

METHODIST MEETING CLOSED MONDAY MORNING

Man Who Sweeps Slaton off its Feet
Makes Decided Failure Here
Forceful Speaker

The Methodist meeting, began last Wednesday night, closed Monday with no visible results.

Rev. C. H. Ledger, pastor of Seminole Methodist church, who had just finished a meeting at Slaton in which he swept the town off its feet and closed with between 50 60 conversions, did the preaching. The few faithful ones had great expectations as to the results to be accomplished.

After leading one assault after another against the seemingly impregnable wall of indifference that has come to surrounding the town, the faithful ones, through force of habit, "lost face" and the pastor and his helper after much deliberation closed the meeting.

Thus another sowing fell upon stony ground and the fowls of the air came and devoured the seed.

Rev. Ledger left Tuesday for his home in Seminole.

OFFICIAL LOGGER OF A. A. A.
PILOTED THRU AND ROUTE
CINCHED HARD

Party From Tahoka Meets Pathfinder West of Gomez and Pilot
It to South Line—Met Here by Snyder Party—Praise Route

Upon receiving a message from Judge Neil, of Brownfield, that the Pathfinder automobile would arrive at that place Tuesday evening, Judge J. L. Stokes, W. B. Slaton and M. M. Herring got busy and secured G. E. Lockhart's car with Douglas Henderson to drive it, and a party comprised of D. A. Parkhurst, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Crie and their father E. H. Crie was gotten together and left Tahoka for Brownfield Tuesday afternoon at 1:30. Everything went alright and we arrived at our destination at 3:30, where we were informed that the logging party had left Plains about an hour before, so we left E. H. and Mrs. Crie at the Hill Hotel and loaded in Messers. Bell and Winston in their places and started out, according to instructions before we left, to meet the Pathfinders. A mile or two out we met M. V. Bownfield, of the town of the same name, J. W. Gorden, of 16 miles north of Brownfield, and D. J. Broughton, county clerk of Terry county, who stopped and after a few minutes conversation turned their car around and followed us west thru Gomez and eight miles beyond, where we met the U. S. Government pathfinder car No. 40 of the American Automobile Association, in which were the following party: O. L. Westgard, who logs all routes for the association, C. A. Taylor, the photographer for the party, C. A. Branston and Jack Grast the shafter, and Judge Neil. Friendly greetings were exchanged and we turned around and followed the other two cars into Brownfield where we spent the night.

Wednesday morning, after we had finished our breakfast and were ready to start, it was found that the building, in which the cars had been put the night before, was locked and we waited some time before we could get the cars out and then many things had to be done, as is usual at such a time, so we did not get started until 8:15, arriving in Tahoka at 9:30 after a very smooth trip, about the only incident being our meeting with the Snyder delegation just the other side of the T-Bar gate, where turned and followed us into town.

Mr. Westgard and party have come over the route of the Southern National Highway from Los Angeles via Phoenix, El Paso and Roswell to Tahoka, taking notes of every turn, distances, and every natural phenomena; jotting down all names of places and objects. In one part of Arizona, for about 100 miles, they spent ten days going back and fourth looking for the best route. The car in which they traveled is on its fifth trip across continent, they having laid out two or three other routes from sea board to sea board north of this line, and the car has been run over 31,357 miles of various kinds of road when it reached Tahoka Wednesday morning.

After waiting in town long enough to send a telegram to Dallas for a new tire to await

LYNN COUNTY FARMER HAS NEVER MADE A FAILURE

Ed Henderson Makes Statement and Submits Figures for Eleven of Plains Farming

W. E. (Ed) Henderson of east of Tahoka, was in town Monday morning and told the News man that the rain we had Sunday night would nearly make his late feed. He expects to sell about $1,000 worth of feed this fall.

