Sleep Soldier Sleep

Sleep, soldier, sleep, beneath the flag
Your valor has maintained;
Yours is an honor little guessed
Upon that bygone day
When with a lightly beating heart
Allegiance you proclaimed
To every star and every bar,
And proudly marched away.

The thousands wait in foreign lands,
A white cross at each head,
And wild blooms are the only flowers
These fallen ones may know;
But destiny has brought you home
To represent each bed
Wherein a silent sleeper rests—
There where the poppies grow.

Man has but one sweet life to live,
But one brave death to die,
And millions pass the portals through
Whose lives have been no gain;
But you are like a privileged son,
Accorded honors high,
Your nation bows in homage true,
And chants your lordly fame.

Sleep, soldier, sleep! Your splendid death
Holds portent for the years,
And men meet men beside your bier
With visions in their eyes.
What value has life's fleeting breath,
Beside a nation's fears?
Yours is the victory of the great—
Inspiring sacrifice?

Sleep, soldier, in your narrow bed,
Your nation's flag unfurled above;
While praise of you is ever sped
The world around, in love.
—Portland Oregonian.

SEVERE WIND STORM HITS TAHOKA FRIDAY EVENING

Friday evening just before dark, a severe wind storm struck Tahoka and the surrounding communities, doing considerable damage to property over the city. The worse damage done was completely demolishing the new brick home of W. O. Thomas, which was under construction in North Tahoka, tearing the walls down, and making it necessary to rebuild the structure from the ground up. We understand the brick work would have been completed on Monday following. This damage was quite a loss to Mr. Thomas. Many windmills over the city were demolished during the hurricane, also outhouses and other small buildings were blown down. The high wind is said to have damaged young cotton over the county, making it necessary for some to plant over.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

Beautiful Spots in Which Repose American Soldiers

There is no fairer spot on all the hard-fought battle line in France than that northern slope of Belleau wood where still rest the bodies of many brave Americans.

There are plenty of other spots in France that Americans will always visit and revisit. The great cemeteries of Romagne and Suresnes are poignant beyond words. The glory of Belleau wood is that here, by the side of our hallowed dead, stands as a natural monument to American valor that jungle of stone, tree and brush through which our troops grimly fought their way in one of their first and most critical engagements of the great war.

Our men fought as brilliantly, as doggedly, in the Argonne and at a score of points. Here at Belleau wood lies a spot that can stand for all, close by the highroad from Paris to Chateau-Thierry, not far from the Marne, and amid a scene of peace and beauty worthy of its precious and immortal burden.

Beautiful Burial Place

The eight cemeteries in Europe, in which are 30,000 American soldier dead, are maintained so splendidly that they are models for the other nations that participated in the World war. The French secretary of war recently told Colonel Rethers, in charge of the graves registration service in Europe, that the American cemetery at Romagne was the most impressive one he had ever seen. The American government has done all in its power to make the burial places beautiful.

Six are in France, one is in Belgium and the other is in England. Most of the French plots were selected to commemorate the battles fought in the vicinities. The cemetery at Romagne represents the Argonne fighting, the one at Thiacourt the battle of St. Mihiel. There is one at Belleau wood, significant of the action there; one at Nesles, about 25 miles north of Chateau-Thierry; one at Suresnes, near Paris, in which are buried those who died in the hospitals around Paris, and one at Bouy, in which are the dead of the Twenty-seventh and Thirtieth divisions, which fought with the English.

The Flanders Field cemetery, in southern Belgium, contains the bodies of 365 Americans who fought with the English in Belgium. The eighth of the cemeteries is in Brookwood, England, containing the bodies of 435 Americans who died in the British Isles.

Cemetery at Romagne

The cemetery at Romagne contains the largest number of bodies, 13,977. It covers 130 acres. The next largest is at Nesles, which covers 48 acres and contains the bodies of 6,033. In all there are 30,511 American soldiers, sailors and marines buried in Europe. Of this number only 1,600 or about 2 per cent, are unknown dead. The number of unknown dead was reduced by 200 during the year. It is possible others of the dead will be identified as investigations proceed. Every effort is being made to gain new identifications. Descriptions taken at the time of burial are being checked up with descriptions obtained from army papers and from relatives of those who fell. The work is slow and tedious, but is bringing some results.

