all the business success I have ever made or hope to make." Mr. Van Britt's smile was more than half a grin. "It isn't lost, Graham: it's only gone before. Can't you wait a decent little while?" "If I should wait all my life it wouldn't be long enough, Upton," was the reply. "What you said to methat time when we first spoke of Collingwood-was true. You said she loved the other man-and so she did." This time Mr. Van Britt's smile was a whole grin. "I said it, and I'll say it again. She didn't realize it or admit it, even to herself, you know; she's too good and clean-hearted for anything like that. But I could see it plainly enough, and so could everybody else except the two people most nearly concerned. I didn't mean Howie Collingwood: you were the 'other man,' Graham."

At this the boss whirled short around and tramped to the other cod of the room again, standing for quite a little while with one foot on the low window-sill and making out like he was looking down at the traffic clattering along in Nevada avenue. But I'll bet a quarter he never saw a single wheel of it. When he came back our way his eyes were shining and he put his hand on Mr. Van Britt's shoulder.

"It ought to have been you, Uppy," he said, dropping back to the old colege nickname. "You're by long odds the better man. When-when do you think I might venture to take a little run across to New York."

At that, Mr. Van Britt laughed out

"Ho! ho!" he said. "I suppose I climb back into the saddle. Red Tower ought to say a year. You can walt

"Not on your life!" rasped the boss. And then: "I'll tell you what I'll do: I'll compromise with the proprieties, or whatever it is that you're insisting on, and make it six months. But that's the limit-the absolute limit!

And so it was. (THE END.)

> A Triumph of Feminism! Women as Treasure Hunters!

Spanish Doubloons

By Camilla Kenyon

Virginia Harding hears that her Aunt Jane, a very respectable old maid, has been coaxed to finance and proposes to accompany a daring expedition of treasure hunting, and she dashes after the old girl.

Aunt Jane who is described as looking like a little dumpling that has got into a sausage wrapping by mistake, as the head of a treasure-seeking party, is enough to shake the strongest intellect.

At Panama, Virginia catches up with her aunt. From then on to the end it is a story of thrills, of pirates and of gold.

Little Virginia with a rollicking and uncontrollable sense of humor, and in spite of her sweetness and demureness, of the show-me type, pushed in and was very unwelcome; but eventually she is the one they have to thank for discovering the pirate's hoard. Virginia is involved in a charming love affair and Aunt Jane nearly meets her soul mate.

"For years we have used Black-Draught in our family, and I have never found any medicine that could take its place," writes Mr. H. A. Stacy, of Bradyville, Tenn. Mr. Stacy, who is a Rutherford County farmer, recommends Black-Draught as a medicine that should be kept in every household for use in the prompt treatment of many little ills to prevent them from developing into serious troubles.

THEDFORD'S

BLACK-DRAUGHT

"It touches the liver and does the work," Mr. Stacy declared. "It is one of the best medicines I ever saw for a cold and headache. I don't know what we would do in our family if it wasn't for Black-Draught. It has saved us many dollars . . . I don't see how any family can hardly go without it. I know it is a reliable and splendid medicine to keep in the house. I recommend Black-Draught highly and amnever without it."

A certain Democratic candidate for state office in the last election tells a story on himself, and he evidently appreciates the humor in it, now.

"I was billed for a speech at a county seat," his story goes, "and the Republican county chairman saw my announcement. He immediately wired to his state speakers' committee: 'Send one of the best speakers you have for Thursday night. So-and-So is to speak here the night before.'

"I went to the town and made my speech. The next day the Republican county chairman wired his speakers' bureau: 'Cancel all arrangements for meeting tonight. It is not needed ! + now." "-Indianapolis News.

I. Paul and Barnabas Preaching at

As to their work in Iconium ob-

1. Their manner of preaching. This is suggested by the little word "so" in verse 1. They "so" spake that a great $11.50, Minneapolis $15, Chicago, multitude believed. They were true preachers. Only that which brings conviction of sin and induces decision for Christ can be truly said to be preachcaused a considerable dropping off ing in the biblical sense. The same is true of the Sunday school teacher. Let every Sunday school teacher at all times have as his supreme aim to bear the gospel of Christ so as to induce decision for Christ.

2. Their attitude toward opposition. This is suggested by the word "therefore" in verse 3. "Long time therefore they tarried." The opposition did not prevent their preaching, but incited them to continue preaching. Christian lalfalfa meal $1850 Kansas City; workers should learn not to give up work because of opposition.

(v. 4). The multitude of the city was divided. Where men faithfully preach the gospel there will be division.

> II. Attempt to Worship Paul and Barnabas as Gods (vv. 8-18).

1. The occasion (vv. 8-10)—the healing of the lame man. God's gracious power exhibited in healing this lame man occasioned a new difficulty. That which ought to have been a help was turned into a landrance. The man was a confirmed cripple. He had never walked. He heard Paul's preaching, which caused faith to be born in his heart (Rom. 10:17). When Paul perceived that he trusted Christ, he called with a loud voice that all could hear for the man to stand upright. The cure was instant, for he leaped up and walked (v. 10). There was no magnetic touch, no treatment, only the command, and the naturally impossible became the possible and the real.

2. The method (vv. 11-13). They grades 50c higher; yeal and lamb called Barnabas Jupiter and Paul Mercury, because he was the chief speaker. The priest of Jupiter brought oxen and garlands ready to offer sacrifices pork loins $25 to $28; heavy loins unto those men (v. 11). If they had only known, in the person of Jesus Christ God had actually appeared to

3. Their efforts frustrated (vv. 14-18). This foolish act was happily averted by the tact of the apostles, as exhibited in the address of the occasion. (1) They deny that they are divine beings and declare that to worship beings with like passion to themselves is criminal. (2) They direct them to turn away from these vain things unto the living God who made heaven and earth and has ever left witness of Himself in that He has always done good, giving rain and Moscow, and there is danger fruitful seasons, filling their hearts

III. The Stoning of Paul (vv. 19-22).

Wicked Jews from Antioch and Iconium pursued Paul with relentless hate to this place, where they stirred up the very people who were willing to worship them a little while ago. This shows that satanic worship can soon be turned into satanic hate. This hatred took form in stoning Paul and dragging him out of the city for dead. God raised him up, and with undaunted courage he pressed on with his duties as a missionary bearing the good tidings to the lost.

Soon after this Paul turned back and revisited the places where he had preached, telling them that through al opponents of the Soviets are great tribulation they must enter into > IV. The Organization of Churches in the Field (vv. 23-28).

Evangelization with Paul did not mean a hasty and superficial preaching of the gospel but the establishmen: are not so bad off for food con of a permanent work. Elders were appointed in every church. The work the Volga toward the Ukraine. of the missionary is not done until Roumanian Charge d'Affaires there are established on the field andon denies that Roumania is self-governing and self-propagating churches.

Buy Coal Now!

And Have it When You Need It

If no one buys Coal during the summer, everyone will want it at the same time in November and December.

And there aren't enough coal mines, enough coal miners, enough coal cars, enough trainmen, enough haulers, nor enough coal yards in the United States to supply such an abnormal demand as that would be.

Order coal NOW. Save money. Save worry. Be sure of your coal supply for next winter.