Mr. Henderson said he came here about eleven years ago and took up four sections and since then has been engage in stock raising and farming. Except one year, about five years ago, he has sold from $150 to $275 worth of feed every year over and above what he used to feed out his stock. And Ed says he has his first feed to buy: Not such a bad average after all, and if you don't believe Ed Henderson what he will take for his land.

Come to Lynn county where we never make a failure.

them at Abilene, the party left Tahoka for Gail. We left the Lockhart car here and accompanied them two or three miles beyond the county line in the Jack Edwards and A. D. Shook cars, in which went: Judge Stokes, Jack Edwards, H. C. Crie, Douglas Henderson, R. S. Davidson, Dr. L. E. Turrentine, D. A. Parkhurst, Jim Keever and Charley Shook. Just after crossing the line into Borden county, the Edwards car had a blowout and coming home the two cars followed different roads; the Shook car coming back the same road they went, by Draw school house, Jim Cowan's and Slover's; the Edwards car coming home by the Luttrell farm, Midway school house and the Littlepage farm.

When the Shook car left the Pathfinder about four miles beyond the county line, Mr. Westgard expressed himself as very much pleased with the route as laid out thru Lynn county; saying that when we had worked a few places on our roads, put up our mile post sign boards and built stock gaps thru the fences where we now have to go thru gates, we would have good enough roads for any one to travel.

The committee feel highly satisfied with the final outcome of the entire affair, but we came so near to loosing this highway that it makes our heads swim to think of it. Now let's get together and have the roads fixed up in good shape, so tourists will remember and speak of Lynn as the "county of good roads."

BITTEN BY SPIDER WHILE HEADING MAISE

W. J. Crouch Painfully Bitten By Supposably Large Spider
Last Friday

Last Friday, W. J. Crouch, of two miles west of here, happened to the painful accident of being bitten on the left foot by some kind of an insect, supposably a spider.

While heading maise in his upper field, Mr. Crouch felt a sharp pain on the arch of his left foot. He moved the foot and the pain ceased, except for a dull ache. Supposing a piece of chaff had worked down in to his shoe, he paid no more attention to the injured member and worked on till night. When he pulled his shoe off that night, the entire top of his foot was inflamed and the pain kept him awake the greater part of the night. Saturday morning he was nearly sick with pain, so came to town to see the doctor, who dressed the wound and gave him some ointment with instruction not to wear his shoe until the place regained its natural color and feeling.

Mr. Crouch was in Tuesday with his foot swathed in bandages and said it didn't pain him much and he expected to be able to wear his shoe in a few days.

SUNDAY'S SUBJECT

The Rev. J. P. Callaway, pastor of the Methodist church here, will fill his regular appointment at this place Sunday. The services will be held at the Methodist church as usual.

Bro. Callaway announces that he will speak upon the following subjects:

At eleven o'clock service, "The Social Compact."

At the evening service, beginning at 8:30, "Jewish Liberality." Everyone is cordially invited to attend these services. There will be Sabbath school at the usual hour.

JUDGE SPENCER OPEOS 72ND
DITTRICT COURT MONDAY
SEPTEMBER 1, 1913

Twenty Cases Disposed of Up to Tuesday Night—Second Week Jurors Dismissed—No Jury Cases Next Week

September 1st, 1913.

The State of Texas vs W. D. Harper, No. 117. Dismissed.

The same as above, No. 118. Dismissed.

The same as above, No. 119. Dismissed.

H. C. Ferguson vs John P. Marrs et al, No 113. Leave granted plaintiff to amend his petition.

T. M. Bartley vs B. H. Robinson, No. 120. On jury docket.

Isaac B. Mahan vs E. T. Carder et al, No. 121. Dismissed at cost of plaintiff.

E. D. Skinner vs Fisher Paterson, No. 87. Continued by agreement.

September 2nd, 1913.

J. R. Miller vs Bankers Trust Company of Amarillo, No. 170. Removed to the District Court of the United States for the Northern District of Texas at Abilene.

Job Davies vs Bankers Trust Company of Amarillo, No. 171. Removed as above.