Except where unknown dead are being identified no more bodies are being returned to the United States. The War department feels that if permission for the return of bodies were to continue the cemeteries would be in a constant upheaval and their beauty would be marred. But it is only fair to the relatives of soldiers newly identified that they be given the opportunity of having the bodies returned.

Few American Dead "Unknown"

In comparison with that of the other armies in the World war the number of American unknown dead is small. About 2 per cent of American dead are "unknowns." The French and British proportion is about 30 per cent.

In the American army the soldiers were required to wear two identification tags, one on a string around the neck and the other on the wrist. Most of the men wore the tags, but here and there were men who did not. The men in the British and French armies were much more lax in this regard than were the Americans.

The army bill carries an appropriation for the maintenance of the American cemeteries in Europe. Approximately 150 men are employed in the work. Nine are American army officers and the others, except for an army sergeant in charge of motor transportation, are civilians. A central office is maintained in Paris.

Difficulty has been experienced in getting grass to grow in some of the cemeteries. It is evident that sprinkling systems will have to be installed. At Romagne it was necessary to plant grass six times. To make the cemetery presentable for the large number of American visitors the expedient of planting rye was resorted to temporarily.

In the French cemeteries the bodies are buried in individual graves, with just mounds over them without grass. But the French intend to adopt the American idea of a beautiful lawn

Day Recognized as Belonging to All Who Served Nation

Memorial day is generally observed throughout the world this year, due in large part to the efforts of the American Legion, according to the following announcement made at Legion headquarters at Indianapolis:

"Originally designated by the Union veterans of the Civil war as a particular decoration day for their fallen comrades, May 30 gradually has become a day set apart in memory of all Americans who died for their country. Although it has long been the custom of many southern states to observe a memorial holiday of their own on April 20, the tendency to a uniform observance has been apparent since the World war. The Legion, composed of both the North and the South, officially adopted May 30 as its Memorial day and posts of the World War men on both sides of the Mason-Dixon line have, for the last three years, simultaneously honored the dead of the Civil, Spanish-American and World wars.

May 30 International Holiday

"When the Inter-Allied Veterans' federation, made up of World war veterans of France, England and Canada, Italy and the others of the allied nations and of which the Legion is a member, adopted the Legion's date for the observance of rites for the dead, May 30 became an international holiday, comparable only in universal observance to Christmas. In the years to come it will be observed by Legion posts and allied veterans' organizations in the following countries other than the United States: Canada, Belgium, France, Poland, Turkey, Mexico, Argentina, Brazil, British Isles, Chile, China, Cuba, Guatemala, Japan, Peru, Porto Rico, Portuguese West Africa, Santo Domingo, Spanish Honduras, India, Venezuela and the Canal Zone, Hawaii, Philippine Islands and the territory of Alaska.

"As it did last year and the year before, the Legion will decorate and hold appropriate exercises over the grave of every American who sleeps on foreign soil, as well as thus honoring the graves of American and allied veterans who are buried in the cemeteries of this country. Legion posts in France, Belgium, Poland and Turkey will visit old battlefields and adjacent cemeteries.

Huge Task Completed

"The United States graves registration service has completed its huge task of returning to this country the bodies of 42,023 of the A. E. F. who died overseas, but 30,000 Americans still remain permanently buried in cemeteries of the allied nations.

"To finance the Memorial day decoration of graves overseas, each of the Legion's 11,000 posts was asked to subscribe an amount equal to five cents for each of its members. A central committee of the Legion in France will receive the funds from this country and have charge of decorating the individual graves.

"Several months before Memorial day Hanford MacNider, national commander of the Legion, sent each post a request that exercises this year be made as personal as possible. "With this end in view," Mr. MacNider wrote, "the Legion is ready to make special efforts to aid relatives and friends who think on Memorial day not so much of the whole army of the dead as they will of some one youth who went forth to fight and did not come back."

