THE BANKER

In looking through the country town for men of prestige and renown, who build and advertise a place, we find the banker sets the pace. There are some slant-eved money kings who keep small towns from doing things, but they are scarce-death seals their doom and then their towns enjoy a boom. When you've a chance to make a haul by buying pickles in the fall and peddling pickles in the spring and thus become a pickle king, you do not seek your maiden aunt and spring your coin extracting chant; you don't salaan and meekly rend your robes beyou, but-they've spent their last jack for camisoles and bric-abac. The only chance to make that deal is at the best proof of the effectiveness of bank; they hear your speal and pave the way with gold stacks, you to pay ing worms in children or adults. an income tax. When some subscription project lags committees call on 'money bags;" they smoke his twenty cent cigars attend conventions in his cars and corkscrew decats from his vault to care the lame the blind the harmless and effective remedy Price halt. In time, however, you will learn that banking worms will turn, and there's no penance that compares with bearding bankers in their lairs. You seek their den with faltering step without your usual nerve and pep and meekly stammer that you've"got some money coming-but you're not-at unable to read and write, according present-fixed to meet that note, you'd like-" the words won't pass your throat. The banker lays aside his pen and says: "Well, Bill, we'll let it ride." Outside the bank you fairly dance and go and buy your kids some pants and several books about the yaks and get your wife a bran new ax. That chap in there behind the bars helps head off half your family jars. Oh, when I leave this earthly sphere, I hope some banker will be near to supplement my stingy roil in case I can't pay Charon's toll.-Clipp-

For the second consecutive time the West Texas exhibit captured the first prize at the Texas Cotton Palace, winning in competition with groups from East Texas and from Central Texas. The exhibit scored 990 points out of a possible 1000 blue ribbons and thirty-three red ribbons were awarded to individuals in the West Texas group. It was a notable demonstration of the excellence of West Texas products and the result of climatic and soil conditions and of able men and women who give intelligent and indefatigable care to

The success of the West Texas exhibit is also due in part to co-operation with the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, which encourages and coordinates the individual efforts. B. M. Whittaker, exhibit manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce is a bundle of energy directed by understanding in the collection and presentation of the exhibits.

The exhibits of this year and of last year were collected from all of West Texas, which includes the Panhandle and the Plains country. Some of the products were from Tarrant county. They would excell in competition with products from any part of West Texas has wonderful resources, many of them as yet only partially developed. It is only within the last few years that the potential wealth of West Texas has won recognition. It was known as a splendid livestock section, but the big ranches held back development. The farmer found it an admirable field for his labors and the fruit grower is learning of its possibilities. Successful agriculture has been building up the communities so that they are changing from towns into cities, and the cities are now engaging in friendly rivalry to outstrip each other.

West Texas is yet in the borning. There is plenty of room and there are splendid opportunities for more homeseekers. Such exhibits as that of West Texas at the Cotton Palace will attract desirable homeseekers. Texas has five million population. They could all find ample room and plenty of scope for their energies in West Texas, and at the present rate of growth it will not be so very many years before West Texas will be the heavyweight portion of the state both in population and wealth .-- Fort Worth Record.

Special complaint is made of "silk stocking, salesmen" many of whom are said to insist upon a payment in advance and then let the victim get the stockings if she can. to be a WORLD HOLIDAY. It is the new day. Just four years old. Oh, the 11th of November has come and gone every year just like all other three hundred and sixty-five days. But until four years ago it had no special meaning. It marked no definite incident in the history of the world. It brought no special blessing of joy and happiness and peace on earth until that bright morning in 1918. Why does it seem so like all the other days to the most of us? Because the most of us did not suffer any great anxiety or fear or loss because of the World War. That's why. But that is no reason why we should not be in favor of making Nevember 11th the greatest holiday of the entire year with the exception of Christmas and Easter means the resurrection of the crucified Savior, and is the symbol of our life after death. But everybody does not know the story of the Cross. And everybody who does know it does not believe the same story. It will be a long time before the only day of the whole year that time and life for everyone which few strictly a U. S. holiday. This brief review of our State and most of our days of special rejoicing have come through the greatest sorrow and suffering. They mark the climax of some great tragedy in the life of a State, a nation or the world.
