Select Your Cotton Seed Now for 1913

The average farmer picks his cotton as it opens, gins it, sells lint and seed, and then about the last of the season, hauls home seed enough for next years planting. In this way he saves the latest and the poorest seed. If, when the cotton begins to open, the farmer, with as much intelligent help as the crop will warrant, would go through the field and select the early big bolls that are grown on short-jointed, vigorous, well-formed stalks, until he has saved enough to furnish seed for next years planting, and would have this seed ginned to itself, and carefully store it where it would not heat, it is safe to say that the next season's crop would ripen ten or fifteen days earlier than the average of this year's crop, and that the yield would be practically doubled.

It would be just as reasonable to shake down the apples promiscuously from a tree and take them to the Fair, hoping to win a premium in competition with a man who had selected only the choicest specimens, or to turn all your stock loose to breed indiscriminately, instead of forcing the survival of the fittest by the most rigid selection, and expect to improve your stock, as it is to plant seed of any kind without selecting with the greatest care the most vigorous and best, and hope for good results.

It is fair to say that ten per cent of the cotton seed selected as above suggested, is infinitely superior to the other ninety per cent, therefore, if you

Every cotton grower, from the man who raises one bale to the man who raises one hundred bales, can very greatly increase his yield and his profits by this inexpensive method.

This is something that you can do in your own field; try it.

New Bounty Law

Austin, Tex., Aug. 12--That the people generally, and especially the sheep and stock raisers in the Western part of Texas are deeply interested in the act passed by the regular session of the 32nd legislature providing for the destruction of wolves and other wild animals which becomes effective on September 1 1912 is manifested by the number of inquiries regarding the measure that are daily being received by the game fish and oyster department here. Chief game warden Jeff D. Cox says hardly a day passes without an inquiry or two being received, despite the fact that this department has nothing whatever to do with the enforcement of the law.

This law carries an appropriation of $100,000 which shall become available on the first of next month. The purpose of this law is to protect the stock raisers, farmers and horticulturists from such wild animals as the coyote, lobo or other wolf, panther, Mexican lion, tiger, leopard and wild cat, and a bounty is paid for each of these wild animals killed. The bounty is $5 each for the above animals with the exception of the wildcat, for which a bounty of only $1 is paid.

There are thousands of wild animals in the western section of Texas and the loss to stock raisers through the depredations of these animals runs considerably over $1,000,000 a year. State Senator Claude Hudspeth, of El Paso, was one of the strongest advocates of this measure when it came up for consideration in the legislature, and the governor would have vetoed the act had not an agreement been reached that it would not become

HIGH COST OF POLITICS

According to their sworn statements, candidates for public offices has spent enough money during the recent campaign to burn up a wet mule and the time wasted in making foot prints in the political sands could have built a macadam highway from the Red River to the Gulf. Many of the defeated candidates too proud to weep and too polite to swear have decided that the grapes are sour and are smiling on their successful opponents who for the next two years will have to work hard and be paid harder.

Some of the candidates tried to frighten away the political collectors by putting on the robes of poverty, but like the ship wrecked woman who put on black stockings in order to scare away sharks, they were crunched in the jaws of destruction.

The high cost of politics is keeping pace with the high cost of living and very few items can be charged to the tariff.

WORK ON THE ROADS

About 300 men are now at work on the county roads and an additional number will be employed from time to time as the need arises.

About three miles of the work is being carried forward on the Gail road and here in the neighborhood of 150 men are employed. When the work progresses far enough the task of graveling this stretch will be undertaken. Another force has been put to work on the Lamesa road at a point two or three miles from town.

In addition to these, four other roads are being worked, the funds for this work coming from the regular road fund. On the Stanton road a crew is at work near the county line; another force is at work on the road near J. W. Neil's place; a road working crew is now busy near Elbow; and Thursday road machinery was sent to Vincent so that work can be started immediately.