All Veterans to Be Honored

"Gold star parents, desiring that special attention be paid to the graves of their departed, requesting a certain type of floral decoration or religious ceremony, were asked to communicate their wishes to the organization's national headquarters, from which they were relayed to the legion post nearest the place of burial.

"The Legion will not confine its exercises and decorations to the memory of World war heroes alone. The graves of all veterans of all American wars will be visited and decorated and fittingly honored. Last year the organization requested its posts and units of the Legion auxiliary to seek out, in each community, graves of all American soldier and sailor dead and to prepare charts showing where such graves were located and how they could be reached. The efforts of the World war men have resulted in many graves of Civil war veterans being rescued from obscurity and the graves of several veterans of 1812, long since forgotten, have been found and restored.

Bodies Abroad Cared For

"A similar plan of keeping a close and honored watch on graves of Americans buried overseas has been evolved. There will be in France four principal cemeteries wherein men of the A. E. F. will sleep forever. At present a special fine arts commission is working on the project which will entail, for the collection of bodies and the beautification of cemeteries.

To the Torchbearers

Once more we'll do them honor,
Again we'll sing their praise—
These brave who scorned life's pleasures
And lived laborious days
At last they know the answer
Men find who die to save—
The soldier's path of glory
Doth not end at the grave!
The path continues onward
Beyond the gates of dawn;
The Great Adventure leads them
Into a newer morn.
They follow it with ardor
Beyond the Day Star's gleam,
And in the cosmic twilight
They find the Fields of Dream.
Weep not for these knights errant
Who bravely went to roam,
For they are all together
Safe in the Port of Home.
To us the loss is bitter,
But theirs is greater gain:
They have outsoared earth's shadows,
Of envy, hate and pain.
We bare our heads in homage,
In reverence bend the knee,
For those who fought the fight
That all men might be free,
And while spring zephyrs murmur
Of sacrifice sublime,
We deck their mounds with laurels
Each year in lilac time.
—John H. McGough, in the New York Times.

"When I feel stupid, get constipated, or bilious, I take a good dose of two of Black-Draught and it sets me straight," writes Mr. George B. Haislep, of R. F. D. 2, Columbia, S. C. and the good medicine it was, I had been having a tired feeling when I'd get up in the morning. I would be stiff and sore, and had a slimy, bad taste in my mouth, but didn't think so much of it till I began to feel stupid and didn't feel like eating—then I knew I needed medicine. It was then I began Black-Draught, and I felt all made over, ready for any kind of work, ready to eat and sleep. So, for any return of this trouble, I take Black-Draught, and for 25 years it has been my medicine, and I wouldn't be without it at all. My work is constant. I am on my feet a lot. Home Talent Chautauqua

By Phebe K. Warner

Have you ever made a study of the entertainment problem of your county? First, what does your county depend annually to entertain itself? We understand that entertainment is a voluntary act. You can go and pay for it or you can stay away and save your money. Most folks evidently devote to be entertained, and pay the price out of their own pocket.

Second, what is your entertainment in your county? Where does it come from? Is it constructive or destructive? Do the people of your home town and county select the entertainments and the entertainers that come to your county as they select the ministers for their churches, the teachers for their school, the officers for the county and city or the man on the farm who is to care for the stock? Most of us want a little something to say about who will be our pastor and the kind of fellow he is. Or who will be our teacher and the kind of person he is. And as a rule we do a lot of scrapping about who will act as sheriff, or tax collector, or county judge, or city weighor. And if we are high enough up in society to own a herd of registered cattle we will be pretty hard to please when it comes to hiring a man to look after them. But who selects the entertainments that comes to your town? Who passes on the quality and character of the entertainers? And why do we all have so much imported entertainment?

Third, who pays the bill?

Now, we do not know how to answer any of these questions. That's why we are asking you. All we know is a few comparative facts. And we are persuaded to believe that very few people in any community compute the cost of their entertainment. This, we believe, is because going to and paying for an entertainment is a voluntary act. You do not have to go unless you want to bad enough to pay for it yourself. And since everybody drifts into the entertainment and pays his dime or dollar, as the case may be, none of us take much interest in what it is costing the other fellow or what his money is bringing to our town.