B. T. Sumner vs Unknown heirs of Isaac Pownall, No. 92. Continued to perfect service.

C. E. Brown vs Henderson Soape et al, No. 68. Continued to perfect service.

R. E. McCord vs C. G. Alford et al, No. 119. Judgement for B. W. Opdycke.

Harvey B. Herd vs T. J. Williams et al, No. 131. Judgement for plaintiff.

J. E. Ketner vs T. J. O'Donnell, No. 160. Judgement for plaintiff.

B. L. Shook vs W. F. Humphries, William Cushing, C. A. Stewart and W. E. Humphries, No. 167. Judgement for plaintiff.

W. N. Lazenby, C. T. Shook and W. B. Slaton vs W. D. Nevells and H. C. Burk, No 172 Judgement for plaintiffs.

B. L. Shook vs Mrs. Roy Neblett and husband, Roy Neblett, J. V. Whitt, W. T. Garrett and A. J. Herrington, No. 130. Judgement for plaintiff.

The above is as far as the minutes of the court are written up as we go to press; however we can report proceedings as follows:

The Taylor murder case transferred from Lubbock to Lynn county, was dismissed by the State. The Bartley vs Robinson case went to trial, but on account of a fracas that arose between a witness and an attorney, in which the lie was passed and a heavy ink stand thrown with such force as to leave a deep dent in the wall where it struck, barely missing the witness' head and the judge who fined both parties $100 and continued the case for the term.

The case of H. C. Ferguson vs John P. Marrs et al, in which Ferguson is suing C. W. Post for $100,000 damages, the jury has been selected and the balance excused for the term. The jury is composed of the following citizens: C. E. Donaldson, I. S. Doak, Perry Clayton, J. M. Noble, W. E. Henderson, P. H. Renfro, J. A. Hutto, J. R. Evans, M. F. Balew, Ben Hobson, Joe Sanders and F. D. Young. It is thought this case will run well into next week.

SUNDAY NIGHT RAILL WILL MATURE LATE FEED CROP

Half Inch Sunday Night General
Over County—Light Shower
Wednesday Night

All of Lynn county received a fine rain Sunday night, which ranged from half an inch in some parts to an inch in others; here in Tahoka it measured .61 of an inch. Again Tuesday night it rained .14 of an inch and nearly every night this week some part of Lynn county has gotten a shower. These showers will make the late feed stuff an assured fact. Come to Lynn the county of golden opportunities.

EDITOR LIKES LYNN

H. Galbraith, editor of the daily and weekly Transcript at Terrell, made a very pleasaant call at The News office Wednesday afternoon. He wae very enthusiastic about the South Plains and especially Lynn county and Tahoka. This is Mr. Galbraith's first visit to the "Llano Estacado" or the so-called "semi arid" Starred Plains" and he was astonished at our fertile soil abundant crops and pretty towns. We are pleased to have a Central Texas editor come out here and see that we are not savages and the South Plains is no desert, especially when he is honest enough to express him self as being so favorably impressed as Mr. Galbraith did; as he put it, "We all belong to Texas and I can feel proud of every bit of it."

J. M. Moseley, of 12 miles south of Tahoka, brought in the first bale of cotton for this year Tuesday morning September 2nd and pulled down the premium of forty-one dollars and a half. His load made a 567 pound bale that sold for 135 cents per pound. Thursday morning Mr. Moseley hauled his second bale of cotton into O'Donnell and pulled down their premium of twenty-two dollars, which we venture to say is the largest first bale premium paid by any town of its size in the state this year.

Come to any part of Lynn county if you want a good home.

Don't Take The Wrong Medicine

If Your Liver Gets Lazy You Need
A Liver Tonic, Not Merely Laxative for the Bowels

Many people take a simple laxative when their liver gets sluggish rather than take calomel, which they know to be dangerous. But a mere laxative will not start a sluggish liver. What is needed is a tonic that will liven up the liver without forcing you to stay at home and lose a day from your business.