With all this road building in progress employment is given to many men.--Big Springs Herald.

Wm. M. Moore, of Morgan community, accompanied by his sister, Mrs. M. A. Wells, of Mingus, Texas, was a Tahoka visitor Wednesday. Mr. Moore and his sister made a pleasant call at The News office. Mrs. Wells said that reading The News was mainly what influenced her to visit the Plains. Mr. Moore reported a hard rain and wind storm in their neighborhood Tuesday. The wind blew down Mrs. Beulah Shaw's sheds and Walter Robison's largest plum tree.

O. B. Shook, the north side barber, returned Sunday from a weeks trip to Plainview N. M. He was accompanied by C. H. Martin and Herman Porter. The party started for Lakewood, N. M., on the Pecos Valley railroad, but the found so much mud after they crossed the state line that they went no farther than Plainview.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Donaldson, of 10 miles south of tahoka, attended preaching services at the Association Sunday morning and took dinner with H. C. Crie and family.

L. L. Forrester, of Terry county, was a Tahoka visitor Wednesday.

Uncle Jim Little, of Plainview, was in attendance at the Primitive Baptist Association last week. While here he renewed his subscription to the News.

Primitive Baptist Association Meets

The Primitive Baptist West Texas Association which met with the Littlelock church in Tahoka, beginning Thursday night of last week, closed Sunday night, and was one of the largest camp meetings ever held here. There were over 50 wagon loads of campers here at one during this meeting. It is estimated that fully 300 out-of-the-county visitor in attendance, coming from all over West Texas, and a few from Oklahoma and California.

Eleven preachers were present as follows: The pastor, J. L. Hicks, Gaines County; I. N. Lewis and R. P. Littlepage, Tahoka; A. P. Koen, Hamilton, Texas; W. H. Richards, Haskell, Texas; A. P. Johnson, Tulia, Texas; W. J. Higgins, and L. N. Barrow, Floydada, Texas; Lewis McCarty, Afton Texas; J. C. Lewis, Terry county Texas; and A. V. Atkins, Los Angeles, California.

The West Texas Association is composed of nine or ten churches and takes in the Plains of Texas and one church in Oklahoma, and while it covers a large territory, it is one of the small ones in number of members, some of the association meetings number the and four thousand attendants.

The Littlelock church in Tahoka was organized three years ago with four members and now numbers something over sixty, fifteen new members being added during this meeting.

A large canvas covered arbor was constructed on the public square, and at the public dining shed was fed free, and many availed themselves of the privilege.

All through the meeting the very best of order and attention was had and everyone seemed to be well pleased with the entire occasion. It was estimated that the attendance Sunday was over six hundred.

Tent Meeting

The Methodists of Tahoka will begin a protracted meeting the second Sunday in September, which will be conducted by Rev. J. L. Speers, of Winters, Texas. The meeting will be held in a large tent which has been secured for the occasion. Bro. Speers has the reputation of being a good plain religious preacher, one of the old fashioned Methodists who use the Bible only, in his life and work. Make your preparations now so you can attend every service.

DAD JOINS IN.

The daughters of the household, ardent suffragists, were talking politics. "Taft will sweep the country," declared Mabel. "Wilson will sweep the country," asserted Maud. "Roosevelt will sweep the country," averred Margaret. At this point dad took a hand. "Never mind about who's going to sweep the country," said he. "Who's going to sweep this here kitchen? That's the question now."

HINTS TO BUSINESS BUILDERS

Let optimism prevail through your advertising.

If you have a good thing push it along. Advertise it.

Advertising is as much a stimulant to business as food is to the body.

Printer's Ink, when properly used, is the staff of life to any business.

An ad to attract the feminine eye must state the name of the article and the price.

A short catchy ad will be read by more people than a long conglomeration of words.

For a heart-to-heart talk with the people of your community, try the columns of your local paper.

Don't advertise an inferior article. Better results will be gained by not even handling goods of this nature.