There are hundreds of kinds of entertainments in our county. And most of the entertainment in every county is imported from some city or some other part of the country. There is the circus and the lecture course, the concerts, the chautauquas, the social events and home entertainments. Then there is the home talent entertainment. But we are going to use just one species of entertainment here by way of comparison and that is the picture show of today.

Here are two plain facts we want you think about: First, The people of the United States spend $1,000,000,000 annually to support the free public schools for all the children of our nation.

Second, The people of the same nation spend annually almost $1,000,000,000 for one form of entertainment alone—the moving picture show. And every day almost you hear somebody complaining about the cost of our school. But you seldom ever hear a whole community of county complaining about the cost of the picture show. Now, we wonder why that is?

There is another interesting comparison between the public school and the wrong kind of a picture show. In the case of the school about a half million of the chief actors receive less than $1,000 salary a year. While in the picture show far less than a thousand actors receive some of the highest salaries in the United States. Why is that?

Now, we would like to ask you another question. How many people in your county contribute to the big salaries of the movie stars? And how much does your county contribute annually to the support of the moving picture stars and their business? Figure it up. All right. Now, how many people in your county contribute to the salary of a music teacher, an art teacher, an expression teacher, or a band master to develop the talent that lies in the youth of the county? Suppose twenty-five per cent of the money we spend for imported, uncensored non-selected entertainment were used to employ music, expression and art teachers for all the children in the country and a band master in every county to train the boys to love and play patriotic music, what effect do you suppose it would have on the youth of the county? Do you honestly believe that we would spend a part of our entertainment budget on the development and training of our own children that they in turn would furnish the home folks with as good or better entertainment than a lot we import every year at a big price? In other words, are we not guilty of contributing to the big salaries of a few people outside of our homes, and our own schools, our own churches and our own community, to the moral, mental and social neglect and detriment of our own children? Are not most of us voluntarily spending as much cash for the inflated salaries of a few people as we are spending on our children's education? Are we out spending cold cash for the development of some cold blooded syndicate that never contributes a penny to the support of our school or church or our home or our community instead of spending a part of it at least to develop the talents and make better entertainers of our own children.

A billion dollars annually for one form of entertainment in one nation! What would half that amount do for all the children of this land?

Compare this amount to the cost of our public schools. It would put a good piano in every school. It would give an expression teacher, an art teacher and a music teacher to all the children in this nation. It would furnish a band master for every city and county in the nation. It would not only discover but it would develop the talent in more than 22,000,000 school children. But we don't do it. Because it is a voluntary act we keep on spending our millions on a few special stars and let our own children go through life without their rarest gifts ever having been developed at all. Instead of making entertainers of our own we allow their talents to become paralyzed and finally die without them while we continue to support the scandals of Hollywood. And eventually drive our own children into lives of crime by neglecting their finer natures to support some of the worst criminals in the world in vice and luxury. Then what? Then we pay the price again in sorrow and shame and taxation for the lessons our children learn at the picture show.

FORD LEAPS OFF CAPROCK

Sunday afternoon Oscar Moyers narrowly escaped death when his Ford car became uncontrollable and leaped off a bluff, crashing to the bottom over 200 feet. The accident happened just as you go down the hill at Log Cabin out on Blanco Canyon. There was no one in the car but Oscar Moyer. He was returning to pick up a party that had been taking dinner and camping out for the day. When he found he could not hold the car he turned loose and jumped to safety. The car was completely demolished.—Crosbyton Review.

The Santa Fe and the Car Supply for 1923

Everyone in Santa Fe territory is asking if we are going to have cars enough when the usual heavy business comes this year.

We hope to have them, but—

Our ability to furnish cars depends not only on our own efforts, but on the ability of all the roads in the United States to function properly. For three years the railroads have been struggling slowly forward. They are beginning to see daylight. Since January 1st, nearly 10% more cars of commercial freight have been handled than in the corresponding months of 1920, the record year. In the same months the car shortage has been reduced by one-half. These figures mean constructive effort by both shippers and carriers.

