LYNN COUNTY ELECTION RETURNS ARE INTERESTING

The following election returns certainly proves that the people of Lynn county had good men from which to select their officers, as in the race for Public Weigher, Wood beat his opponent, Mr. Lam, by only one vote, and in the Public Weigher's race in the O'Donnell precinct, Busby beat Mr. Stokes by only four votes. These close races certainly indicate an evenness in genuineness of the candidates, and we are sure that if there were four such offices as the two mentioned and all four contestants been given a position, the county would have been equally as well represented as it is sure to be under the guidance of those officers.—Lubbock Avalanche.

Following is the totals of the results of the second primary election, held in Lynn county, Saturday, August 26th: The tabulated form by precincts will be published in these columns next week, after the returns have been officially canvassed.

- For Superintendent Public Instruction:

MRS. M. J. WRIGHT PASSES TO HER REWARD

Mrs. Mary Jane McInnis Wright died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. G. W. Small, age 76 years, 11 months and 18 days.

Mary Jane McInnis was born in Decatur county, Georgia, Sept. 9, 1845 and was married to Dr. T. D. Wright, May 6th., 1879. To this union was born five children; three of whom survive her, Mrs. G. W. Small, Mrs. J. C. Wells and Ollie Wright of this city.

Mrs. Wright had resided in Lynn county about nineteen years prior to her death and during that time made a host of friends, who are grieved to learn of her death.

Deceased professed a hope in Christ in her early life, and when about 12 or 13 years of age, and joined the Methodist Episcopal church some fifty years ago.

The body was laid to rest in Tahoka cemetery Monday afternoon. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. J. Edwards, Primitive Baptist minister of DeLeon, Texas, assisted by Rev. S. J. Upton, pastor of the local Methodist church. Rev. Edwards was an old friend of the family and had known the deceased for thirty-five years.

BATHING OF BOTH SEXES STOPPED AT BROWNFIELD

Brownfield, Texas, August 27.—A mass meeting was held Saturday to protest against the use of a bathing pool by men and women at the same time. A committee had previously conferred with the proprietor on the matter, and he agreed that if the majority of the citizens wanted separate days for the sexes, he would agree to place the rule in force, otherwise he would continue as before.

Eighty citizens attended the meeting, and voted almost unanimously for the change.

At this time, however, there is some difference of opinion by those who did not attend the meeting as to whether there is any need for the separate hours, and a meeting of the women of the town was held and nearly all present voiced their approval of the action of the men's meeting. Most of them signed a petition to the proprietor of the pool, asking him to comply with the request for a change. The petition is being circulated. It is opposed by some, but it is believed that a majority will sign, and if so, mixed bathing will be a thing of the past in Brownfield.

Those against the change base their belief that the change will cause serious loss to the proprietor of the pool. Those for the change believe that it will make no difference in that his business will be benefitted, because there are a number of people who do not patronize him on account of the mixed bathing feature.

BORN—to Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Wells Wednesday, August 30th., a boy.

LOCAL CITIZEN WRITES ON LYNN COUNTY EXHIBIT

Editor News:—

What has become of the Tahoka Chamber of Commerce? And our Fair proposition? Shall we send an exhibit to the South Plains Fair at Lubbock, or let the matter go by default? The time is limited and we must get a waterbury move on ourselves if we are to get up a creditable exhibit. There is an abundance of fine corn, cotton, maize, kaffir and other products in the county from which a fine selection can be obtained to place an exhibit. If our people will get busy and devote a few days time, Lynn county can show to the world what can be produced even in one of the driest and hottest years.

The first and biggest really meritorious feature of the fair is the agricultural and live stock exhibits that show the resources and community spirit of the people.

The South Plains Fair at Lubbock will be held September 28-29 and 30, and an invitation has been extended to Lynn county to send an exhibit there. What are we going to do about it?

The writer will devote several days to the work of selecting and assembling an exhibit, if others will co-operate. Let the Chamber of Commerce take the matter under advisement. Call a meeting of those interested and if it is decided to get up an exhibit, let there be no delay in taking some decisive action. Lynn County cannot afford to fall down on this proposition.

Your's for an Exhibit,
W. J. CROUCH.

Paul Miller local cotton buyer reports having purchased the first bale of cotton brought to O'Donnell Tuesday. He purchased the bale from the O'Donnell Mercantile Co., paying 21½ cents. The bale weighed 475 pounds, and was raised by L. Evans of Dawson County.

Misses Rena Mae Evans and Murel Max were Lubbock visitors yesterday.

The "Two For One Drug Sale" which will be conducted in Tahoka by the Lowrey Drug Company beginning Friday, September 8th, and ending Saturday, the 16th, is heralded as the greatest co-operative drive for lower prices that has ever been attempted by any manufacturers or dealers in this country or elsewhere.

On another page in this weeks issue of the News appears a full page advertisement setting forth the details of this great Sale.

The Lowrey Drug Co. calls attention to the fact that there are wonderful savings throughout the store. Mr. Lowrey the manager, states that drastic reductions will be in effect on every line excepting items where manufacturers prohibit price changes.

Manufacturers, distributors and the trade papers throughout the United States, have acclaimed this Sale as the greatest step that has so far been taken towards leveling the cost of drugs and toiletries. The manufacturers as well as the participating dealers confidently expect that this event will eclipse in interest and volume of sales anything ever attempted before.

TAHOKA LEAGUERS ATTEND LUBBOCK PROGRAM

On Sunday evening, August 27th., almost the entire membership of the Epworth League motored to Lubbock to visit the work of the Lubbock Epworth Leaguers. Everyone present enjoyed the program and were greatly pleased with the manner in which the Lubbock League carried on their work.

The subject for the evening was that of our relation to Old Mexico in the missionary work. Many eloquent speeches were heard on the question and the press was ardently supported by inspiring young journalists present, as the means by which Mexico could be best reached. Among the prominent speakers was Mr. Conrad Lam, of Tahoka, who very impressively reported the work of the Tahoka League.

Although the Epworth League in Tahoka has been slightly inactive, due to recent meetings, the working is being revived and a special program is planned for next Sunday. We extend a cordial invitation to all the young people of the town to be present Sunday evening at 7:00 o'clock.

A large representation of Primitive Baptists met in Tahoka from Thursday, August 24, until Sunday, August 27th, to attend their association. Delegates were here from as far east as Corsicana and Bell county, Texas and from New Mexico on the west. These meetings renew old acquaintances and brings old friends together that seldom meet at other times. But of greater value is the spiritual benefit derived from the association than from the social part. There were several additions to the church and all who attended were greatly helped. It would be an impossibility to publish all the names of the delegates in attendance, but have secured the names of the ministers present, as follows: Revs. J. S. Newman, of Stockdale; J. J. Edwards, of De Leon; G. W. Morris, of Paducah; L. J. McCarty, of Plainview; John Richardson, of Robert Lee; Merridith, of New Mexico.

TURNING CORNERS

THE very ease and speed with which you rush ahead, so agreeable while the road is smooth and clear, make it difficult sometimes to slow down and turn the corners in safety.

