OUR CHILDREN HAVE RIGHTS.

All Right-Thinking People Should Support the School Amendment.

Only eleven days more till election; and then we will decide for two years more, at least, how we want to be governed. Now the News has no advice to offer as to what candidate or party anyone should vote for. However, we suggest that each elector vote according to his own personal convictions, regardless of who will win or what others may think; to do otherwise is to throw your vote away.

But whether you vote for Bryan, Taft or any of the other able candidates for this high office, or whose name you write on the ballot, we hope no one will fail to vote for the amendment to Section 3, Article 7 of the Constitution, by which a majority of the voters of any school district may levy a special tax of 50 cents on the $100 valuation for school purposes.

Vote for this amendment because it is right and the best thing for the future of Texas. There can be no reason for anyone to oppose it except downright selfishness and short-sighted greed. Now listen who favor it:

The Democratic Party of Texas endorsed the Amendment by making it part of the platform.

The Texas Farmers' Congress urges every patriotic farmer and all other citizens to work and vote for the school tax amendment.

The State Board of Medical Examiners commends its support and adoption to the citizens of Texas.

Both the Texas Press Association and the Texas Women's Press Association have endorsed it by resolution, and so far so we can learn, every reputable newspaper in Texas is working for it at least hard as the News is.

The Federation of Women's Clubs, the Lumbermen's Association and the Conference for Agricultural and Commercial Interests favor the School Children's Amendment.

The presidents of Southwestern, Baylor, Texas Christian and Trinity Universities unite with all other teachers in asking that justice to country school children.

Don't fail to do your part in helping Lynn county to give over 300 votes to this righteous measure. Vote for the best interests of yours and your neighbors' children.

Visiting the Plains.

Mrs. Allcorn of Brownwood is on the Plains for a visit to relatives. She arrived last Friday at Gail to visit her daughter, Mrs. John Stokes, of that place, her niece, Mrs. J. E. Stokes, went to Gail Friday to meet her aunt and bring her to Tahoka for a visit. The ladies arrived here Monday noon. About daylight they were caught in quite a rain and wind storm. The rain did not last long, but the wind blew all day, making the trip a very disagreeable one. Mrs. Allcorn spent a couple of days with Mrs. Stokes in Tahoka and then both ladies went to Lubbock to visit Mrs. Penney, Mrs. Allcorn's only sister. They will spend several days there, as the connection is a large one.

HARD WIND.

The wind blew very hard Sunday, and Sunday night increased in strength blowing a tin roof off of the wagon yard shed and wrecking the public windmill north of the court house. A shower terminated the wind and laid the dust, greatly to the relief of the inhabitants.

feenders while the real attack was developing without let or hindrance. It was a smart ruse worthy of a race of higher attainments than the tribe which is ranked lowest in the human scale. The newcomers abstained from firing or stone slinging. They were gathering with the speed and silence of vultures.

Two mines protected the front of the Kansas, and several canoes had passed them. Indeed, Courtenay soon found that some of the assailants were already screened by the ship's bows, but the larger number were clustered thickly round Tollemache's infernal machines. It was well that a cool headed sailor was called on to deal with this emergency. The captain of the Kansas even smiled as he appreciated the full meaning of the trick which his adversaries had tried to play on him, and the man who smiles in the face of danger is one to be depended on.

The six cords were numbered. He dropped No. 2, which he was holding, and seized Nos. 4 and 5. He drew them in, hand over hand, as rapidly as possible, but was careful not to sacrifice a smooth tension to undue hurry. In a few seconds two deafening reports split the air, the glass front of the chart house shook, pieces of the broken panes rattled on the floor, several scraps of iron, bolts, nuts and heavy nails fell off the decks and hatches, and a tremendous hubbub of yells came from the main body of Indians. A couple of heavily charged dynamite bombs had burst in their midst, dealing death and destruction over a wide area. Several canoes near the floating platforms were torn asunder and sank, while men were killed or wounded out of all proportion to the number of craft disabled.

