THE PHILOSOPHER

May Win One!

(Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm examines inflation a little bit this week.)

Dear editar:

According to a newspaper I was reading this morning to get my mind off the last line on my July bank statement, the United States treasury is amazed to find it has a 3 billion-dollar budget surplus, and a lot of economists are worrying about it.

The reason they're worried is that they're afraid the surplus will produce more inflation.

At a time when the more a man makes the harder it is to make a living, the last thing we need is more inflation, but the economists who are worring about the surplus just don't have enough confidence in the government.

While it's true the government was caught off-guard, you might say is temporarily embarrassed, by the surplus, I believe it will get hold of itself, come to its senses, and emerge in a few months with some plan to achieve an over-draft.

Once you let Congress understand it has an infaltionary surplus on hand, you'll see more anti-inflationary legislation thought up than we've got the road construction equipment to build it with, or the dam construction equipment, etc.

Up to now, fighting inflation has been a worrisome thing because nobody knew where to start, but once you convince Congress the way to do it is to eliminate a surplus and we'll have it whipped faster than that snowball melts you know where.

Provided, of course, the economists are right. You've got to remember though that the economists themselves were caught off-guard by the surplus, as they'd predicted just the opposite.

I have long contended that economists are like weather forecasters. They're good at telling you what happened yesterday but a little shaky about what's going to happen tomorrow.

Yours faithfully,

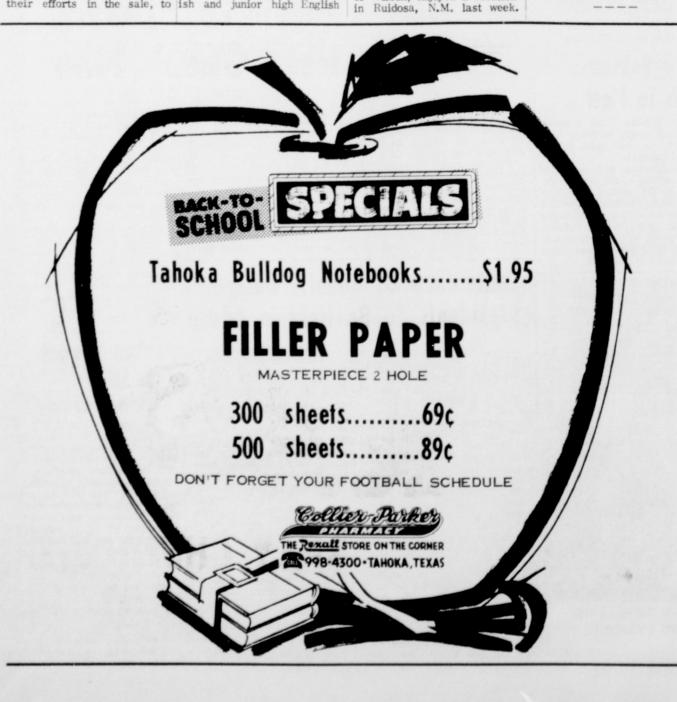

THANKS

Today's multitude of bread choices is a real switch from the bread situation in England in the 13th century.

An English law, the Assize Bread, in 1266, provided that fineground wheat and part white flour was for the middle clas-ses, and breads ontaining all of the bran was for fall inferior types of people.

Now you can have any kind of bread you care to buy and as much of it as you want. The U.S. Department of Agricul-ture's Consumer and Marketing Service reports plentiful supplies of wheat and wheat products - - and that includes bread!

Bread today is much more nutirtious than it was 30 years ago. In 1941, bakers and millers started adding certain nutrients to white bread and flour that were lacking in many U.S. diets. Lack of iron and three important B vitamins - - thiamine, niacine and ribonflavin was the cause of widespread diseases such as beriberi, pel-lagra, and aribollacinosis.

Nowadays, people seldom worry about not getting these import nutrients. Even homemakers who make their own bread need not worry about product's health-giving qualities. The flour they use is enriched, just as commercial bread is enriched.

Here is a recipes for some tasty homemade breads. LEMON BREAD

1-3 cup melted butter 1¹/₄ cup sugar 2 eggs teaspoon almond extract

cups sifted flour teaspoon baking powder teaspoon salt cup milk cup chopped nuts tablespoon fresh lemon juice Blen well the butter and 1 cup sugar; beat in eggs one at a time. Add extract. Sift together dry ingredients; add to egg mixture alternately with milk. Blend just to mix. Fold tablespoon grated lemon peel in peel and nuts. Turn into greased 81/2 X 41/2 X 23/4 inch oven-proof glass pan. Bake in slow oven (325 degrees) about 70 minutes, or until loaf tests done in center. Mix lemon juice and 1/4 cup sugar; immediately spoon over hot loaf. Cool 10 minutes. Remove from pan, cook on rack. Do not cut for 24 hours (it will slice easily). Makes 1 loaf. Note: bread freezes well; it will keep in refrigerator several days.

HOME SWEET HOME!

CHAOS IN CONSTRUCTION

One of the greatest problems facing us today is adequate housing for American families within their financial ability to rent or buy.

There has been utter confusion as to where the housing responsibility lies. Some say, "Let Uncle Sam do it with public projects." But overburdened taxpayers, including those in need of housing, see the dangers of this approach.

Some earnest citizens blame zoning laws, others the building codes. These points are debatable. The basic answer may be found in a single word: money.

The National Association of Manufacturers has become concerned with the accelerating building costs and has published a study entitled, "Chaos in the Construction Industry.

