THE REPUBLICAN PARTY.

When did the Republican party originate?

1854. The name was first used at a political convention in Michigan. The first Republican national convention met in Pittsburg in 1856 and adopted a platform in which the chief plank was that the constitution confers upon congress sovereign power over the territories of the United States for their government and the exercise of this power it is both the right and the imperative duty of congress to prohibit in the territories those twin relics of barbarism polygamy and slavery."

Who was the party's first presidential candidate?

John C. Fremont. He was defeated by James Buchanan, the Democratic candidate.

Who was the next candidate?

Abraham Lincoln. He was nominated at Chicago and elected, his opponent being Stephen A. Douglas, nominated by the Democrats. Lincoln was re-elected in 1864 over George B. McClellan, Democrat.

Who were the Republican presidents have there been?

Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield, Arthur, Benjamin Harrison, McKinley and Roosevelt. Lincoln, Garfield and Andrew Jackson were assassinated. Johnson, Arthur and Roosevelt succeeded to the presidency on the death of the president, being vice-presidents. Roosevelt was elected to a full term after serving out McKinley's second term.

For what was the Republican party chiefly stood for during the civil war, for what has the Republican party chiefly stood for since?

It is known as a protective tariff.

and it was joyous by everyone. It was a night and extended to Coahoma as far as the eye could see, but it covered a few miles north and south of Enterprise.

S. M. Beeman of east of town was in to see us Tuesday. He tells us his fruit crop will be good this year. Apples, peaches, apricots and some cherries, it seems that the late freeze did not do near the damage that was at first supposed. We see by our exchanges that the fruit prospect is pretty good all over the Plains.

THE PROHIBITION PARTY.

When was the national Prohibition party organized?

Sept. 1, 1869, in Chicago. In 1872 a national ticket was nominated, James Black of Pennsylvania being the candidate for president. Mr. Black received 5,608 votes.

What is the largest vote ever polled by the Prohibitionists?

That of 1892, when John Bidwell of California received 264,133 votes for president.

Name the Prohibition presidential candidates since James Black.

Green Clay Smith, Kentucky, 1876; Neal Dow, Maine, 1880; John P. St. John, Kansas, 1884; Clinton B. Fisk, New Jersey, 1888; John Bidwell, California, 1892; Joshua Levering, Maryland, 1896; John G. Woolley, Illinois, 1900; Silas C. Swallow, Pennsylvania, 1904.

What was Swallow's vote?

258,536. This was an increase of 50,000 over Woolley's vote.

State briefly what the Prohibition party chiefly stands for.

The following is a part of the Prohibition platform of 1892: "The liquor traffic is a foe to civilization, the arch enemy of popular government and a public nuisance. It is the citadel of the forces that corrupt politics, promote poverty and crime, degrade the nation's home life, thwart the will of the people and deliver our country into the hands of rapacious class interests. All laws that under the guise of regulation legalize and protect this traffic or make the government share in its ill gotten gains are 'vicious in principle and powerless as a remedy.' We declare anew for the entire suppression of the manufacture, sale, importation, exportation and transportation of alcoholic liquors as a beverage by federal and state legislation."

Mr. E. B. Womack was a caller at our sanctum Monday and took the paper for himself and sent it to his brother in Oklahoma. Mr. Womack says he is much pleased with this country.

Miss Mattie and her sister, Mrs. Shepherd of East of town were pleasant visitors at our office Tuesday afternoon. We spent a very pleasant evening with Mrs. Shepherd, who tells us she likes fine and her health, which was very poor, is much improved since her arrival in Lynn county.

Mrs. R. E. Morris entertained a few friends at 42 last Saturday eve. The guests present were Misses Lula and Annie Cowan and Mary Whipp and Messrs John and Joe Marrs and Temple Skinner, all of whom report a lovely time. Mrs. Morris is one of our most charming young matrons and one of the most successful hostesses.

Judge Ferguson of Lubbock stopped in Tahoka Tuesday night on his way home.

Railroad promoter and contractor O'Donnell spent a day in Tahoka the first of the week on his way north. He reports 45 teams at work Monday morning on the Stanton end of the line. He says they are doing more work than wind jamming down there now.

A fine rain visited Lynn county this week, and like all the good things it came when needed. Our farmers have gone ahead and prepared the soil and some have planted and now the season is in the ground to make bountiful crops.

Mrs. W. E. Robinson entertained last Friday evening in honor of Miss Ammie McLarry, who left for her home in Lubbock Saturday. The ever popular game of 42 was the feature of the evening. Sherbert and wafers were served to the guests during the evening and were enjoyed by all. This was the last of a series of entertainment which have been the delight of those fortunate enough to be invited. It also marks the separation of one of the pleasantest house parties in town. Mrs. Robinson and Miss Ammie have been boarding with Mrs. Roberts for the past winter—bringing together in one home three of the most successful hostesses in town.