By occupying the same space in the paper each issue you impress upon the public that you mean business and are there to stay.

The weak spot in some advertising usually lies in the fact that you are not consistent in keeping your business before the buying public. Keep a-poning at the public right, and that you have confidence in the quality.

In listing prices on goods a $1.98 mark will have more effect than a $2.00 mark, because everyone nowadays is seeking to save the odd pennies.

When a duck lays an egg, she gets up and waddles off, a hen advertises with her cackle. That's the reason there are more chickens than ducks in the world.

BELONGING TO THE CHURCH

To what church do you, "belong?" This question will be answered, "I belong to the Baptist, Methodist, Christian, Lutheran, or Presbyterian church, as the case may be. The truth is, very few of us "belong" to the church. We give neither our time, thought, money nor even, in many cases our presence. It sound ridiculous to hear a man or woman say "I belong to the church," when they never or seldom, attend its worship, give very little to its support, take no interest in Sunday School, give the smallestittance of their time to it. It is a mistake. Such a lobby member don't "belong" to the church or Sunday School at all. They belong to themselves. They are serving themselves with all their might. They "belong" to the one whom they serve. "Him to whom you ye give yourselves, servants to obey, his servants ye are." Don't say you "belong" to the church—Ex.

Ribs Radiate From Circular Disk Sheet Metal Acting as Centerpiece—Will Last Long.

A kite frame which eliminates the lopsidedness that spoils the flight of many kites has been patented by Wisconsin man. A circular disk sheet metal acts as a centerpiece.

Substantial Kite Frame.

Around the edge of this are eye loops, and in the middle is a circle of sockets in line with the loops. Half a dozen sticks, all the same length, form the ribs of the kite which is made by thrusting one end of the sticks through the loops into the sockets. This gives a frame with every rib of exactly the same length and guarantees regular even flying for the kite. The kite can be covered with either manila paper and is so substantially made that it will outlast many covers even if they be of the stoutest materials.

Home-Made Black Ink.

If you want a deep-black ink that will hold its color and will not unexpectedly separate into its ingredients, follow the directions, which are:

Mix one ounce tannic acid, one ounce drachm pyrogallic acid, one ounce lactate of iron, one ounce sulphate of iron, one-half drachm pyroctannic acid, one ounce tartaric acid and six pints warm water; shake the mixture well to dissolve, and then set aside for a few days, giving it an occasional shaking. Then strain the mixture through cotton wool and add one and one-half ounces of fresh mucilage. You will find the ink will run smoothly, and a deep black and will copy easily.

Efficacious.

Every expert photographer knows a trick or two of his own. So a boy discovered after taking her first year-old daughter to have her picture taken.

The child couldn't be made to smile. The artist was as patient as possible, and tried every possible way to keep the little wiggler quiet. At last he said to the despairing mother, "Madam, if you will leave the child alone with me a few minutes, I think I can succeed."

The mother had scarcely been drawn when she was summoned by the triumphant photographer. He exhibited a satisfactory picture. When they reached home the mother asked: "Nellie, what did the man do to you when I left you alone with him?" "He said," lisped Nellie, "thill, you litte rathcall, or I'll hit you."—Youth's Companion.

Text as He Remembered It. Little five-year-old Harry accompanied his father to church one morning, and the minister pronounced from the text, "Tis I, be not afraid when returning home his father asked: "What was the text that you were reading, Harry?" "The little fellow thought for a moment, then answered: "It's me, I got scared."

Uses 1/2 Less Coal
The best Baker ever built
Built like a locomotive boiler
Riveted, not bolted together. No stove putty
Easy to keep clean. Saves work and money

ARGADIAN

AMERICA'S BEST RANGE

The Arcadian is a perfect baking range, and stays a perfect baker for a lifetime because it is built like a locomotive boiler. Built of malleable iron and charcoal iron riveted together instead of being bolted together. Made airtight without the use of stove putty to crumble and fall out, as happens in cast iron and so-called steel ranges, allowing false drafts to fan the fire or deaden it.