A straight course is easy to follow, but a devious way is hard and calls for all your strength and finer judgment in spite of your vaunted skill.

A few trifling words, a slip of the foot, a shifting of the eye or a broken troth and you are destitute of courage, in a perilous position from which it may take years to extricate yourself.

Friendships are irrevocably lost at the corners where you must turn to determine your future; where you find that you must curtail expenses and live a simpler life with less pleasure and more work.

Turning corners dampens the spirits of high-strung men and women and often narrows their views to so great an extent that they become mere corner loungers, of no use to themselves or to the community in which they exist.

The sunlight vistas of life have been darkened by the gathering clouds of adversity in which they unexpectedly plunged as they turned a sharp corner in an unfamiliar territory.

Like you, these victims of misfortune were comfortable and happy in the heyday of prosperity.

And like thousands of others, they miscalculated their strength and were hastily swept off their feet, bruised and maimed as they found themselves bereft of power and humbled in pride.

In an atmosphere that stifles their ambition and fills their souls with remorse, they are like frightened children lost in the dark, afraid of the shadows and unable to move.

Yesterday they would have laughed at the plight of a friend who made an unfortunate turn at the corner; today, laughter and they are not on speaking terms.

"USED" THOUGHTS

EMERSON, wisest of all American essayists, says somewhere that every man must sooner or later make up his mind that he and no one else must determine his future.

We can learn from others knowledge, methods, even wisdom.

Other men can teach us how to think, as they can teach us how to swim or play golf.

We all employ a great deal of thought that is not our own. That must be, for we should be foolish not to profit by the accumulated wisdom of those who have gone before.

But these "used" thoughts, while we must at times employ them, serve not at all to develop our minds.

And while we might get along fairly well through life without original thought, we should die little wiser than when we began, and contribute nothing whatever to the progress of the world.

All that is of value in education is learning how to think.

From biography we derive a great deal, but most of it consists in knowing how other men thought, and how their thought made their careers.

If we carry all our problems to others to solve for us, we shall some day be confronted with a great problem and lack the understanding of how to handle with it.

And in that time there will be no one to help us, and we shall meet with a future that may change for the worse the course of our lives.

Most of us will do anything rather than think, for thinking is labor of the most kind.

And if you will look into the lives of such persons you will find that they were early taught at a good mother's knee to put aside greed and selfishness, to call men brothers, to help the poor, to be charitable to the fallen, and to practice in their dealings with others the golden rule, that the corners might be turned without calamity, even in the purpling twilight.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"WELSH RABBIT"

THE name of the dish composed of melted cheese with the addition of sundry sauces and piquant flavorings is usually spelled "rabit"—an error due to the fact that persons who could see no resemblance between their favorite midnight repast and a hare which came from Wales concluded that it must be a "rare bit." Even Worcester and Webster were formerly guilty of this mistake, until an examination of Continental colloquialisms showed them where they erred.

Welsh "rabit" is a dyed-in-the-wool slang term, belonging to the same class as a considerable number of other, but less well-known names applied to the favorite dishes of various communities. In England, for example, they refer to a sheep's head stewed with onions as a "German duck," while a bag-pudding is a "Leicester-shire plover" and "Norfolk capon" is eatinghouse slang for a herring. Following the same school of rough wit, the French call a herring a "poulet de careme" or "Lenten chicken" and the Italians reverse this process, referring to a chicken as a "fish out of the coop." Nor is the custom by any means confined to European countries. The New England habit of speaking of codfish as "Cape Cod turkeys" and the current slang of "Irish confetti" for bricks are two other examples from the same school.

So Welsh "rabit" it should remain—on account of the fondness of the Welsh for toasted cheese and not because it is a rare bit, or delicacy. (© by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

GRACEFUL FALL NEGLIGEEES; NOVELTIES IN NEW BLOUSES

"NEGLIGEES" should be given a broad construction because it includes several distinct types of dresses for wear at home and each type is intended for a special kind of service. These types must be reported separately since they have so little in common that what applies to one is not true of another. For instance, the kimono and the tea frock are so different that they cannot be considered together, yet they are both negligees. Negligees are conveniently classed, first as kimonos or as belonging to the kimono group, which includes all those used to make it and designers indulge themselves in many pretty vagaries in details of trimming and finishing. The lovely tea frock pictured is made of a pile fabric and has transparent sleeves bordered with fur. Two novel blouses for present wear are among the new arrivals from Europe that have found a warm welcome here. They have not been changed or "adapted," but are presented as examples of art characteristic of the countries from which they come. Each of them is well suited for wear now and all during the fall season.

Tea Frock of Pile Fabric.

Intimate garments intended for wear in the bedroom. Then come breakfast coats, or lounging robes in which one is presentable in the house, and finally, more formal negligees that are described as tea frocks, or hostess gowns. They are the lovely and picturesque affairs in which women spend their leisure with friends who drop in and drink a cup of tea. All these different types are shown in new developments. The kimono appears in the regulation kimono cut and in the coat style and wrap model, all opening down the front. There are some slip-overs shown among them and some of them have a girle or sash about the waist. Designers have seized upon the new "blistered" cottons and cotton matelasse, for making them. Old-time albatross and son. "Czechoslovakia" is brilliantly written on the graceful blouse of white voile, gaily embroidered in colored floss, shown at the right of the illustration. These blouses are presumably embroidered by peasants and made in styles typical of their country. Many of them display the use of one color with white, while many more employ three or more colors in their embroidery. There are several slightly varied styles, but the blouse pictured is typically Czechoslovakian and handsome. It is very full at the neck, and this fullness is disposed of by fine smocking with colored floss which forms a narrow round yoke. A standing collar is attached to the yoke with needlework and is ornamented with embroidery. The full sleeves are gathered in at the wrist, forming a European Novelties in Blouses.

French flannel are also used in addition to the regulation silk and cotton-crepe weaves. In breakfast coats, corduroy and quilted silks divide interest with blistered silk and metelasse. The corduroy has made departure in style and appears in Persian and checked printed patterns. These coats open at the front, are bloused at the back, or all around, and have long girdles of the material, often ending in tassels, that tie at the front. Their sleeves are capacious, usually of the square type, and many of the coats are provided with pockets. The tea frock takes its cue from dresses and indulges in graceful drapery, handson ornaments, for holding the drapery, in long flowing, transparent sleeves and sometimes, in trimmings of crepe silk and crepe materials as crepe black satin, crepe silk and novelty pile fabrics are band like the yoke and are finished with a narrow ruffle edged with but tonholing. The blouse at the left is made of crepe de chine with a latticework or narrow ribbon covering it, except where needlework motifs are set in. Where the ribbons intersect a cross stitch of silk floss holds them together and the blouse can be imagined in many beautiful color combinations. It is a very simple design, but the pains taking handwork lavished on it gives it a strong French accent. In the long sash of crepe de chine the designer has varied the decoration by placing the narrow ribbon in parallel lines and an important feature appears in the split over the hips. Julia Bottomley

It was almost dark when I had finished the manuscript. It was written on the top sheet of a still thick pad of paper, and my fingers fairly tingled suddenly, to go on and cover those unused white sheets—tell what happened next—tell the rest of the story; not for the sake of the story—but for my sake. It might help me. It might make things clearer. It might help to justify myself in my own eyes. Not that I have any doubts, of course

And the Way He Drew Her Into His Arms and Kissed Her.