Courtenay at once picked up the governing cord of the mine which he was about to fire in the first instance. He felt that the Alaculof flotilla would act in future on the "once bitten twice shy" principle where those innocent looking little poles showed above sea level, and he must strike fierce blows while the opportunity served. The nine canoes on the south were not clustered around the bomb in the same manner as the others, but they were near enough to sustain heavy loss, and their frightened crews had ceased to ply their paddles, so he fired that shell also and had the satisfaction of seeing two more of the frail craft capsized.

He heard the crash of bullets against the ship's sides. A volley of stones smashed several more panes of stout glass, many arrows were imbedded in the woodwork, but he calmly pulled another cord and blew a single loud blast on the siren. That was the agreed signal to warn those below that they must expect to be attacked from the fore part of the vessel. His shotgun was lying on the table. He took it up and faced forward again. Several canoes were scurrying past and away from the ship as fast as the current and many arms could propel them. He fired both barrels at those within range on the port side. He reloaded, and the sharp snapping of revolver shots told him that Tollemache and the Chilean were busy.

But the Indians were demoralized by the complete failure of their scheme. They had ceased firing and stone slinging; they were lying for their lives. Courtenay wheeled round on Suarez.

"Now!" he cried, pointing to a speaking trumpet. Suarez ran out on deck, put the megaphone to his mouth and roared after the discomfited enemy a threat of worse things in store if they dared to come near the ship again. As he used the Alaculof language, the sounds he uttered were the most extraordinary that Courtenay had ever heard from a human throat—a compound of hoarse, guttural vowels and consonants ending in a series of clicks—and the stentorian power of his lungs must have amazed the Indians.

Courtenay saw that the two fleets were combining forces about 500 yards to the westward. They were close inshore, but none of the savages landed, nor did they head for the more remote

NEW VOTER.

A new Democratic voter arrived at the home of C. W. Slover Tuesday eve. The young man will reside in Lynn county and make his home with his parents until he is old enough to start in life for himself. We offer congratulations to the parents upon the arrival of so fine a boy, and extend a hearty welcome to the little man himself.

Officer creek. As he was anxious to keep them on the run, he resolved to try the siren again. He judged rightly, as it transpired, that they would fear the bellow of the fog horn even more than the flying missiles which had dealt death and serious wounds so lavishly.

He knew sufficient Spanish, eked out by signs, to bid Suarez hold the siren cord taut for a minute. While the Kansas was still trumpeting forth her loud blare of defiance he ran down the bridge companion. Mr. Boyle and the tiny garrison of the port promenade deck received him jubilantly. They had escaped without a bruise and owing to their position were able to witness the Indians' retreat.

He raced across to starboard and found that by unfortunate mischance a Chilean fireman in Tollemache's detachment had been shot through the brain. The poor fellow was prone on the deck. It was only too evident that a doctor's skill could avail him naught, so Tollemache had decided that he should not be taken below. The incident marred an easily won victory. Courtenay was assured in his own mind that none of the men had been injured, seeing that he and Suarez, who occupied the most dangerous position, were untouched. This fatality was a mere blunder of fate, and it grieved him sorely.

Even while he bent reverently over the unlucky Chilean's body the deafening vibration of the fog horn ceased and he heard Elsie's glad cry from the salon:

"Oh, my, here comes Joey! That means that Captain Courtenay has left the bridge."

The girl's joyous exclamation, her prelude to a paean of thanks that the dreadful necessary slaying of men had ceased, was a strange commentary on the shattered form stretched at the commander's feet. Among the small company on board it had been decreed that one at least, after surviving so many perils, should never see home and kin again.

He gave orders that the dead man should be carried to the poop to await a sailor's burial. Then he turned and, with less sprightly step, descended the main companion. In the salon he found Elsie and Christobal watching the stairs expectantly. The girl had the dog in her arms, and Courtenay perceived for the first time that Joey's off fore paw had been cut by the broken glass which littered the floor of the chart house.