The opening paragraph sums up the story: "Labor conditions in the $90 billion construction industry have reached proportions which demand the urgent attention of both the private and public sectors. Aggravated by highly inflationary contract settlements, excessive work stoppages and stifling work practices, the labor problems in this industry present a dramatic threat to the national economy as well as to the industry in general."

While the private non-farm economy experienced a 2.9 per cent annual increase in productivity from 1959 to 1966, the construction industry experienced a .3 per cent annual decrease in productivity for the same period. The median wage various candidates. increases in construction have gone up three times that of other industries.

Isn't it about time that labor leaders consider their responsibility to the public in this issue?

Japan Launches Her First Atomic-Powered Ship

Using a silver axe to sever the launching rope while 5,000 people cheered, Japan's Crown Princess Michiko launched her nation's first nuclear-powered vessel, the "Mutsu," at a Tokyo shipyard recently.

Technicians are installing a reactor in the ship and testing will begin in March, 1971. The pressurized-water reactor, fueled by 2.8 tons of low-enriched uranium oxide (enough to take the ship seven times around the world without refueling), will operate a 10,000 horsepower steam turbine which will give the ship a cruising speed of 16.5 knots.

Fifteen crewmen are being readied to man the 8,350 ton Mutsu, which will be a training ship. She will also be used for hauling special cargoes such as nuclear

The Mutsu, the world's fourth atomic-powered merchant ship, follows the icebreaker, Lenin, of the Soviet Union, the freighter, Savannah, of the United States, and the ore-carrier, Otto Hahn, of the Federal Republic of Germany. Another nuclear ship is already on planning boards in Japan.

KNOW IT ALL' FISHERMEN

Did you ever notice how the fisherman who "knows it all" is usually the one with the fewest and smallest fish at the end of the day? He's also the guy who doesn't ask any questions, and probably wouldn't accept advice no matter how well-meaning it

Our unfortunate angler's problem is that his knowledge gets in the way of his ability to observe and ask questions. For this is the way most successful anglers learn what's happening. They don't assume they know everything.

Fortunately, most good fish ermen are eager to pass their knowledge onto others. This has special significance to anglers about to try out unfami liar waters, say the fishing authorities at Mercury out-boards. One of the best ways to find what fish are biting, and when and where to go, is to be at the dock when fishing boats return from a day on the lake.

A few minutes spent con versing with today's lucky ang lers may enrich your fishing tomorrow. Not that they'll tell all their secrets, of course but you can usually pick up enough information to make tomorrow's trip more prod

Also, since most anglers end the day fishing with the lure that's brought them the most success, you'll gain added in-formation by noticing what plugs are still hanging from

Bait fishermen can take advantage of docks with fish cleaning stations by inspecting the fish caught that day and seeing what they've been eat-

The real knowledgeable fish ermen, say the lads at Mercury, are those who know they don't know it all.

By DICK WOLFF DOWN EAST FOR LANDLOCKS Al's red Chevvy rolled out of Portland toward Sebago Lake and I settled back in my seat wondering what it would be grey ghost, black ghost, or perhaps a stonefly. I looked back to see that everything was in order with the Garcia Ambassadeur one game fish - the landlocked salmon. Ice-out was three weeks ago and the lake's surface temperature had risen just past 45 degrees. Conditions were still good for trolling streamers, and we hoped mightily that Sebago's spotted silver-pink the 19-foot fiberglass Mako riding smoothly on its carrier.

Soon we would be backing up to the lake's edge and plunging the boat into the cold blue water which held Maine's number salmon would cooperate. We had chosen a shallow bank launching site, and when the boat swung off on a taut anchor line, we parked the car and carrier in a clearing near the road and got at our tackle. We settled on extra capacity Delta 5 reels for our No. 8 floating line and 9-foot Conolon Blue 2639 bass bug action rods. We put aboard the tackle and Al turned over the 105 horse-

It was early morning as the trim Mako knifed slowly up lake in the departing mist. The rays of the sun were in the tops of the surrounding fir and spruce trees, but below on the forest floor forms were still slip-covered in blacks and grays.

We had let out grey ghost to troll, and almost immediately

Al's was snatched up by an early riser. He was a real cavorter, leaping and splashing in a circle around our boat. In the quiet, the splashes as he fell back to water set up a commotion. Finally, Al had him in the boat, and he ran to four pounds.

That was all the success we would have with grey ghosts, and soon we yanked them and substituted gaudier black ghosts. I began swishing my rod back and forth for more action as this second ghost vanished in rippling water. It was the right combination - the line sang as it sped from the reel and the rod's spine clattered against the gunwale where I sat.

He ran out and leaped - the sun dazzling his dripping body - as I lowered the rod tip just in time to keep him from busting too taut a line. He flopped back in the water and circled, and when he cut across his own circle I hauled back and took in line. He ran again and then he was coming out and I dipped the rod tip as before. Another spurt and leap and I had him exhausted on his side in the water lapping at the boat.

We decided to run up one of the larger feeder streamers and try our luck at the first pools below the rapids. About a mile up, we secured the boat and struggled into waders. There, within earshot of fast water, we dug into some of the best deep pool action we'd ever encountered. We released many and kept four good size salmon.

As we got ready to leave, a new sound reached us from the rapids. And when from a safe distance we investigated, we spied a stately black bear snatching salmon from the quick waters with primeval fishing tackle — his lightning quick paw. "Let's get going," said Al, "the rest of the fishing club