(about leaving Jerry, I mean), but that when I saw it in black and white I could be even more convinced that I was doing what was best for him and best for me.

So I brought the manuscript down to my own room, and this evening I have commenced to write. I can't finish it tonight, of course. But I have tomorrow, and still tomorrow. (I have so many tomorrows now! And what do they all amount to?) And so I just keep writing, as I have time, till I bring it to the end.

I'm sorry that it must be so sad and sorry an end. But there's no other way, of course. There can be but one ending, as I can see. I'm sorry. Mother'll be sorry, too. She doesn't know yet. I hate to tell her. Nobody knows—not even Jerry himself—yet. They all think I'm just making a visit to Mother—and I am—till I write that letter to Jerry. And then—

I believe now that I'll wait till I've finished writing this. I'll feel better then. My mind will be clearer. I'll know more what to say. Just the effort of writing it down—

Of course, if Jerry and I hadn't— But this is no way to begin. Like the little Mary Marie of long ago I am in danger of starting my dinner with cream instead of soup! And so I must begin where I left off, of course. And that was at the wedding.

I remember that wedding as if it were yesterday. I can see now, with Mary Marie's manuscript before me, why it made so great an impression upon me. It was a very quiet wedding, of course—just the members of the family present. But I shall never forget the fine, sweet loveliness of Mother's face, nor the splendid strength and tenderness of Father's. And the way he drew her into his arms and kissed her, after it was all over—well, I remember distinctly that even Aunt Hattie choked up and had to turn her back to wipe her eyes.

They went away at once, first to New York for a day or two, then to Andersonville, to prepare for the real wedding trip to the other side of the world. I stayed in Boston at school.

In the spring, when Father and Mother returned, and we all went back to Andersonville, there followed a long period of just happy girlhood, and I suspect I was too satisfied and happy to think of writing. After all, I've noticed it's when we're sad or troubled over something that we have that tinging to cover perfectly good white paper with "confessions" and "stories of my life." As witness right now what I'm doing.

I had just passed my sixteenth birthday when we all came back to live in Andersonville. For the first few months I suspect that just the glory and the wonder and joy of living in the old home, with Father and Mother happy together, was enough to fill all my thoughts. Then, as school began in the fall, I came down to normal living again, and became a girl—just a growing girl in her teens.

How patient Mother was, and Father, too! I can see how gently and tactfully they helped me over the stones and stumbling blocks that strewed the pathway of every sixteen-year-old girl who thinks, because she has turned down her dresses and turned up her hair, that she is grown up, and can do and think and talk as she pleases.

It was that winter that I went through the morbid period. Like our childhood's measles and whooping cough, it seems so come to most of us—us women children. I wonder why? Certainly it came to me. True to type I cried by the hour over fancied slights from my schoolmates, and brooded days at a time because Father or Mother "didn't understand." I questioned everything in the earth beneath and the heavens above; and in my dark despair over an averted glance from my most intimate friend, I meditated on whether life was, or was not, worth the living, with a preponderance toward the latter.

Mother—dear mother!—looked on in haste. She feared, I think for my life; certainly for my sanity and morals.

It was Father who came to the rescue. He pook-pooked Mother's fears; said it was growing too fast; or perhaps I didn't get enough sleep, or needed, maybe, a good tonic. He took me out of school, and made it a point to accompany me on long walks. He talked with me—not to me—about the birds and the trees and the sunsets, and then about the deeper things of life, until, before I realized it, I was sane and sensible once more, serene and happy in the simple faith of my childhood.

I was seventeen, if I remember rightly, when I became worried, not over my heavenly estate now, but my earthly one. I must have a career, of course. No nobby-pammy everyday living of dishes and dusting and meals and habes for me. It was all very well, of course, for some people. Such things had to be. But for me—

I could write, of course, but I was not sure but that I preferred the stage. At the same time there was within me a deep stirring as of a call to go out and enlighten the world, especially that portion of it in darkest Africa or deadliest India. I would be a missionary.

Before I was eighteen, however, I had abandoned all this. Father put his foot down hard on the missionary project, and Mother put hers down on the stage idea.

So I wrote stories—but I did not get any of them printed in spite of my earnest efforts. In time, therefore, that idea, also, was abandoned; and with it, regrettably, the idea of enlightening the world at all.

Besides, I had just then (again if I remember rightly) fallen in love.

Not that it was the first time. Oh, no, not at eighteen, when at thirteen I had begun confidently and happily to look for it! What a sentimental little piece I was! How could they have been so patient with me—Father, Mother, everybody!

I think the first real attack—the first that I consciously called love, myself—was the winter after we had all come back to Andersonville to live. I was sixteen and in the high school. It was Paul Mayhew—yes, the same Paul Mayhew that had defied his mother and sister and walked home with me one night and invited me to go for an automobile ride, only to be sent sharply about his business by my stern inexorable Aunt Jane. Paul was in the senior class now, and the handsomest, most admired boy in school. He didn't care for girls. That is, he said he didn't. He bore himself with a supreme indifference that was maddening, and that took (apparently) no notice of the fact that every girl in school was a willing slave to the mere nodding of his head or the beckoning of his hand.

This was the condition of things when I entered school that fall, and perhaps for a week thereafter. Then one day, very suddenly, and without apparent reason, he awoke to the fact of my existence. Candy, flowers, books—some one of these he brought to me every morning. All during the school day he was my devoted gallant, dancing attendance every possible minute outside of session hours, and walking home with me in the afternoon, proudly carrying my books. Did I say "home with me"? That is not strictly true—he always stopped just one block short of "home"—one block short of my gate. He evidently had not forgotten Aunt Jane, and did not intend to take any foolish risks! So he said good-by to me always at a safe distance.

This went on for perhaps a week. Then he asked me to attend a school sleigh-ride and supper with him. I was wild with delight. At the same time I was wild with apprehension. I awoke suddenly to the fact of the existence of Father and Mother, and that their permission must be gained. And I had my doubts—I had very grave doubts. Yet it seemed to me at that moment that I just had to go on that sleigh-ride. That it was the only thing in the whole wide world worth while.

I can remember now, as if it were yesterday, the way I debated in my mind as to whether I should ask Father, Mother, or both together; and if I should let it be seen how greatly I desired to go, and how much it meant to me; or if I should just mention it as in passing, and take their permission practically for granted.

I chose the latter course, and I took a time when they were both together. At the breakfast table I mentioned casually that the school was to have a sleigh-ride and supper the next Friday afternoon and evening, and that Paul Mayhew had asked me to go with him.

"A sleigh-ride, supper, and not come home until evening?" cried Mother. "And with whom, did you say?"

"Paul Mayhew," I answered. I still tried to speak casually; at the same time I tried to indicate by voice and manner something of the great honor that had been bestowed upon their daughter.