In this program the Santa Fe is—

Providing new engines and cars; enlarging its shops; building second track wherever congestion is liable; and enlarging its yards and other facilities. In addition it is making every effort to reduce its "bad order" cars and locomotives to less than the normal number, to get the greatest number of miles per day out of its cars, and to get as heavy loading per car as possible. If what we have set out to do can be accomplished all over the country, the question of the car supply is solved, but to reach that goal the shippers must help.

We therefore ask all Shippers to—

Load promptly and to capacity of the car whenever practicable; Unload without delay; Ship early in the season for road and building construction and for coal storage and like purposes; Increase storage facilities; Order only the number of cars that can be loaded daily; and Avoid shipping under "to order bills of lading" and reconsignments as far as possible.

Trimmings Hold Sway on Frocks

One's view of the spring gowns gives the impression that there is no decided change in silhouette. Upon further examination, says a fashion writer in the New York Times, the intricacies of detail and trimming begin to stand out. A frock may be as plain as a pipe-stem to all outward appearance when in reality it is a combination of needles so cleverly put together that they create a thing of great beauty.

Many of the gowns are cut on the simplest of all possible patterns—in essence the one-piece dress. Then they adopt some sort of original trimming. It is hard to say what is the favorite trimming. Embroidery, in the spring openings, has held the foremost place, but it is not put on in any stereotyped manner. It is tucked into odd corners or made to flame out in conspicuous places, and sometimes it goes so far as to cover a whole gown or coat, but it is best when done by hand with all that attention to stitching which the feminine mind loves so well and which cannot help but make a costume the more beautiful.

On coats both long and short, there is much embroidery and it is not always of the sort that covers a garment. Indeed, the wide cuffs and the collar often will be covered with embroidery and the rest of the coat left plain. Again, there are unadorned lines on the coat, except the sleeves, and they will be resplendent with embroidery in the most vivid of colorings.

This idea extends itself to dresses, where the sleeves are often the sole trimming, done in the most stunning of embroidered patterns. One of these is made of shiny black satin with the severest of cuts, the bodice and the little sleeves cut to fit snugly. There are added puffed and full sleeves of white chiffon in two layers, to which have been added embroidery in an applique manner, some pieces of brightly colored silk with some long, effective stitches of gorgeous silken threads added to complete the embroidered effect.

Belts and Waistcoats.
For three-piece suits there are embroidered belts and embroidered waistcoats. One lovely blouse was made of dark blue silk crepe with a whole bib front composed of a panel of Chinese embroidery, straight from a Chinatown shop. This, when the jacket was left open, showed its colorful stitches with the best effect, and when the jacket was removed altogether it became an effective ornament for the blouse as a part of what appeared to be a complete and well-thought-out dress.

Embroideries of all countries are fashionable and the Egyptian is not more popular than the Indian or the Belgian or the Viennese, for that matter. Each one takes its place. Blouses are covered with embroidery and with all other sorts of trimming. Some of the latter waists to be worn with tailored skirts or suits are made from what seems to be two squares of silk, put together with rows of double hemstitching, edging wide hems. There may be a monogram somewhere on the front of the blouse to give it a mark of distinction and to add a touch of embroidery.

A long-waisted blouse designed as a possible part of a three-piece suit had medallions of silver embroidery worked at irregular intervals over its bright green surface. Then the sleeves, which were short, had edgings of that same silver embroidery and facings of deep purple silk just to add another contrast of color. This, after all, merely was a suggestion, for the purple tone showed only at the rarest intervals.

Ribbons are the most used of all trimmings, for there is hardly a gown of the present season that does not show a bit of ribbon somewhere. That ribbon may be only a facing more or less obscured or a series of loops and bows. But at any rate it cannot be denied that ribbon is an important factor in the making of all sorts and conditions of spring and summer frocks, whether its use be lavish or restrained.

Even the tailored suits are showing bindings of ribbon, and some of the heavier top coats have ribbon to form their edges and to tie them together, serving in the place of the buttons which one might expect.

In one instance a series of narrow cream lace flutings has been used to make the trimming of the neck and sleeves of a taffeta gown, giving it an appearance of the greatest charm and beauty. It is the best of the modern fashions. The same sort of ruffling has been applied to the hat in rosettes that cover the ears.