You have such a tonic in Dodson's Liver Tonic. Dodson's Liver Tonic must be all they claim for it because they guarantee it to take the place of dangerous calomel and agree to hand back the money with a smile to any person who tries Dodson's Liver Tonic and is not satisfied with the relief it gives.

Dodson's Liver Tonic is a harmless vegetable liquid with a pleasant taste, and is a prompt and reliable remedy for constipation, biliousness, sour stomach and other troubles that come from a torpid liver.

Thomas Brothers Drug Co. give it their personal guarantee and if you will ask about this guarantee you will protect yourself against imitations that are not guaranteed. Large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic is 50 cents.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Nevill, our son-in-law and daughter, who were former citizen of Tahoka, met us there, also Mr. J. D. Nevill, brother of our fellow townsman J. C. Nevill, their home is in Willis, Texas. Many other old friends from other parts of the State were there. Our hustling real estate man, C. E. Brown, dropped over from Fayette or some other coast county to join us speaking a good word for Tahoka and Lynn county, but it seems that he had a nib from somewhere in east Texas and wanted to be there when the cork was pulled under, so one fine morning he hid himself away without our knowledge or consent. Perhaps like us, his filthy lure was vanishing away like mist before the morning sun. Be that as it may, Thursday morning found us at the central depot, valise in hand watching the approach of the north bound passenger train which we boarded and were soon being whirled away on our return trip. We had a splendid view of the "other" side of our route from the car window. But we will not

Account of State Farmer's Institute

Given By W. J. Crouch in Open Letter--Some Impressions of the Country Passed Over on the Return Trip

Editor News:

Our last communication left us in College Station taking in the sight; swelterin in the semi-torrid heat of a summer day, and trying to the best of our ability to maintain the dignity that should characterize the representative of a great western county like ours. There were over two thousand members whose names were placed upon the register, besides numerous visitors whose names were never recorded. As stated in our last letter, all parts of the State were represented. The men coming from different sections of the State necessarily represent widely different ideas of farming but as the came face to face and talked over the problems of life, each found in the other elements of character which made them friends. This coming together of the farmers of our State in annual meeting develops our common interests, facilitates our commercial dealings and promotes the patriotism of the people. In the past, our farmers have been too much isolated. Communities have been segregated from each other and as a consequence the farmers has been made the victim of unscrupulous commercial methods which have fleeced him of his hard earnings. But these days are fast passing away and the time has now come when the farmer can stand up and look the world and the balance of mankind in the face and tell them to go to Halleluiah. The whimpering, whining period of the farmers childhood has passed and as an independent American citizen he is making the world sit up and take notice, and if he demands legislation in his behalf, all he has to do is to rub up against the politician and he will find a willing hand extended to stroke down his fur and give him a friendly pat upon the back. Now Mr. Editor, we are just throwing in the above thoughts, as the preacher would say, by way of parenthesis and not as a description of what we saw or heard at the famous congress, for be it said to the honor and credit of the great throng of speakers who addressed the great concourse of people there assembled, the writer never heard one discordant note or any of the cheap clap trap argument commonly used by the political demagogue of former days, for which the farming world and the balance of humanity ought to be thankful. In our rambles over the grounds we visited the Exhibits of the Experimental Stations. Over the door was placed a large Texas Star composed of varicolored farm products representing the different sections of our state. It was a creation of artistic design and beauty. Passing we spent a pleasant hour looking over the exhibits of the different stations represented there. The display of rice in all its stages of growth and burden you with a tedious recital of what we saw along the way. Fort Worth was reached at 9:30 P. M. and after a transfer to the Union depot, we decided to spend the night at the Terminal Hotel. After being "elevated", as Bill Arp would say, towards the "cerulean blue sky", we were conducted to our bed room; an electric fan was set in operation and the gentle breezes soon found us in peaceful slumbers. The rays of the morning sun were lighting up the city where the "Panther lay down", when we awoke. From our window we looked down upon the busy scene of the street below. We returned to our telephone and