Father was impressed—plainly impressed; but not a bit in the way I had hoped he would be. He gave me a swift, sharp glance; then looked straight at Mother.

"Humph! Paul Mayhew! Yes, I know him," he said grimly. "And I'm dreading the time when he comes into college next year."

"You mean—" Mother hesitated and stopped.

"I mean I don't like the company he keeps—already," nodded Father. "Then you don't think that Mary Marie—" Mother hesitated again, and glanced at me.

"Certainly not," said Father decidedly.

I knew then, of course, that he meant I couldn't go on the sleigh ride, even though he hadn't said the words right out. I forgot all about being casual and indifferent and matter-of-course then. I thought only of showing them how absolutely necessary it was for them to let me go on that sleigh ride, unless they wanted my life forevermore hopelessly blighted.

I explained carefully how he was the handsomest, most popular boy in school, and how all the girls were just crazy to be asked to go anywhere with him; and I argued what if Father had seen him with boys he did not like—then that was all the more reason why nice girls like me, when he asked them, should go with him, so as to keep him away from bad boys. And I reminded them again that he was the very handsomest, most popular boy in school; and that there wasn't a girl I knew who wouldn't be crazy to be in his shoes.

Then I stopped, all out of breath, and I can imagine just how pleading and palpitating I looked.

I thought Father was going to refuse right away, but I saw the glance that Mother threw him—the glance that said, "Let me attend to this,

All During the School Day He Was My Devoted Gallant.

dear." I'd seen that glance before, several times, and I knew just what it meant; so I wasn't surprised to see Father shrug his shoulders and turn away as Mother said to me: "Very well, dear. I'll think it over and let you know tonight."

But I was surprised that night to have Mother say I could go, for I'd about given up hope, after all that talk at the breakfast table. And she said something else that surprised me, too. She said she'd like to know Paul Mayhew herself; that she always wanted to know the friends of her little girl. And she told me to ask him to call the next evening and play checkers or chess with me.

Happy? I could scarcely contain myself for joy. And when the next evening came, bringing Paul, and Mother, all prettily dressed as if he were really, truly company, came into the room and talked so beautifully to him, I was even more entranced. To be sure, it did bother me a little that Paul laughed so much, and so loudly, and that he couldn't seem to find anything to talk about only himself, and what he was doing, and what he was going to do. Some way, he had never seemed like that at school. And I was afraid Mother wouldn't like that

CORONER POSTS WARNING PLACARD AT DANGEROUS SEATTLE CROSSING

In an effort to cut down the toll of fatal accidents throughout Seattle and King county, Dr. W. H. Corson, King county coroner, has started the practice of erecting signs at places where fatalities have occurred, stating in detail the particular accident. Herewith is shown one of the signs erected at a dangerous street corner.

"HEART DISEASE" COMMON AILMENT

Storage Battery Is One of Most Important Units of Car, Yet Often Overlooked.

MANY ARE STARVED TO DEATH

To Secure Long Life It Should Be Charged and Discharged Frequently—Careless Owner Soon Makes It Piece of Junk.

It is a very peculiar fact, but nevertheless true, that a hard-headed business man will invest three or four thousand dollars in a motor car and then cease to take the necessary precautions in safeguarding his investment.

The storage battery is one of the most important units of the car, yet it is a device which seldom receives the proper attention, writes B. W. Cooke, president of a Chicago trade school. All that the average owner knows about this unit is that it requires a certain amount of distilled water occasionally. I have often seen storage batteries in use that did not receive even occasional attention. Literally they were starved to death.

Heart of Automobile.

The battery may be considered the heart of the automobile and when it fails the car stops.

When the engine is in good condition it will start within fifteen seconds. If it does not, then the operator should locate the trouble before he abuses the storage battery. When the starting button is pressed, as much as 200 amperes of current may be drawn from the battery. This means excessive chemical action in the battery and if continued for any length of time the battery is sure to overheat.

Sooner or later the battery becomes a useless piece of junk in the hands of the careless car owner. Excessive use is one extreme. The other is when the battery is used but little and the car much.

Charge and Recharge Often.

To secure long life in a storage battery the unit should be charged and discharged frequently. If you should find that you are overcharging your battery turn the tail light on occasionally during the daytime, or even when you leave the car at night. This will serve to drain the battery slightly and keep it in condition.

Always bear in mind that your battery can be likened to a wooden pall. If it is drained too much, it will be like a pall left in the sun; it soon falls to pieces.

It is the storage battery man's duty to keep your battery in condition. He is the man who can "pour the water out of the pall and fill it again." Every time you pay him 50 cents it is an investment that pays big dividends. Remember this.

Don't let your car have heart trouble.

HEAT DETERIORATES RUBBER.

Tires Cannot Long Remain Intact When Highly Heated by Continuous Speeding.

A high-grade tire on a racing car will sometimes stand up as far as 500 miles, about one-twentieth of the life of a tire operated under ordinary conditions. This difference in tire service is due directly to a difference in the heat developed. Heat exerts a deteriorating effect on rubber in proportion to the intensity and length of time the rubber is exposed to it. Running at high speed quickly raises the temperature of a tire. This heat results from the internal friction set up in the tire carcass. Tires are designed to resist the effects of heat produced by ordinary everyday car operation, but they cannot long remain intact when highly heated by continuous speeding. The tire bills of the speeder are likely to be higher than those of the driver who proceeds at a moderate

YOU AUTO KNOW

That failure to shift gears on a long hill is one of the signs of the amateur driver or of the man who prefers to try to "show off" the power of his machine at the risk of serious damage to the engine or, at best, of stalling in the middle of the incline. First and second (low and intermediate) gears are placed on cars for emergencies of this kind and are designed to assist the engine in pulling a load to which it is not accustomed. The driver who does not make use of them is, therefore, placing an undue strain on his car and should not be surprised if something gives way under it.

The best method to use in the case of a long steep incline is to approach, if possible, at a fair rate of speed, so that the car will gain as much initial impetus as possible. Then, when the machine begins to lose speed but before it has slowed down too much, shift to second and, if necessary, to first. Also, at the first sound of a "knock" retard the spark, for this will slow down the engine and give it more power, thus making it unnecessary to shift gears on hills which the driver knows by experience his car can make without laboring.

HEADLIGHT FOR AUTOMOBILE

Operated by Steering Mechanism and Always Points in Direction Car Is Speeding.

The Scientific American in illustrating and describing an automobile headlight control, the invention of W. Muller of Honolulu, Hawaii, says: The invention relates to headlights operated by the steering mechanism so that the light will always point in the direction in which the car is moving. An object is to provide means operable from the steering wheel for turning the headlights so that the rays will be directed in a straight path forward of the course of travel of the machine. The device is readily applicable to any ordinary construction of automobile.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

Valve clicks and slaps are the most common engine noises.

The neglect in tightening bolts or filling grease cups often leads to trouble and frequently a breakdown.

Spring shackles, wheel bearings, steering connections and universal joints should be oiled frequently to save wear and insure smoother operation.

It is a good plan to have one's car gone over thoroughly by competent mechanics once in a while, but there are certain points that every owner can look after himself.