The Arcadian Range will never have false drafts—it will always do perfect baking, using a third less fuel than common ranges.

Never need to use blackening—a rub with an oiled cloth makes it appear like new. It pays for itself over and over in the fuel it saves, and in no way makes a woman's work easier and allows her to do perfect baking.

THE ARGADIAN IS SOLD BY US.
We invite you to call as we wish to demonstrate the value of this range to you.

HARDTACK IN THE NAVY.

For some years hardtack has been pretty much cut out in the navy, although it makes a fine ration for hard work and active service. Several tons have been shipped down toward Cuba. Canned beans are good to stick to a marine's ribs and to keep out the bullets, so a few gross of cases of them have been rushed on to take the place of the little old-time navy beans which have to be cooked some hours to get them soft and well done. Canned beans are pretty good for marching.—New York Press.

CAUGHT NAPPING.

Mr. Bacon—What did you think of that hat Miss Style wore to church this morning?

Mr. Bacon—I didn't notice Miss Style's hat.

"It's funny you didn't see it. She saw directly in front of you."

"Well, suppose she did. Do you suppose I go to church to look at women's hats?"

"Well dear, it's the same hat Miss Style wore to the theater night before last, and which you claimed obstructed your view of the stage."

MONEY FOR ESPIONAGE.

The amount spent on secret service by European governments last year was as follows: Austria-Hungary, £62,500; France, £40,000; Germany, £58,266; Great Britain, £50,000; Italy, £120,800. Russia spent £380,000 in 1910 "under direct order of the emperor," and for the present year appropriated £335,000 for miscellaneous police expenditure "not subject to publication."

CALOMEL MUST HURT YOUR LIVER

Every Time You Take This Powerful Drug You Are in Danger. Take Dodson's Liver-Tone Instead

Calomel is made from mercury, and while mercury has many uses, it is a dangerous thing to swallow. If calomel stays in the system long it salivates. Even when it works naturally, its after-effects are often bad. McGill's Drug Store has a liver medicine called Dodson's Liver-Tone which is positively guaranteed to take the place of calomel. It stimulates the liver just enough to start it working, and does not make you sicker than ever—as calomel does. Dodson's Liver-Tone wont force you to stop eating or working after you take it. It is as beneficial for children as for adults.

Try a bottle today under McGill's guarantee. You know this store is reliable.

HAS CHANGED MANY TIMES

Vicissitudes of the Silver Dollar During the Many Years That It Has Been Coined.

The silver dollar has undergone many changes since it was put in circulation in 1794. On the face of the first dollar there was stamped the head of a young woman, turned to right and with her hair flowing as if she was in a gale of wind; but, in 1796, congress came to her relief and ordered her hair to be tied up with a bit of ribbon. The 15 stars, which appeared on the first dollar, were after this reduced to the original 13, in recognition of the number of states. In 1836 the design was again changed and the dollar bore the figure of a woman dressed in a flowing garment. The designer forgot, however, to put in the 13 stars, and the coin was discarded, the new design having the woman surrounded by stars. Her hair was defiant and stiff looking, and in 1838 dollars were issued which were more artistic in treatment. The first dollars bearing the motto "In God We Trust" were coined in April, 1864, and in 1873 the era of the trade dollar began, lasting just five years. The liberty dollar made its appearance in 1878. Miss Anne W. Williams, public school teacher of Philadelphia, sat for the portrait.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis.

CHAPTER II—Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life.

CHAPTER III—A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Postoffice Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case.

CHAPTER IV—Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery.

CHAPTER V—Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address, "Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J." Kent goes to Ardway to investigate and becomes suspicious of a "Henry Cook."

CHAPTER VI—A woman commits suicide at the Ardway Hotel. A yellow letter also figures in this case.