"Swift" and "Armours" have become household words in almost every home. We would see the inside of the great packing plant. We ascended the huge steps, passed up the walk. A well kept lawn and beautiful flowers formed a pretty foreground to the Swift plant—the place we visited. A military looking man in brown uniform conducted us thru the packing plant. Beef and pork in all stages of its progress from the freshly slaughtered animal to the finished product were passed in our trip of inspection. Great rows of carcasses of fat beaves stretched away in the distance in one department; in another, the hides, hoofs smoking or other extras, which usually go with the easy go-lucky methods of farm work. Then we went through the curing rooms, where the finished product was receiving its last touches, preparatory for market. Everything looked so clean and neat as we passed through, and the choice breakfast bacon looked so tempting that we don't blame the "prodigal son", when he had been feeding on corn husks until his body had become lean and lank, for letting his mind go back to his father's "smoke house" in the old home, where there was plenty and to spare, but we didn't intend to feed you readers altogether on a meat diet. gave the hotel clerk the distress sign and soon an immature American citizen of African descent appeared and conducted us to the elevator. When we reached terra firma once more, our 18 carat appetite demanded something to appease a "long felt" want. After breakfast, we trolied over to North Fort Worth; walked up a broad avenue. Stock pens and horse barns spread away to our right and left. On an eminence carpeted over with bermuda grass stood the imposing structures, which have contributed so much to make Fort Worth and Texas famous the word over as the great meat market of the southwest.

and horns had been removed and the fat steaky beef was being oceled in storage rooms. Then came the hogs. Great greasy looking porkers were being conveyed along a track beside a table. One stroke of a cleaver in the hands of an expert sexered the head from the body, a dexterious movement of the next man with a long knife seperated the sides, another fellow with one stroke of his clever severed the shoulder, another the ham. The several parts being conveyed to lower rooms through slutes. Everything was working with the precision of clockwork. Each man had his part to perform, there was no talking or cigarette here we are at the Union depot, the train is moving out; farms, towns and wayside scenenes are being left in our rear, as we glide on toward the land of the setting sun, climbing higher with each mile of our journey. Sweetwater, the "lay-over" town for the plains traveler, is a good place to spend the night but you have to rise betimes the next morn if you would ride on the northbound Santa Fe, which carries you

STOMACH TROUBLE FOR FIVE YEARS

Majority of Friends Thought Mr. Hughes Would Die, But One Helped Him to Recovery.

Pomeroyton, Ky.—In interesting advice from this place, Mr. A. J. Hughes writes as follows: "I was down with stomach trouble for five (5) years, and would have sick headache so bad, at times, that I thought surely I would die.

I tried different treatments, but they did not seem to do me any good.

I got so bad, I could not eat or sleep, and all my friends, except one, thought I would die. He advised me to try Theford's Black-Draught, and quit taking other medicines. I decided to take his advice, although I did not have any confidence in it.

I have now been taking Black-Draught for three months, and it has cured me—haven't had those awful sick headaches since I began using it.

I am so thankful for what Black-Draught has done for me."

Theford's Black-Draught has been found a very valuable medicine for derangements of the stomach and liver. It is composed of pure, vegetable herbs, contains no dangerous ingredients, and acts gently, yet surely. It can be freely used by young and old, and should be kept in every family chest.

ONE THING IN THE WAY

Result of First Production of the Grand Drama of "A Modern Lear."

BY GERTRUDE MARY SHERIDAN.

Only one thing stood in the way of Myra Trescott and Robert Hill getting married. This was Myra's promise to her dead mother that she would never leave her Uncle Gilbert, until he had some one else to take good care of him. He needed care, poor fellow, for he was a dreamer and a confirmed bachelor. There was no lack of money, fortunately for him—having no trade or profession, and set in the one notion that some day he would become a great dramatist. He gained neither income nor fame from his efforts, however, and had depended on his poetry and stories for a living, Hampton Hall would have gone bare.