To slow down the engine and remain in high when crossing railway tracks is a dangerous practice. The engine may die with the car wheels on the first rail.

I was intensely nervous, too, could not rest at night, felt tired and worn out all the time, and lost weight and strength until I was almost a wreck.

IF THE SHOE DOES NOT FIT, DO NOT WEAR IT

We had a good chance last Sunday to find out what kind of citizens we have in Tahoka, especially the class of business people who inhabit the town. Some few may have been providentially hindered by sickness from helping to entertain the out-of-town visitors, and they are excusable, but the News is sorry to say there are some people who reside in Tahoka who showed a selfish streak by staying at home and not assisting in entertaining the visitors that attended the county singing convention held within our gates last Sabbath day. But, on the other hand, staying at home was not so bad as the streak shown by some of our good citizens, who came and partook freely of the good things to eat without contributing anything to the dinner. From our observation there were more country people who brought dinner than there were town folks.

The News is at a loss to understand just how the business class of people in Tahoka expect trade to come this way when Tahoka is supposed to entertain the singing convention, and they sit comfortably at home and let the throngs of visitors take care of themselves, and return home without something to eat as was the case here Sunday.

While you were at home enjoying your easy chair, your young hopeful sons joined in a general stampede at the dinner.

A BOQUET

Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Haynes, editors of the Lynn County News, at Tahoka, Texas, spent the week end at Claude with Mrs. Phebe K. Warner and other Claude friends. It was in Claude that Mr. and Mrs. Haynes first met, wooed and wedded. Mr. Haynes, now editor of a leading South Plains newspaper, was at one time "roller boy" for the Claude News, then under the management of Col. J. H. Hamner. It was in the Claude News office where Mr. Haynes first got his longing for the smell of printer's ink, and that desire has never left him. Of course it was by the aid and ability of Mrs. Haynes that he was able to be placed where he now resides. With such a shrewd and accomplished business partner as Mrs. Haynes, Editor Haynes could not do otherwise than make a success. They have installed a new linotype and now have an office they may well feel proud of. The News man acknowledges a very pleasant fraternal call from Mr. and Mrs. Haynes while they visited with Claude friends.—Claude News.

The open season for doves begins today, Friday, September 1st. Those who enjoy bird shooting will likely get on their hunting clothes for the next few days.

The Lynn County News complains that the Chamber of Commerce in the City of Tahoka is not functioning. It is very important to the growth and development of a community that the machinery that keeps the town moving, be kept in first-class working order. The Chamber of Commerce is certainly one of the most important organizations of the community for the furtherance of the general interests of the town. Even if some of the old mossbacks do claim that it is wrong to have a paid secretary to look after the business of the community, it does not necessarily make it a true statement. "Everybody's business is nobody's business" hence is never done, applies to community work about the best of anything we know of. Tahoka or no other town can expect to grow and develop as it should without the aid of some organized effort.—Lubbock Avalanche.

Mayor J. R. Singleton, accompanied by Aldermen, I. S. Doak and W. L. Knight, are out of town this week on a paving inspection tour. Tahoka voted bonds several months ago and these gentlemen were sent out by the city to visit different cities and inspect the various kinds of paving, etc.

PLANTS NEED COLD WEATHER

Experiments Have Shown That in Northern Countries a Certain Amount is Essential.

According to common belief, cold weather causes plants to become dormant during the fall, while warm weather the succeeding spring again incites new growth. Intensive investigations of Dr. Frederick V. Coville of the federal Department of Agriculture, which have been conducted over a period of ten years, and which have covered every phase of this subject, demonstrate that both of these traditional theories are erroneous. Dormancy in our native trees and shrubs begins some time before the start of cold weather each winter; the appearance of Jack Frost is not necessary for the establishment of complete dormancy. Furthermore, after such a condition of dormancy has developed, exposure of the plants to the ordinary growing temperature thereafter does not arouse them from their lethargy so that they begin growth anew. Interestingly enough, the Coville experiments show that plants which have responded to the lure of autumnal and winter dormancy will not react properly and resume normal growth the following spring unless they are subjected during the interim to a period of chilling. A certain amount of cold is essential to stimulating the plant growth.—Scientific American.

LIARS PRETTY WELL MATCHED

American Evidently Found Fosman Worthy of His Steel, in Old English Farmer.

An American poultry farmer went over to England to have a look round the poultry farms there and see where the farmers were making mistakes. He did not hesitate to tell how far advanced was the art of poultry keeping in America, and spun several very tall yarns on that subject.

Twenty chickens from twelve eggs appeared to be an everyday occurrence in the United States, if the stories he told could be believed. But a bluff old English farmer was not unduly impressed. "Happen, maister," said the old man, "ye have never seen as many as a hundred chickens hatched by one hen at a setting?" "Waal," answered the American, "I can't say that I have, but—" "Well, then, listen here, maister; I have," returned the farmer. "Down Ipswich way we allus fill a barrel with eggs and set the old hen on the bung-hole!"—Houston Post.

CALOMEL GOOD BUT NEXT DOSE MAY SALIVATE

It Is Mercury, Quicksilver, Shocks Liver and Attacks Your Bones.

Calomel salivation is horrible. It swells the tongue, loosens the teeth and starts rheumatism. There's no reason why a person should take sickening salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel. It is a pleasant vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Calomel is a dangerous drug; besides, it may make you feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than treacherous calomel your money is waiting for you.—Advertisement.

A Question of Furniture

By H. IRVING KING

Charles and Marian had been getting along beautifully. Furniture was the rock on which they split. Or rather—to improve the metaphor—furniture was the rock which divided the stream of their tranquil love and split it into two angry torrents. It is always sad when love's young dream gets smothered in this way. They were humble people, Charles Corbin and Marian Clay. He was a bookkeeper working in the city ten miles away, and she "assisted" at the soda water fountain at the village pharmacy.

It was over the great marble counter in front of the fazing fountain that Charles fell in love with her. To see Marian draw a "raspberry plain" or confection a chocolate sundae was to see Hebe herself dispensing the nectar of the gods. At least that was the way it seemed to Charles. Their courtship had been a long one, for they had both been saving up to start housekeeping. And now Charles' father had given him a pretty cottage. Both Charles and Marian had each a nice little nest-egg laid aside, so they fixed the day and began to buy furniture for their nest with their nesteggs. Marian's parents approved and so did the parents of Charles. Charles received a raise of salary and Marian gave up her place at the soda water fountain. The buying of the furniture for the new home was a perfect penning orgy with the lovers. They spent care carelessly and wandered from one city furniture shop to another until they had examined and discussed enough sofas, chairs, tables, etc., etc., to have furnished the city hall. They agreed wonderfully well upon their selections, and when there happened to be a little difference of opinion upon the advisability of buying any certain piece they had a charming way of giving in to each other. Until it came to a question of one corner of the living room, then there came a jangling chord in the harmony; the music of their lives was laxed. Marian wanted to buy for that fatal corner a little three-cornered table they had seen in one of the city shops, while Charles decidedly fancied for the position one of those atrocious imitation mahogany pedestals with gilt trimmings. In a vision he saw himself able at some future time to place a marble bust upon it—possibly one that resembled Marian.