CHAPTER VII—Kent calls Louise on the long distance telephone and finds that she had just been called by Crandall from the same booth. "Cook" disappears. The Ardway postmaster is missing.

CHAPTER VIII—Inspector Davis arrives at Ardway and takes up the investigation. He discovers that the dead woman is Sarah Sackett of Bridgeport. Louise telephones Kent imploring him to drop the investigation.

CHAPTER IX—Kent returns to New York to get an explanation from Louise. He finds the body of a woman in Central Park and more yellow letters. He sees Crandall, whom he recognizes as "Cook," enter the Farrish home.

CHAPTER X—Louise comes to Kent to drop the investigation and refuses to give any explanation. Later Kent sees Crandall and Louise in an automobile.

CHAPTER XI—Kent returns to Ardway. He is announced that he has planned to arrest the missing postmaster and also the master criminal.

CHAPTER XII—While seeking the criminals, Kent comes across Louise and Crandall. Pursued by Davis the postmaster jumps off a precipice and is killed. Cook Young, the master criminal, is found in a hut in a morphine stupor.

Crandall answered, while I knelt there caressing Louise's hair and whispering softly to her.

"How about you?" asked Davis. "He didn't hit me," Crandall answered with a short laugh. "I tumbled over the bucket of milk he was carrying and dropped when he saw me. Didn't you get him?"

"He's safe," answered the inspector.

"A Flesh Wound, Not at All Dangerous," Crandall Answered.

"He ran plump over the edge of a precipice in the dark. We heard the thud of his body on the rocks below. He must have been instantly killed. We'll get the body in the morning. He must have fallen two hundred feet."

"A good two hundred," the constable added as Davis turned to peer in the window of the hut.

"And inside there," said the inspector after a minute's survey of the interior, "is the other one, the master criminal—safe enough for the present."

"Why," said the constable, who had followed the inspector's example in looking through the window, "why, that's Aleck Young."

CHAPTER XIII.

The Strange Vigil.

Dawn found Inspector Davis and me keeping strange vigil in the deserted cottage. Louise was gone. Crandall was gone. Constable Dodds was gone. Only the two of us were there, and on a rude couch in the corner, inert, unconscious with the death-like stupor of the confirmed user of morphine, lay the wreck of a man whom Davis had termed the master criminal.

On the inspector's return from his pursuit of the postmaster he had at once assumed the position of director-general of the little group at the cottage. He had decreed that Crandall should take Louise back to town in the automobile as soon as she was able to travel.

"After she has had an hour's rest here," he said authoritatively, "her nerves will have recovered sufficiently. It is important that the wound in her arm should be dressed as quickly as possible. It will be well, too, for her to return as speedily as possible to her father and sister. Her continued absence, if it reaches their ears, will needlessly alarm them both. You, Mr. Crandall, will take her back in the machine in which you came, of course."

"Certainly," said Crandall—overeagerly, I thought—"but, if you will pardon me for asking, who are you?"

For reply Davis handed him his card which bore his official title.

"I'm here," said the inspector, "I fancy on the same mission that brought both you and Kent here—to find the sender of the yellow letters that have been menacing the peace and happiness of the house of Farrish."

"But," protested Crandall again, "how did you know it was Aleck Young?"

"So you know him?" said the inspector, with a note of inquiry in his voice.

I had been taking no part in the conversation that was carried on. I was sitting with Louise's head pillowed on my knee endeavoring with my handkerchief to staunch the slight flow of blood that was still coming from the bullet wound. I had been strongly tempted to voice a protest, when I heard Davis arrange for Louise's return in the automobile with Crandall, for while Davis seemed to think he, like ourselves, had been in pursuit of the criminals, I still believed it was for the purpose of warning them instead of capturing them. Yet, on the other hand, I knew nothing about running a car. It was clearly out of the question for me to take Louise back, much as I distrusted Crandall. Anxiously I waited for his confession of acquaintance with the man in the hut.