Myra was his sheet anchor, his busy little housekeeper and consoler. It was nearly a year now that she had been engaged to Robert Hill. Her fiancé was in business in a distant city, could not very well give it up, and Mr. Trescott would not consent to leave the roomy, magnificent old family mansion. Robert could not come and live there, so he and Myra just loved and waited.

Every January, about the middle of the month, when Robert got his business affairs in order, he went down to Hampton and was Mr. Trescott's guest and Myra's delight for several days. Myra was now brisk and cheerful as a cricket getting ready for his regular pilgrimage. The biggest snowstorm of the winter had set in, and Hampton Hall was isolated from traversed roadways. Myra, however, was not afraid that her staunch lover would not burrow through drifts mountain high for the pleasure of being with his lady love.

Uncle Gilbert was in one of his dark moods that day. He had received back for the eighth or ninth time his manuscript of "A Modern Lear." So far no actor would tackle its star character, no manager invest the capital to exploit a new and untried dramatic author. Myra tried to encourage him, but her efforts were vain.

"My market evidently lies abroad," declared her uncle. "They don't appreciate the classical in this country. I think we'll take a trip to Europe."

He Suggested the Tragedian.

"And not see Robert for months and months!" mused Myra, dimly.

The last train brought Robert Hill to Hampton late that afternoon. When he alighted at the little station and viewed Hampton Hall in the far distance, he wondered how he would ever reach it. He entered the station, to have his mind temporarily distracted. It was warm and comfortable, and in a great hubbub. Robert stared, rather puzzled at first, at the mixed group moving about, at the great heap of boxes, satchels and trunks in the middle of the floor.

The leader of the ten odd people was a long-haired, massive-browed gentleman with a strut and a deep, husky voice. He suggested the tragedian, and was announcing in sepulchral tones:

"Hark, ye, I have explored; the only house in sight has four rooms and eight children. There is but one whole ham in the settlement."

"There's two now," observed Miss Gloriana Montmorenci, leading lady, cuttingly.

"No train south, perhaps, for days. Why did we cross the country in the hopes of getting to the city by a short cut?" demanded the tragedian, dismally.

"Because the constable was after our precious traps," replied a portly boy-faced companion, fussy and important acting, and evidently the manager.

One by one Robert picked out the various members of a dramatic company, and he soon knew their history.

"It's affected!" he heard a tall, willowy, horrified lady observe, whom he later knew to be "the old woman" of the company. "What are we ever going to do here to eat and sleep?"

"Zounds! but the prospect is a bleak one," replied the manager bluntly. "Cold, little one?"

"Little one" was a sweet, patient-faced girl, who seemed ever shadowed by the lofty superiority of the leading lady. Her winsome ways attracted Robert. She did not look as though used to the rigors of the checkered career common to her older companions.

Robert was interested in studying the queer group of humanity for some time. He pretty well comprehended their forlorn, stranded situation, and felt sincerely sorry for them. Then a sleigh came plowing through the drifts, and he was driven to Hampton Hall.

It was strange how things came about, but it seemed that in canvassing the district for food and a harborage, Mr. Harold Montague, the tragedian, applied at Hampton Hall. In all respects Mr. Trescott was hospitable. Especially did he have a sneaking fondness for actors. To the delight of the stranded troupe the doors of the great comfortable hall were thrown open to them, baggage and all, and that night the snowstorm so increased that it looked as though they were banked in for a week to come.

As said, Uncle Gilbert was in one of his dark moods. He kept pretty close to his own apartments. Myra, however, was delighted to hustle about and make her "children of the soul" guests happy. She came to her lover the next morning with eyes dancing, and her pretty face all a-flush with eager excitement.

"Oh, Robert!" she cried, "I have such a brilliant idea—listen."