"But that's such a cheap-looking thing," said Marian, referring to the pedestal. "But it isn't cheap, my dear," replied Charles; "it is marked—" "I don't care what it costs," retorted Marian; "it looks cheap, and besides, it is in wretched taste." And so it went until Marian wrote Charles a letter saying that "all was over between them." She was of the opinion that they could never be happy together after marriage if before marriage "such a vital difference of taste and character" was apparent between them. She returned his engagement ring and "hoped he would be happy with some one more suited to him than herself." She would keep her key—they were both provided with keys to the cottage and had been accustomed to visit it separately or together whenever the fancy seized them to goat over their future paradise and revel in little touches of rearrangement—she would keep her key until they could arrange some division of the furniture; "upon that matter she would take proper advice." Charles wrote back stiffly begging that she would consider the furniture as hers entirely. It might come in handy when she was married to some one more worthy of her than himself. To this she replied that after that she would have nothing whatever to do with the "old furniture." But somehow she forgot to send him her key for the cottage.

Charles' father said: "Well, well, marry the girl or not, just as you please—but it's always best to let the woman run the house. They will do it anyway." Marian's mother said: "My dear, it's always best to humor men in little things—it makes them much easier to manage."

The cottage was all ready for occupancy—all ready except that fatal corner which, bare and blank, seemed to be casting a blight over the uninhabited house. One evening, Marian stole to the cottage, let herself in with her key and turned on the electric light in the living room—for they had even had the electric meter installed—and sat down in an armchair to gaze at the vacant corner. How well she remembered the day she and Charles had bought that armchair, and how happy they had been in the selecting of it. She sighed, fixed her eyes upon the corner and pictured to herself how hideous that gilt mahogany pedestal would look there and how sweet that triangular table.

It was about a week after this and a dark stormy night, when a military figure might have been seen creeping through the obscurity toward the unoccupied cottage. It was Charles Corbin, and he bore in his arms an awkward burden wrapped in burlap. He let himself into the front hall and opened the living room door. The room was a blaze of light which the closed blinds and drawn curtains had prevented him from noticing from the outside. There was a little scream of surprise and alarm and then stood Marian Clay with one hand on a gilt mahogany pedestal which she had just placed in the heretofore vacant corner.

"Marian," cried Charles, and dropped his burden so suddenly that part of the wrappings came off, revealing a little three-cornered table—the very one Marian had longed for. Whether the pedestal or the table ultimately stood in the corner is a question we leave in the same condition as Stockton left his celebrated question of "The Lady of the Tiger." One of them did, that is sure, for Marian and Charles were married within the week.

"KNOCKED OUT" THE PATIENT

Surgeons of Ancient Egypt Had Simple but Most Effective Way of Administering Anesthetic.

The use of anesthetics in surgical operations is not a modern invention. Surgeons of bygone days knew of anesthetics and used them thousands of years ago, according to an article in Hearst's International Magazine. They trephined skulls, they amputated arms, legs and performed the Caesarian operation, and they did all these things with the help of anesthetics. These ancient masters of surgery were without the very valuable chloroform and ether of modern times. They most commonly used vegetable drugs, such as morphine and hahnseh, or alcohol. The leaves of plants containing opium were preferred by the ancient races of South America.

The surgeons of ancient Egypt, probably the most skilled of antiquity, had a method of their own at once more direct and spectacular. They hit the patient on the head with a club, and operated while he was "out" as a result of the blow. Wooden blocks were fitted to the head to save injury to scalp and skin, and the mallet which hit the block was also made of wood.

The art of hitting just hard enough and at exactly the best point was a delicate one, and no doubt, the expert at this scientific black-jacking was as much respected in ancient Egypt as is the skilled anesthetist today in New York or Paris.

Grow Mushrooms in Old Quarries. South of the city of Paris the country is honeycombed with abandoned quarries, some of which are of enormous extent, resembling the shafts of great mines, and lying from 30 to 50 feet beneath the surface of the ground. In these old quarries are grown nearly all the mushrooms consumed in the French capital. The mushrooms flourish in these caverns all seasons and they have, in Paris, the reputation of being superior in flavor to those grown elsewhere. The worst enemy of the mushroom growers is a species of fly that swarms through the dark passages in such numbers as sometimes to extinguish the candles of the workmen. The larvae of this fly destroy the beds before the shoots have emerged from the ground.

Belief in Rain Cure. That the rain which falls on Ascension day contains medicinal qualities is a superstition which still survives in certain districts of England. In such places the first duty of the housewife on the morning of Holy Thursday is to set out in the garden all the available shallow crocks and pans to catch such measure of the precious fluid as the heavens may afford. Often her toil is vain, but if rain does come she water collected is carefully bottled and put away for use in various ailments. "Holy Water," as it is called, is especially esteemed as a lotion for eye troubles.

LESSON FOR SEPTEMBER 3

NEHEMIAH REBUILDS THE WALLS OF JERUSALEM
 LESSON TEXT—Neh. 3:1-7
 GOLDEN TEXT—Our God will fight for us.—Neh. 4:20.
 REFERENCE MATERIAL—Neh. 2:3-20; 4: Cor. 3:1-7.
 PRIMARY TOPIC—How God helped Nehemiah Build a Wall.
 JUNIOR TOPIC—How a City Wall Was Rebuilt.
 INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Praying, Watching, Working.
 YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Success Through Leadership and Cooperation.

Having secured a leave of absence from the Persian court, and credentials from the king, Nehemiah journeyed to Jerusalem. After resting three days without disclosing his purpose to any one, he made a survey of the walls by night. Having thus obtained first-hand information he called the representatives of the Jews together and said, "Let us build the walls of Jerusalem." He then made known the hand of providence in bringing him to Jerusalem with the authority to rebuild its walls. He thus showed great wisdom in finding out for himself the real conditions and what work would be required to restore the walls. The one who is qualified to lead in a great undertaking is the one who has mastered the situation and is thus able to remove objections and show how the work can be done.

1.—Preparation for the Building (ch. 3).

The division of labor in this project shows Nehemiah's administrative ability. A wise distribution of labor makes difficult tasks easy.

Note some outstanding features of this great work.

1. Stress Laid Upon Indifference (3:5). In administrative tasks it is just that unfaithfulness should be pointed out. Such action will be a warning to some and an encouragement to others by showing the integrity of the director.

2. Help Rendered by the Women (3:12). Perhaps Shalum had no sons to aid him. It is a fine thing for women to be able to take hold even in building a wall when there are no men to do it. God's word carefully notes such extraordinary acts.

3. Stress Laid Upon Earnestness of Some (3:24). If one knows that his faithfulness will be recognized he will earnestly pursue his tasks.

4. Every One Built Over Against His Own House (3:10, 23, 28). Man's chief concern is for his family. No incentive to exertion is quite so strong as that which concerns his own family.

5. Certain Guilds of Men Undertook Certain Work (ch. 3:8, 31, 32). Wise administration sometimes calls for such alignment of efforts. Men of the same class and craft will usually work better together.