"Yes, I knew him—only too well," said Crandall.

"Tell me about him," said the inspector. "But wait—let us carry Miss Farrish inside the cottage where she will be sheltered from the night air until you are ready to start."

"I can walk," said Louise. "In fact, I think I was more frightened than hurt."

I helped her to her feet and assisted her into the cottage, while I piled some cushions that were lying about and made her comfortable. The noise of our entrance made no impression on the drug-stupefied man who lay on the other side of the room, but Davis and Crandall crossed to where he lay and examined him closely.

"He will not wake for several hours," said Davis after feeling his pulse. "Kent and I will stay here until then. You, Mr. Crandall, will take Miss Farrish home, and you, Dodds, as soon as it's daylight, had better go look for Rouser's body."

"I don't have to look for it," said the constable with a shudder. "I know just where it is. It's a long way round by the road, though."

"Take the buckboard," said Davis, "and when you reach the body go through all the pockets carefully and bring me everything you find. You'd better not take the body back to Ardway yet. Is there some place else you can take it?"

"Sure," said Dobbs, "I can take it over to Millervale. It's just about as far in the other direction. But what in the land's sake I'll tell about it, gets me."

"That's easy," said the inspector. "You can explain that you were driving over there and as you came by you saw the body lying on the road. You can explain that he must have fallen over the cliff in the dark. By the time they get through talking about it and having an inquest over in Millervale we will have had a chance to finish any more investigating we want to do. You can start about dawn."

"All right," said the constable, "but what will I do with them warrants?"

"Leave them with me. After you have disposed of Rouser's body you can stop on your way back and we'll take this one in with us. Come on outside, Dodds, and you, too, Crandall, I want to ask you some questions about our friend over there. You, Kent, stay here with Miss Farrish."

The three of them went out, leaving Louise and me alone together, a circumstance that I couldn't doubt that Davis had planned, realizing that there was much we would say to each other. Hardly were they out of the door before Louise turned to me, with suppliant arms, and cried out, with a sob in her voice: "Harding, forgive me for having deceived you."

"It is you," I cried, "you, who must forgive me for having disobeyed your wish, for having come out here after you had asked me not to, for having almost put a bullet through your dear heart."

"You didn't know—you couldn't know that I was here," she sobbed. "But how can you ever pardon the lies I told you?"

"Lies," I protested. "Dear girl, you never lied to me. Whatever these dear lips have said, I knew, I always knew your heart was true."

"Katharine asked it and I had to promise her."

"You mean about Hugh Crandall?"

"Yes," she breathed. "I don't know yet what it is that is between them."

"I understand you. Whatever it is, they determined to keep it secret between them. Katharine made me promise that I would tell no one, not even you. She swore me not to reveal to anyone that I had even seen Hugh Crandall. I had to promise her, you understand, don't you?"

My answer was a kiss full on her lips, while my arms went about her and held her tight to me.

"Of course, dear girl," I breathed, "I understand. I understood all the while."

"I was so afraid," she murmured, "afraid you would think I was deceiving you, that I didn't love you."

As our lips met in a long, sweet kiss, a wave of joy swept over me that all but obliterated thoughts of the dreadful yellow letter. I forgot for the moment the drug-sodden creature lying in the corner, not twenty feet away from us. I knew but one thing. Louise loved me. What mattered anything? In the rhapsody that only those who have loved can understand, we held each other in close embrace in a delightful silence—it may have been for one minute—it may have been for ten or twenty. Time for either of us had lost its power. We were the world, just we ourselves.

"Lies," I protested. "Dear Girl, You Never Lied to Me."

The spell was broken by a slight twitching of the man across the room. We came to ourselves with a start as from a dream. I went over to his side and looked at him. He was still dead to all around him.