The Misses Reed entertained last Saturday evening in honor of their cousins, the Misses Suiter. These young ladies are quite an addition to the social set in Tahoka and the Misses Reed are to be congratulated upon having the pleasure of introducing them to their friends.

J. D. Henderson, of Draw, was in Tahoka Monday visiting his daughter, Mrs. Walter Pinnell.

To My Friends:-

I have decided to withdraw from the race for County Treasurer of Lynn county. After reconsidering the time the people would expect one to devote to this office and the small remuneration thereof, I feel very grateful to the many who have given me words of encouragement and assurance of election. In announcing my withdrawal I commend to your hearty support my friend Mr. McMill Clayton. As all who know Mr. Clayton are aware that he is not physically able to make a living by manual labor, and as I feel that he is more deserving to the office than myself, and having had considerable dealings with him I know him to be well qualified to discharge the duties of the office to the satisfaction of the people, and I am sure that you will not regret supporting him. Thanking you all for the words of encouragement and support, I am still, Your Friend.—C. G. Alford.

A WELCOME TO PAT.

We are glad to welcome "PAT" to our columns, who is a bright little fellow, and as his name denotes, belongs to an energetic race. "PAT" is a seeker after news and what is more to the point, he finds what he seeks. Keep it up, Pat, and remember the latch string always hangs out for our friends.

THE DIFFERENCE.

The Stamford Tribune came out last week with a three column head, telling about the big rain they had there last week, how much it was needed, and how glad they were to receive it, just like that was a drouthy country, and they were becoming afraid that just a short time longer without rain would ruin them. And perhaps it would have.

Our rain came more than a week later than did the one at Stamford, and while we were thankful for it at this time, we did not throw a fit about it for we knew that judging the present by the past, the rain would come as it has in plenty of time. With us a month sooner or later does not count like Stamford, where the crop-kill, everything grows right along out here, and a total failure is unknown.

Sunday, May 31st, the W. O. W. will hold their unveiling ceremonies at the Tahoka cemetery. The occasion being the unveiling of the monument erected at the grave of R. A. Milliken.

PROTRACTED MEETING.

On Friday, May 29, Elder Coleman of Snyder will begin a ten days' meeting at this place. The meeting will be held in the interest of the Christian church. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

PRIMITIVES MAY ORGANIZE.

On Thursday night before the first Sunday in May will begin a three days' meeting to be held by the Primitive Baptists of Tahoka. D. B. Koch and A. W. Atkins from abroad will be here to assist Elder Bolinger the regular pastor at this place. These three ministers represent some of the best talent in their denomination and some fine preaching is anticipated. It is hoped a church will be organized here for the benefit of those of the faith who have homes here. The meeting will continue until Sunday night embracing two services Saturday and Sunday. We hope an organization will be affected, as a town cannot have too many churches.

THE CAPTAIN OF the KANSAS

By LOUIS TRACY,

Author of "The Wings of the Morning," "The Pillar of Light," Etc.

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY EDWARD J. CLODE

The electric light was uninjured. It revealed the bodies of several men, either dead or insensible, lying amid the scattered coal. Shovels, stoking rods and pieces of iron plate had been hurled about in wild confusion. The door of one furnace was blown clean out of its bolts, furnace bars and fire bricks strewn the iron deck, while each time the ship rolled the heavy clank of loose metal somewhere in the engine room proved that the damage was not confined solely to the stokehold.

If Courtenay could have dropped quietly into the sea through the stout hull of the Kansas he would have welcomed the certain result of that bitter moment. But he was the captain, and men would look to him for salvation. Well, he would do all that was possible and, at any rate, die at his post. So, choking back his misery, he organized the work of rescue. Slings were formed of ropes, and those men in whom any signs of life were visible were the first to be lifted to the upper deck. The stokehold was quickly emptied of its inanimate occupants. Living and dead alike were carried to the untenanted second class salon forward. Then Courtenay left Walker to solve the puzzle of the accident and report on its extent, while he climbed back to the bridge, there to tackle the far more pressing problem of the measures to be adopted if he would save his ship.

It was typical of the man that his first act was to wipe the grime of the stokehold off his face and hands. Then he drew a chart from the locker in which he had placed it two hours earlier. Mr. Boyle, who had been attending the signals both by siren and rocket, joined him. Courtenay pointed to a pin mark in the sheet.