11. Hindrances Encountered (4:1-6; 14).

1. Scoffing of Sanballat and Tobiah (4:1-6; cf. 2:19-20). The opposers of God's servants usually begin by hurling at them shafts of ridicule. They called the Jews but a feeble folk and asserted that the tread of a prowling fox would break down their stone wall.

2. Conspiracy of a Sudden Attack (4:7-9). When the enemy saw that the work was actually succeeding they changed from ridicule to an attempt to throw the workmen into a panic and thus hinder the work. When the enemy cannot succeed by scoffing then he resorts to intimidation.

3. Conspiracy With the Jews (4:10-23). They sought by means of the Jews from the outside to discourage their brethren by showing that the task was hopeless and that at any time they were subject to a sudden and secret attack.

4. Greed and Oppression of the Rulers (5:1-13). The Jews of that day, like the profiteers in the recent World war, took advantage of the poor and oppressed them so that they mortgaged their land and sold their daughters into slavery. Nehemiah boldly rebuked them for their crimes and ordered a restoration to be made, exacting an oath of them that they would fulfill their promises.

5. Scheme to Take Nehemiah's Life (6:1-14). When Sanballat and Tobiah failed in every other way they sought by craft to get Nehemiah away that they might kill him.

111. The Wall Completed (6:15-7:4). So energetically did they pursue their tasks that in fifty-two days the wall was completed. When the enemies heard that in spite of all their schemes the work was actually completed, they were cast down, for they perceived that the work was of God.

Find the Rock Beneath. The steps of faith fall on the seeming void, but find the rock beneath.—Whittier.

Empty. Four things are grievously empty: A head without brains, a wit without judgment, a heart without honesty, and a purse without money.—Earle.

Cultivate Forbearance. Cultivate forbearance till your heart yields a fine crop of it. Pray for a short memory to all unkindnesses.

IN FALL CLOTHES

Extensive Use of Bead Girdles Feature of New Garments.

Attractively Combined With Bright Blue and Red in the More Practical Numbers.

Waisted waists and longer skirts are being held responsible for many fall features, not least of which is the extensive use of bead girdles. The last Paris arrivals show girdles in truly beaded style and in narrower development than we have known them in the past. Large bead balls are used in carrying out the sash effects of many numbers, and these ornaments seem to be a typical note in advance showings.

The latest imports being displayed include many unusual tassels, that join hexagon jet beads with the plain match sticks to produce an irregular and very decorative trimming. One trimming that offers a novel feature is a beaded banding in scalloped effect that comes several inches deep. This banding is formed of prominent nail-head ornaments woven in latticed effect with smaller beads. One of the bead girdles that is at the moment receiving considerable attention in Paris, is a jet linked chain number of large dimensions.

Many tiny jet beads are so worked as to form a large link and many of these are joined in chain fashion to form the girdle. So real is the aspect of this model that one looks for an anchor finish instead of which deep jet tassels are used.

Instead of nailheads one finds the extensive use of whole beads being made in many of the new belts and girdles. Jet is invariably combined with bright blue and red in the more practical numbers. Many of these belts have been created solely for use with dresses of a tailored nature, which iridescent jet beads are employed in making many more intricate girdles, suitable for evening wear. Crystal, jet and gold are all combined in one distinctive belt that ends in a long effect with a long pendant

THE COMELY EVENING GOWN

Soft satin crepe or wondrous orchid, dignified by silver lace and deftly combined into long, graceful lines, makes this comely evening gown a work of art. An ornament of rhinestones tends to give brilliant effect.

drop that is fringed on the edge. The belt proper is made of crystal strings that hold alternating oblong and square ornaments in proper place. A bizarre effect is then produced by the presence of gold beads which form the center of the black ornaments. One of the old jet tassels introduced, by these imports ends in myriad beads of spear shape that are sharp and bright enough to look like tiny darts.

PARTY DRESS FOR TINY GIRL

Pale Pink Taffeta With Overslip of White Georgette Affords Most Winsome Outfit.

The tiny girl must have her party frock. One charming little dress seen recently had a foundation of palest pink taffeta, with overslip of white georgette caught on the shoulders with knots of pink ribbon flowers. The overslip was slashed to form panels, and each panel was edged with the soft lace. Another party frock was of yellow organdie, much ruffled about the skirt and with bloomer's ruffle trimmed. A self-fabric sash was tied at the back in a flaring bow.

Tiny girls, as well as boys, usually wear short socks that match their dresses or suits, or else white socks banded in color.

CRINOLINE IN RED BROWN

Flowers or Ribbon Ruching Are Used on This Type of Headgear by Paris Women.

Of the hats seen in smart places nowadays, writes a Paris correspondent, none is more a favorite than the crinoline in red-brown. Flowers or ribbon ruching are used on this type of hat, the shade of which is so accommodating that it can be and is worn with almost any color. Another type of hat is made entirely from black varnished lace, tightly stretched on wire. Sometimes the black lace hat is trimmed with nothing more than a narrow band of black satin ribbon with a bit of silver above it. Small hats in crepe de chine are usually in the same color as the costume.

LATE CREATION FOR KIDDIES

This is a frock of silk of dark colors, brightened with touches of brilliant colored embroidery. It is quite the smart and practical thing for the wee kiddie.

MORE DAINTY EACH SEASON

Chiffon Negligees, Dear to Milady's Heart, Add Interesting Touch to the Wardrobe.

It is a relief to refresh one's wardrobe with dainty garments, such as evening wraps, tea gowns and negligees. Summer interpretations of these have such a different character from the winter models. Then there are always the brides, who help to create a demand for these dainty things, and designers display new and lovelier garments each season.

All lace coats are smart for the bride's lounging robe, made with softly crushed ribbon collar and sometimes worn over a slip of silver cloth. This gives a pleasing variation from the former slip of plain color.

Lace is equally smart used as trimming on filmy chiffon, and need not form the entire coat. It appears sometimes in panel treatment, a lovely inset in chiffon model using a deep inset panel of mazarin chiffon down the entire front length, while two panels of tulle trail from the shoulders in the back and trail along the floor. Another inset lace to form a yoke which extends down over the shoulders, form-pants. Silver lace also appears above a chiffon corsage and short sleeves above a chiffon skirt and topped by a jaunty chiffon coat.

All chiffon models are visions of loveliness. They usually exploit the fine line, and many show crushed ribbon girdles which pass through slits in the upper layer of chiffon. Others have a top chiffon layer over a layer of charmeuse.

COLORS FOR THE SWEATERS

Beautiful Greens and Yellows are Included in the Charming Array Now Being Offered.

The silk sweater—which, after all is said and done, is the expression of the de luxe sweater that retains its championship title after all others have gone down under the count—appears in an array of delightful colors and patternings this season.

A special feature was made of these sweaters in an exceptionally charming collection of colors and patternings. Practically every color is admitted into the assemblage, although the exceedingly bright tones are passed over. Beautiful greens and yellows are included in the array, both in pale and more intense degrees of the colors.