"You understand, Harding, dear, don't you?" said Louise, as I resumed my place beside her, "why I asked you to drop your search? As soon as Katharine became conscious and I told her that you were on the trail of the yellow letter, she became greatly excited. She insisted that I should make you withdraw at once. She was determined to know all about what you had done, and I told her of your being here in Ardway. She, weak and ill as she was, made me swear that I would recall you by telephone. She wanted me to telephone to Hugh Crandall, too, but I did not know how to reach him. I had to promise her everything she asked."

"Of course you did," I said. "But, dear, I loved you so that I could not rest while this terrible mystery that hung over your dear ones was unsolved. I felt that it was my duty to disregard your wish. I realized that you were being compelled by some influence you could not withstand to act as you did. You are not angry with me, are you, dearest?"

"Of course I'm not," she said with a wan smile, patting my hand gently.

"But tell me," I asked, "what of Hugh Crandall? What is his connection with this dreadful mystery?"

"I don't know," she answered thoughtfully.

"I have thought all along that he had something to do with it, and you saw just now that he admitted knowing this man here whom the inspector insists is at the root of everything."

"Katharine trusts him, yet I know my father for some reason forbade him the house."

"I'm sure he is gally," I cried. "Katharine's eyes have been blinded by love to his real character."

"I think you must be mistaken," said Louise. "He knows about the existence of a paper that gave some man a strange hold on my father. Katharine knew of it, too. He may have told her. She insisted on my accompanying him out here to try to help recover it."

"Didn't he tell you about it on the way out?"

"No. I asked him what it was. He about it the more perplexed. He about the mysterious manner in which both he and Katharine acted about this document."

"Tell me everything," I insisted, all my suspicion against Crandall returning anew.

"To begin with, he insisted on our leaving the cottage in New York, though it was the more perplexed. He would not hear of it. Katharine put you in my charge," he said, "and it is her wish as well as my own that we take every precaution for secrecy. It is better that only you and I go on this mission. We want no servant gossiping about this matter. 'But where are we going, and why?' I asked him. 'Surely I have a right to know that.' 'We are going to try to recover from the hands of the wickedest blackguard on earth a certain document that has come into his possession. It is a question whether or not we shall succeed. If we do, I shall put this document in your hands and you must promise that it shall not go out of your possession until you have placed it in your sister's hands. You must promise me, too, that you will ask no questions about it and that you will not read it. When Katharine has seen it, do with it whatever she tells you. She probably will say that you are to burn it without reading.'

"Can't you see, Harding, what a dilemma I was in? I felt that what Mr. Crandall asked me to do was Katharine's wish. They had talked together for nearly half an hour just before you came to the house. I had to promise what he asked, though I protested first. It seemed to me that carrying back the document to Katharine would excite her and retard her recovery, and I told him so."

"The sight of that document safe in her own hands will do more to cure her speedily than all the doctors in the world," he answered.

"Did he mean the yellow letter?" I queried.

"I don't know. I asked him if that was what he meant and he would not answer me. The only thing he did tell me was that there had been strange developments in the case since he had undertaken to get this paper for Katharine. They seemed to Be Happy!

Happy the girl, or woman, who has never suffered from any of the diseases of womanhood! Or, if she has been a sufferer, happy is she if she has learned of the wonderful benefits of Cardui, the woman's tonic!
Cardui is a gentle, tonic remedy, for women's ailments. It is a natural medicine—safe, harmless, purely vegetable. It has been in successful use for more than 50 years. It has cured thousands. It should do the same for you.

TAKE CARDUI The Woman's Tonic
Mrs. Mary Neely, of Denver, Tenn., says, "I think there is no tonic on earth, as good as Cardui. I used it with the very best results. I had backache and nearly everything a woman could suffer with, until I took Cardui. Now, I feel better than I have for two years. I should always recommend Cardui to other suffering women. I can't praise it too highly. As a medicine for weak, worn-out women, Cardui is safe and reliable. Try it, today."