"All day long," declared Robert with ardor, "with those pretty lips of yours so close to my willing ear. Zounds! as our tragedian friend observes," he added, "splendid!"

Whatever was "splendid," it was kept a closely guarded secret from Uncle Gilbert until the next evening. Then, wondering what capricious fancy Myra was exploiting now, he was led to the roomy billiard room of the hall.

It was all ablaze with light. At one end was a stage. Before it was a string orchestra of four pieces. A neatly written program was furnished Uncle Gilbert. It read: "First production of the great drama of 'A Modern Lear,' by Gilbert Trescott, Esq."

and the cast, with real actors, followed.

If ever there was a man suffused in a glow of perfect happiness, it was the astonished and delighted author. The actors, in warm-hearted gratitude for their royal entertainment, learned their best. On short notice they had learned their parts. Montague was in his element, Miss Montmorenci crushingly grand, and the "little one," Gladys Mercer, with a sweet, modest but striking part, played the same so pathetically that even the author was melted to tears.

"Who could help feel and act these beautiful sentiments of yours, Mr. Trescott," said Gladys, when she was thanked and complimented by Uncle Gilbert. "Oh, your play will some day be a grand success."

Uncle Gilbert was no longer in the dumps. Roused into hopefulness and enthusiasm, he made friends and boon companions of his strange guests.

Miss Montmorenci made a great effort to capture him, but Gladys clearly was his favorite. Her father had been a noted actor, and she taught him more about the practical drama in two days than he had acquired theoretically in twenty years.

"Well, Robert, they have gone," said Myra four days later, "but one of them is coming back in a month."

"You mean Gladys?"

"Yes, Robert. There is to be a wedding, and Uncle Gilbert at last has some one to take care of him."

There was a double wedding at Hampton Hall, and the long engagement of Myra and Robert was at a happy end at last.

Panhandle State Fair at Amarillo

Some of the Attractions to Be Seen At This First Annual Gathering of the Clans—Worthy of Your Consideration

Now that the great Panhandle State Fair, to be held at Amarillo, October 6th to 11th, is only a matter of about five weeks off, all kinds of questions regarding the extent of the Fair, the grounds, the exhibits, attractions, etc., are being asked.

The Publicity Committee of the Amarillo Chamber of Commerce announces that the grounds will cover approximately 50 acres; the first stock barns for race horses erected measured 152x84 feet, but the demand for space is so great that this will probably be doubled; the main Exhibition Hall is 90 feet square, with 72 booths; a grandstand with a seating capacity of several thousand is under construction, underneath which free space for county exhibits will be provided; the present Glenwood Park Auditorium will be equipped as a rest room for women and children, and a Restaurant building for the accommodation of guests is underway; cattle sheds 24x260 are under construction, and it is figured that this space may be doubled. The automobile display will be arranged in a unique circle around the merry-go-round. The figure eight and some other amusement features are already ready.

Work on the half-mile race track has been going on for weeks, and is even now in first class condition. Entries are piling in, and liberal premiums are offered.

Among the attractions will be aeroplane flights on October 7th, 8th and 9th by the famous Young Aeroplane Co., of Kansas City, guaranteed to fly in any kind of weather short of a cyclone.

The Fair Committee has closed a contract with Prof. R. S. Riggs' Boy Band, of Canadian, Texas, numbering 25 well trained and uniformed youths, to furnish music on the grounds.

SHE WAS IN A HURRY

By ANNA LEVY.

"I'm in a big hurry today," declared the girl as she settled back in the dentist's chair. "It's now ten o'clock, and I simply must leave here by 11! You'll hurry, won't you?"

"All right," said the dentist. "We can get a lot done by 11. Let's see, it was this back tooth we were working on. Has it been bothering you this week?" He paused, the small mirror held near her mouth.