"Then the attack has really failed?" was Elsie's greeting. "I saw some of the canoes turn and scurry away. That was the first good sign, and then Joey came."

"You saw them?" repeated Courtenay, his bent brows emphasizing the question.

"Yes. I was looking through one of the ports. Was that wrong?"

"Which one?"

She pointed. "That one," said she, wondering that he had never a smile for her.

"Then you must obey orders more faithfully next time. A man was shot dead by a stray bullet not three feet above your head."

She paled, and her eyes fell before his stern gaze, which did not deceive her at all, for she read the unspoken agony of his thought.

"I am sorry," she murmured, "not so much on my own account, though I

HOW TO VOTE RIGHT.

Lynn County should have a full, intelligent vote.

A large majority of the voters of Lynn county participated in the Democratic Primary and so will want to vote the Democratic ticket straight. In order to do this correctly the following rules should be observed:

The ticket to be voted is what is called a blanket ticket and has all the nominees of all the parties on the same sheet with an extra column in which to write the name of any one you may wish to vote for whose name is not printed on the ticket. No name can be counted that is written in any column but the eighth, which is also the last and right hand column.

To vote straight Democratic make a plain X mark with your pencil from top to bottom of each of columns 2, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7, and if you want to vote for someone to fill an office where no name appears, write the name after the office you wish him to fill, in column eight.

If you wish to vote straight Republican, do as above only mark columns 1, 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7. In fact, to vote any party ticket straight, mark all the columns except the one of your choice and the last one, for if you want to vote for any one whose name does not appear on the ticket, you must write it in the last column.

If you did not take part in any primary or convention and want to vote a mixed ticket, just scratch the name of each person you don't want for that office, leaving the name you want, or if it does not appear on the ticket, write it in the last column.

If you have any doubt of the correctness of the above, take the clipping to your legal advisor and get his opinion on it.

Joint Baptizing.

A joint Baptizing of the Baptist and Methodist church was the occasion of a large gathering Sunday at Mr. McGonagill's tank Northeast of town. Those who joined the Baptist church by baptism were: Mrs. McIntyre, Misses Alice McIntyre, Allie Timms; and Edwena Napier, P. B. Hall, Will Cade, Otis and Robert Napier, Raymond Weathers, Clifford Shook and Walter Tucker. Rev. Bishop performed the rites of Baptism in his usual impressive manner. Rev. Thos. Hanks baptized Paul Waechter, who joined the Methodist church during the protracted meeting but was not baptized with the other candidates. The occasion was one which is very rare, the harmony and fellowship which prevailed, making it one to be remembered.

out special permission.]

Go to the Trees.

When a man tires of life he should go to nature and renew his vitality.
There is an odor from the trees, the flowers and the grass that intoxicates like wine, except that it leaves no headache. There is a subtle aroma that gets into a man's heart, brain and soul.

The sunshine and open air are better medicines than come from the drug shop, are better stimulants than come from the rum shop. I have no quarrel, understand, with people who wish to drink nostrums or booze. I am only stating my own preference.

Give me a wheel, a horse or a rod and reel, then out to the fields, the streams and the mountains. That is life. Human beings were never intended to be shut up forever in the sweltering, festering town. There is more beauty in the granite piled up by the earthquake than in the hideous collection of bricks and mortar piled up by men. There is more sweetness in the grass and blossoms than in the clinking pavements. There is more health in one good outing than in all the doctors' prescriptions.

Nature is wholesome, genuine. She does not flatter us or lie to us. She does not nag at us or restrain us. She simply gives us our liberty and lets us do as we please. She says: "Here I am. Take me or let me alone. I am free to all and am never jealous. I have no favors to offer, yet man can gain from me whatever he desires. To the weary I give rest; to the poet and artist beauty; to the avaricious wealth; to the bruised heart balm and healing; to all health, vigor and wholesome enjoyment. I sustain in life and fold back to my bosom in death."

