At the begining of the fourth our boy took a brace and shut them out for six straight innings and succeeded in bringin two men home in the fifth. The features of the game were the free hitting of the Tahoka boys and Slatons fielding.

The reported score was: Slaton: 211 000 000-4. Tahoka: 000 020 000-2. Our lineup was as follows: Hall Robinson, catcher. Ruby Wells, pitcher. Peg Strong, relief pitcher. Happy Smith, first base. ## FIGHTS A PACK OF BIG TIMBER WOLVES

Three Trusty Foxhounds Were Put to Flight.

SCYTHE ONLY WEAPON

When This Instrument Was Dashed From the Farmer's Hands He Routs the Brutes With Kicks From His Heavy Boots.

Lead Hill, Ark .- Battle with five huge timber wolves that had just whipped three thoroughbred English foxhounds is a dangerous thing, and something that he does not care to repeat, says Jeemes Bailey, farmer, who routed the ferocious animals with a short blade brush scythe and his feet after a fight lasting more than half an hour at daybreak. Bailey had started to a neighboring farm to assist in cane cutting when he encountered the wolves, not more than a quarter of a mile from the main public road and almost in sight of his home, five miles from Lead Hill.

When Bailey arose, long before daylight he heard his hounds in the woods near the house, and remarked to his family that their barking was not natural. He forgot it, however, while doing up the morning work and was not surprised when he found the dogs ready to accompany him to the neighbor's. Two of the dogs, true to their instinct, began to trail through the woods, but one of them, usually the most eager in a chase, was loathe to leave his master's heels.

Bailey followed as rapidly as he could, and soon heard the dogs baying. He believed that a fox had been run to earth, but when the noise of a flerce fight reached his ears he concluded that a coon had been treed and caught.

As Bailey neared the scene of battle he knew it was no ordinary coon a man. fight, because the three previously unconquered hounds, forgetting their oble lineage, came tearing from the strip of woods out into the open field ward him, their tails between their legs, whining and howling in fear, completely whipped. Behind them came five of the biggest timber wolves Bailey had ever seen, victorious and eager for a continuance of the fray. The wolves did not see Bailey and followed the hounds almost to where he stood.

The farmer had never seen such wolves alive, and though he knew what they were, he waded into the fray, striking as he came with his brush scythe The wolves were surprised. They snapped and snarled at him, circling him and the dogs until all the strength and alertness of the man were required to keep them from springing at his throat. The dogs kept whining and staved as close as they could to the fighting man, now and then gathering nerve to snap at a passing wolf.

Bailey fought thus until he felt that he could fight no more, when a particularly vicious wolf sprang at him and received a glancing blow from the scythe, turning the blade down until it stuck in the ground and wrenching the handle from Bailey's hand.

In this desperate plight he flew at the animals, kicking right and left, cracking ribs and jaws with his heavy shoes until the wolves had more than enough and fled. Bailey did not follow them.

There have been other timber wolves seen in the woods near here this winter, but no other instance is known where the animals attacked

CHIPMUNK CREATES A PANIC IN BIG HOTEL

Harmless Little Animal Escapes From a Box and Is Killed by a Boy.

San Francisco, Cal.-Consternation reigned at the St. Francis hotel for ten minutes the other afternoon and then came a spell of deep grief. It was caused by a harmless little chipmunk. Mr. and Mrs. George C. Beckley of Honolulu motored down from Lake Tahoe in the morning and brought seven of the animals confined in a wooden box. Mrs. Beckley, who was Beatrice Campbell of San Jose, and is the sister of Princess Kawananakoa of Honolulu prevailed upon her husband to get the chipmunks for her, intending to take them to Honolulu as pets. I should like to ask a few questions regarding the white slave traffic.

Merchants say many of their girl employes live at home. In fact, prospective girl employes are asked nowadays: "Do you live at home? Is anyone dependent upon you for support?" It is the girl who lives at home who gets the position, as she can afford to make a good appearence. She has little or no board to pay. Her mother takes care of her clothing.

I say, and hundreds will agree with me, let the girl who does not need to work outside stay at home and help her mother, learning to sew, bake and do housework thoroughly, so that when she does marry she can care for her home and make it the dearest spot on earth.

In the old countries the rich as well as the poor are thoroughly dome ticated. It would be a disgrace there not to know how. Let men who are thinking of marriage find out if their future wives understand how to care for their earnings and help save for the future.

Again, there is the woman who has been widowed and left with little children. If the girls who live at home did not take these positions the woman would have a chance to make enough to care for her loved ones. It is the woman who must earn her livelihood who is the most interested

CRAZE NOW FOR LAVENDER

Has Wonderfully Caught Fancy of Those to Whom Money Is an Object of Little Moment.

There is a perfect craze for laven der toilet articles. Women of luxurious tastes and the money to indulge them are using dressing table sets of lavender enamel, picked out with white, gold or silver, and scarfs, pincushion covers, handkerchief and glove boxes of lavender satin veiled with shadow lace dyed to match.

Women who possess a similar love for lavender, but have not the means of purchasing it in enamel and fine lace, furnish their dressing tables with combs, brushes and manicure tools mounted with lavender, cloisonne or crystal or made wholly of lavender composition resembling celluloid. And to go with these articles they make veil, glove and handkerchief cases as well as cushion and table covers of lavender batiste veiled with dotted Swiss or St. Gall muslin, dyed to

One reason for this fad is that lavender is supposed to be a restful tone and the sight of it good for tired nerves.