"We were there at 6 o'clock," he said, and his voice was so steady that he seemed now to be free from the least touch of anxiety. "The course was south-40-east, and against this wind and sea, together with a strong current to the northeast, we would make eight knots under easy steam. Therefore by 8 o'clock, when the furnaces blew out, we were here."

He jabbed in a pin a little farther down the chart. Mr. Boyle grunted agreement.

"Hub!" he said. Courtenay glanced at a chronometer. "It is now a quarter to 9," he went on, "and I reckon that since the ship swung round we have been carried at least six knots to the northeast."

"Hub!" growled Mr. Boyle again, but he bent a trifle nearer the chart. To his sailor's eyes the situation was quite simple. Unless by God's providence some miracle happened the Kansas was a doomed ship. The pin stuck where the admiralty chart recorded soundings of 100 fathoms with a fine sand bed. The longitude was 75.50 west of Greenwich and latitude 51.35 south. Staring at them from the otherwise blank space which showed the wide expanse of the Pacific was an ominous note by the compilers of the chart:

"Seamen are cautioned not to make free with these shores, as they are very imperfectly known, and, from their wild, desolate character, they cannot be approached with safety."

Right in the track of the drifting ship lay a vaguely outlined trio of dread import—"Breakers. Islet (conical). Duncan rock." Behind this sinister barrier stood the more definite White Horse Island, while, running due north and south a few miles away to the eastward, was a wavering dotted line which professed to mark the coast of Hanover Island. Lending a fearful significance to the unknown character of the region, a printed comment followed the dotted line. "This coast is laid down from distant observations on board the Beagle." So the sea face of Hanover Island had not been visited by civilized man for nearly sixty years!

Neither man spoke while their practiced scrutiny took in these details. The roaring chaos of the gale told what fate awaited them. The elemental forces had donned the black cap of the judge and sentenced them to speedy destruction.

Mr. Boyle pursed his lips. He looked sideways at Courtenay.

"Hub," he said. "What's to be done?" "I propose," answered the captain coolly, "to endeavor—"

It was then that the giant wave leaped madly over the poop, as though the sea were resolved to swallow its prey without further warning. The second officer, outside on the bridge, had to cling to a stanchion for his life. Courtenay and Boyle saw two boats wrenched from their davits and carried overboard, while a bulkhead forward was smashed into matchwood. The half caste quartermaster at the wheel muttered "Madonna!" and tried to remember a prayer.

"I propose," continued Courtenay, raising his voice so that the other might hear, "to give the ship steering way by hoisting the foresail. Will you see to it? Then I intend to warn the passengers and make such preparations as are possible before we strike."

"Hub," agreed Mr. Boyle. He took the short cut over the rails. In a few seconds the captain heard a flow of ornate Spanish, and he knew that Mr. Boyle was getting the scared Chileans to work.

Then Courtenay went to his own cabin, in which, in the haste of his exit, he had imprisoned Joey. The dog received him with delight, for Joey knew a real gale from a sham one as well as any man before the mast.

The second officer, outside on the bridge, had to cling to a stanchion for his life.

Courtenay patted his head, opened a drawer in the writing table and drew forth two photographs, which he kissed. He replaced them, locked the drawer and went out, letting the dog come with him. That was his farewell to his mother and sister. It was the first and last sign of sentiment he exhibited during that night of great endurance.

When he returned from the salon he found the chief officer examining the chart.

"Do you think we have any chance of making Concepcion Strait?" he asked, pointing to the doubtfully marked channel which separates Hanover and Duke of York Islands.

Ten weeks ago O. O. Brightman, G. A. Chilton and Frank Wilson bought three leagues of land in Gaines county. This week they sold the land to a Fort Worth party named Bennett for $90,000, a clear profit of $30,000 on the deal. The gentlemen have our congratulations upon the outcome of their investment.—Comanche Experiment.

The Canton No. 12 Planter

The only Cotton Planter made where the hitch retains the same relative position whether plowing deep or shallow, avoiding all neck weight, which is accomplished by the small lever on the end of the tongue. The only planter made which throws the feed mechanism automatically out of gear without separating the gear wheels, avoiding all liability of breaking the teeth in the gears. These and other excellent features, protected by patents, can be found only on the P. & O. Canton Planter.

The bottom always remains at the same angle whether set deep or shallow. This angle can be instantly changed by the lever on the tongue. Has detachable hopper with the plates and agitator moving in opposite directions, preventing the seed from bunching. The finest Cotton and Corn Planter made.

Our Motto, The Best.

Can be easily changed from a Cotton to a Corn Planter, or it can be converted into a first-class Middle Breaker.
Strong, simple, easy running.