To one tired of the artificial, the hollow and the insincere a day with nature is like a draft of cold water to one athirst.

A Path to Truth.

The greatest crop I have raised on my rock farm has been a crop of dreams, and here is one of them:

Nothing is real that is not permanent. Nothing is permanent that is not perfect. All else passes away. It strives toward perfection as the wave on the shore strives up the sand, only to fail of reaching the top and falling back.

What, then, of man is real, permanent and perfect? God's thought of man, is it not? God's thoughts are things. They actually create in the one substance, which is spirit. We see but the apparent man, the symbol in the manifested world, the imperfect reflection like the distorted reflection of the moon in the uneven surface of the water.

God's man, the one produced by the divine thought, is perfect. There is the eternal of each of us. There is our real self, the only real self that exists.

Oh, to keep this thought of ourselves ever, to function in this immortal nature that God makes by thinking of us! That would mean perfect health, perfect joy, perfect brotherhood and service.

This is one of the visions that have grown for me on my little rocky farm.

Joe Biggs and the Grasshopper.

The wheat stack was very high and was just being topped out. The stacker asked for a jug of water, and Joe Biggs volunteered to carry it up.
The ladder was long, but still did not reach within six or seven feet of the top. Jimmie, the little boy, was on the stack, where he had been handling sheaves to the stacker.

Joe stood on the very top rung of the ladder, holding the jug as high as he could, so that Jimmie might reach it.
While in this position a very large and hungry grasshopper lit on Joe's wrist and began operations.

Jimmie did not want to interfere with the grasshopper's pursuit of happiness, so was maddeningly deliberate in his movements. Joe tried to shake the insect loose, but the other was so busy with his excavations he did not seem to mind. Finally Joe could stand it no longer and, letting go his hold on the stack with his other hand, made a vicious grab at the hopper.

The movement jostled the ladder, and in a moment more there was a catastrophe. Joe, ladder, grasshopper, jug and all began a wild slide down the side of the stack. First went the ladder, on top of this was Joe, and in the middle of Joe's stomach lit the jug, out of which the water went with a spasmodic "kelug," "kelug," "kelug." To cap all was a large bunch of sheaves which the wild descent had torn off the wagon. This frightened the horses, which began prancing and lunging.

Out of all the chaos, however, arose Joe Biggs, scratched and stunned, but triumphant, holding aloft with a grim smile the body of a dead grasshopper.

As over cloud and gloom,
As over shroud and tomb,
Still there is light,
So, tempest tossed today,
Truth may seem lost today,
Yet in her might,
Radiant, glorious,
O'er all victorious,
Rises the right.

Most evils grow out of the fact that we are too artificial, too abnormal, too affected. We are too far from Nature that she would not know some of us without an introduction.

To Poultry Raisers:

We are told that skunks, or as some call them, polecats, are becoming both numerous and troublesome hereabouts. This seems rather strange, when it is remembered that these little animals are very easily trapped and their fur is valuable. But someone will ask:
Who can hold their breath long enough to skin a skunk, to say nothing of preparing the fur for market. To catch and skin skin skunks without changing clothes, one should go to the hardware store and get a double-spring steel trap of 4 1/2 or 5 inch spread and 50 feet of smooth wire. Set trap near the hen house and attach wire to chain. Bore a hole in a 1x4 5 feet long and nail to hen house so that hole is about 3 feet from the house and two yards above the ground and several feet away from trap.
Pass wire through hole in board and secure at a safe distance and out of sight of trap. No bait is required if trap is set near a hole in the hole in the wall which may be stopped on the inside. When the "cat" is caught, pull him clear of the ground and kill him in any way you please. There will be nothing in the skinning operation offend the olfactory nerves.