One of the loveliest numbers was done in a deep buff color, with wide stripes in which were introduced a stitch producing a concave drop in the silken surface and forming a Sphinx-shaped motif.

Little Girl's Hat. Gingham hats for the very little girl are exceedingly attractive. They are made quite simple, with perhaps an organdie bow or a little wool embroidery as their only trimming. They are usually made up in a medium-sized, check.

Lace-Lined Parasols. Lace-lined parasols are a novelty from Paris. All the framework is concealed beneath very beautiful real lace. They are effectively used with black satin sunshades as well as delicately toned taffeta ones.

HomeTown Helps

BRING INDUSTRIES TO CITY

Wideawake Communities Realize the Value of Having the Best of Civic Institutions.

"Industry has come to recognize the commercial value of good schools, good housing, good planting, good churches and good health," B. Letcher Lambuth told fellow realtors at an industrial property conference at the national real estate convention in San Francisco.

"All of these," Mr. Lambuth said, "are safeguarded in the model industrial city. Gary schools are not only model educational institutions; they are a profitable investment, as far as the steel corporation contributes, directly or indirectly, to their construction and maintenance.

"Cities of this character are sometimes built to house the labor of a great industrial corporation, as in the case of Gary and Granite City; sometimes to develop business for a railroad, as in Kingsport, Tenn. Equal or greater, perhaps, in magnitude, although differing in scope, are the central industrial district and the clearing industrial district in Chicago and North Kansas City, Mo.

"Each of these, and many others with which I am not familiar, are major real estate operations which, in the end when properly designed and administered, will rival in interest and sometimes in profit the original operation which they were designed to supplement and serve.

"Their great interest lies in the fact that they isolate and demonstrate the factors which make for the success of commercial and industrial cities.

"Permanent and productive industry is a combination of capital, labor and management. Management selects a location where raw materials may be assembled, manufactured and marketed most conveniently and profitably. Commerce and business serve industry.

"Cities are trade centers, points where raw materials may be assembled, manufactured and marketed with the greatest convenience and economy. There capital and labor and management congregate.

"The prosperity and growth of cities depend upon their ability to attract and sustain business, commerce and industry."

ATTRACTED BY ZONED TOWN

Statistics Show That the Idea Has Gone Far Beyond the Status of Experiment.

To avoid the common condition that industrial plants encounter of having to do business on a "residential basis," denied large-scale facilities in their vicinity on account of protests by residence owners, Alameda, Calif., with other cities, has established industrial zones in which no new permits to build residences will be granted. A leading municipal engineer is quoted as saying that the prohibition of residences in industrial zones is one of the most important protections to put in a zoning ordinance. This method is being relied on to develop Hoboken, N. J., as a great industrial terminal.

In New Jersey it has been found that the unzoned suburban town is at a distinct disadvantage as compared with the community protected by a zoning ordinance. People are asking themselves why they should invest money in a home or lend money on a mortgage in an unprotected, unzoned locality. The zoned towns are actually absorbing the better grade of development. The result has been that builders, architects and real-estate owners in unzoned towns persistently urge their local councils to adopt zoning, so that they may have as good a selling proposition to offer prospective clients as their competitors in the zoned towns.

Information concerning zoning progress in states and cities of the United States has been made available by the division of building and housing of the Department of Commerce at Washington, D. C. A selected bibliography of zoning is issued by the division and may be obtained on application.

Making a Lawn.

The use of a light sprinkling of nitrate on the lawn is the best and quickest way to produce a luxuriant stand of blue-green sward early in the season. The action of the nitrate of soda may be noted if a lump of the nitrate is dropped on the lawn. In a short time it will be observed that there will be a tuft of thicker, ranker growth about this spot. The main design in sprinkling nitrate upon the lawn should be in even distribution.

Speaking Movies.

Speaking movies on a new principle, said to be not unlike the transmission of photographs over telegraph lines, are being produced in Germany. Light waves are converted into sound waves and amplified.

THAT WAS ASKING TOO MUCH

Bishop Probably Had Read That "Much Shall Be Forgiven," but Really, Professor Jones!

An English clergyman now visiting this country tells a story of an eminent Church of England ecclesiastic now dead, who on the occasion of the gathering of the British association, invited the members to an entertainment at his place. He sent no card to one member of the association, who, thinking that he was the victim of an oversight, mentioned the matter to a mutual friend.

"I will speak to the bishop and make that right," said the friend. "It was a mere accident."

He did speak to the bishop, to this effect: "By some mischance, Professor Jones has not been invited to the entertainment. Of course you mean him to come?"

"No, indeed, I do not," said the bishop. "Nothing can induce me to ask under my roof a man who has defended the execution of Socrates!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Self-Confidence an Asset.

Have not too low thoughts of thyself. The confidence a man hath of his being pleasant in his demeanor is a means whereby he infallibly cometh to be such.—Burton.

Labor's worst enemy is the working man who won't work.

Conceit may be deceptive, but it is rarely perceptive.

MADE NO SORT OF APPEAL

Colored Messenger Couldn't See Where the "Sport" Came In, in That Kind of Fishing.

In a government office in Washington one day a Californian was discussing on the sport of fishing off the Pacific coast.

"We all get out in small motorboats," said he, "and fish with a long line baited with flying fish. Anything less than a hundred-pound tuna isn't considered good sport."

A colored messenger had been listening with great interest to this conversation.

"Excuse me, boss," he said, wide-eyed, as he stepped up to the group, "but did I understand you to say that you were fishin' for hundred-pound fish in a little motorboat?"

"Yes," said the Californian, "we go out frequently."

"But," urged the messenger, "ain't you all afeared you might ketch one?"—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Emergency Call.

Alicia is very much interested in a disappearing stairway in grandma's new bungalow which leads to a loft above, used for sleeping quarters in an emergency. So the other evening when a carload of relatives drove up just at dark Alicia said:

"O, grandma, you might as well turn on the stairs—here's seven all-night-ers."

To talk about the weather expresses amiability; and nobody knows what silence expresses.

Trouble Ahead.

During the recent visit to Washington of a Frenchman and his wife, the gentlemen having been sent to this country on official business, there occurred an interesting event.

At the hospital the nurse in attendance called out to Maria, an Irish woman employed about the place:

"Maria, do come here and see a French baby born in Washington." Whereupon Maria came over and surveyed the wee bit of humanity. Then compassionately, she observed: "Poor little darlint; it's a great perplexity ye'll be to yourself, I'm thinkin', when you begin sphakin'!"—Exchange.

Confirmed Woman Hater.

Estes Snedecor, president of the International Association of Rotary Clubs, said at a luncheon in New York:

"I would not admit a misogynist to our great organization. Woman is the home builder, not the home destroyer, and any man who takes the latter view of her is a fool. No fool is worthy to be a Rotarian. "I was talking to one of these fool misogynists the other day. "There goes young Kall, I said. 'He's got $40,000 a year, and yet he won't have anything to do with women.' "That," said the fool misogynist, 'is why he has $40,000 a year.'"—Detroit Free Press.

The spirit of delight comes often on small wings.

A silk hat will make any man seem like somebody else.