"Oh, just a minute!" The girl squirmed sideways and settled herself again. "Yes, it's been bothering me a lot. I've hardly been able to eat a thing. I can just feel that the sharp little wire thing you've got there is going right into the very nerve. Why don't you know just where the nerve is, and try to keep as far from it as possible?" She pressed her lips tight together and frowned at the offending instrument.

"We won't hurt it. It isn't the nerve—it's just sensitive dentine that bothers you. But we'll fix that up with a little of this stuff." He put down the instruments and reached for a bottle.

"Oh, it burns like everything!" The girl sat bolt upright, pushing her hand away, and reached for the water glass.

"Now, if you go and wash it all away I can't promise a sure cure, you know," remonstrated the dentist.

"Well, I don't know that being burned to death is preferable to sensitive dentine, anyway," replied the girl, calmly drinking the water before once more settling comfortably back in the chair. "Now, you'd better hurry, it's a quarter after already," she said, accusingly, glancing at the clock.

"Open your mouth wide." He reached for the probe again. "Oh! Oh! I knew it—you always do it!" The girl sat up to brush away a tear with the corner of the towel and accidentally dropped the towel on the floor. "No, you can't touch it for a minute. Wait until it stops aching, can't you?" She clung frantically to the clean towel he handed her, and glared at him.

"Oh, why on earth do we have teeth, anyway? They're always full of holes, and it's a choice between toothache and a dentist's murdering hands—and I don't know which I prefer!"

"I'll tell you," said the dentist, banteringly. "I'll give you gas and we'll pull them all out in a jiffy, and then you can have nice white false ones—and never any more trouble!"

"Well, go on!" She sat back resignedly.

"I've simply got to keep that 11 o'clock engagement! Oh, for pity's sake, are you going to drill again? Why, you drilled my very head off last week, and you said you'd be able to fill the tooth this time! That isn't fair! Why can't you be honest? You know I hate that driller—it makes my blood run cold, and I dream of it every night, and you promised you'd do all you could by hand!"

"Oh! Oh! You drilled into the very place you put that probe! Couldn't you see the hole and keep out of it? Oh, it aches so!" She sat

S. D. Singleton who was reported sick the first of the week, was able to come to town the middle of the week.

"Why Do We Have Teeth?"

up and held the towel to her cheek disconsolately. "Do you know," she began again, "every dentist I've ever had I simply hate! I can't help it—they were all so brutal, so inhuman! They don't care at all what they do to one, just so they get through. You'd think they'd be gentle—they see so much suffering; but they just grow caloused! How do dentists keep their own teeth all right? I'll bet there's something one can use to prevent decay, but dentists conceal it from the public." "Come on, now," said the dentist. I won't hurt you. I'll be just as gentle as possible." He was waiting. His instruments poised. "Oh, I wish you'd hurry and finish my whole mouth, so I'd be through. I hate the sight of this building—and the smell of disinfectants sends a cold chill over me!" "All right. Open your mouth and I'll see how much I can finish." He began again to drill, carefully—slowly. Suddenly she sat up, pushing away his hands. "Oh, there it's 11 o'clock! And nothing accomplished!" She scrambled out of the chair. "I told you I was in a hurry, and you haven't done one thing!" She glared at him as she pinned on her hat.—Chicago Daily News.

Japanese Like Other Babies.

There is a mistaken but popular belief that a Japanese baby never cries. There is really no reason why he should. Replete with nourishment and rarely denied a wish, he blossoms like a wild rose on the sunny side of the hedges, so sweet and so unrestrained.

His life is full of rich and varied interests. From his second day on earth, tied safely to his mother's back under an overcoat made for two, he finds amusement for every waking hour in watching the passing show. He is the honored guest at every family picnic. No matter what the hour or the weather, he is the active member in all that concerns the household amusements or work.

From his perch he participates in the life of the neighborhood, and is a part of all the merry festivals, that turn the streets into fairyland. Later, his playground is the gay market place or the dim old temples.—Francis Little, in the Century Magazine.