The well-known "little" dresses are the ones which come out spectacularly with the use of ribbon as trimming. They may have nothing more than a binding of ribbon about the neckline and the sleeves, but that is always of a color in contrast to the one used for the gown. The effect of one shade against the other serves to provide the distinctive note that carries the gown past all criticism into the realm of smartness.

Loops of ribbon have been added to straight-line gowns in row after row, providing a bit of trimmed effect that, after all, being of the same color as the gown itself, serves only to create a little variety in the quality and tone of the costume. Not only dresses but coats have been handled in this manner. On one of the little short coats a series of ribbon loops forms the rolling collar, becoming as a frame for the face. More of the loops are applied as flaring cuffs for the tightly-fitted sleeves, and to the lower edges of the short jacket bunches of the same ribbon have been applied at the spots where pockets ought to be. As a matter of fact tiny pockets are hidden underneath the first two rows of ribbon loops, but they serve only as an excuse for repetition of the ribbon trimming. Long ribbon ends have been used to tie the coat together under the chin and to fly away almost to the bottom of the coat.

The severest sort of tailored coats are surprisingly tied together at the waist-line with large bows of ribbon and long swaying ends that form the only trimming for the wrap. Then there are ribbon facings which appear only on the under side of the little jackets and longer coats.

Ribbons for sashes are obvious enough, but in the way that they are used this season they seem to take on a new expression and meaning.

Sash Bows Are Used.

There are sash bows at the sides of costumes, there are those which appear directly in front and then there are those, wide and spreading, posed directly in the middle of the back only to drip long ends which in many cases serve to cover the surface of the skirt. These are used with dresses of all sorts so long as they are meant for dress or semi-dress occasions where the fussiness of ribbon sashes would not be considered out of place.

Facings of color have been used with effects of untold beauty. There will be seen a gown which is altogether sombre upon its first appearance but with facings of the most brilliant hue that show only when the wearer moves about or poses at this angle or that. They are made of soft silks and of chiffon and are applied to gowns meant for formal occasions as well as to those meant only for the strictest sort of street wear. Panels on skirts are faced with color. Necklines and the wide endings of sleeves show brilliant touches of facing. Wide, draped belts will be faced with brilliant colors which show only at rare intervals, and even the lower edges of skirts often will reveal that they have

Contrasting materials have been wedded in the making of the modern gowns to the end that they form trimmings by their very combination. There will be a printed silk, to choose the most obvious example, against a plain and dark material the one forming the upper half and the other the lower half of the dress. Then there will be a brilliantly toned silk used with a black or deep blue silk or a tied and dyed fabric used along with something that is dull in tone, the two by reason of their contrast making the dress and its trimming without any thought of additional features.

Laces and organdies and all sorts of lingerie trimmings are important as trimmings for the newer gowns and they take us into the Victorian era by reason of the designs in which they have been made. There are many tiny lace ruffles, from those that wind round and round into rosettes to trim little hats or sweet girlish dresses, to those posed upon dresses in succeeding rows to make the trimming for the whole costume.

LOVELY WEDDING GOWNS; REVIEW OF SUIT STYLES

An Exquisite Wedding Gown

THE brides of this June, like those of other Junes, are privileged to make a comprehensive review of styles that are up-to-the-minute or those of bygone periods, when they consider their wedding cortege. At least ninety per cent of them will choose the alluring modes of today, for the past has nothing lovelier to offer. They will be married in gowns sufficiently dignified for the occasion but modish enough to be used afterward for evening wear.

Less attention to tradition and more to the matter of becomingness and individual taste, is the rule of the hour for choosing wedding gowns. Many of them are made of crepe de chine, simple as to line, revealing wonderful craftsmanship in their drapery or embellished with pearl and crystal embroidery. The traditional white satin is used and often adds to its sheen the shimmer of silver lace. An example of this appealing combination appears in the exquisite wedding gown pictured here. In this model lace and satin revealed distinctly different sources of inspiration, and fashion has chosen a few of them as favorites. The straight skirt and its accompanying straight-line coat, with standing collar and wide sleeves, is rivaled by the plain or plaited skirt with a box coat, and both these styles in coats are worn with one-piece dresses, having bodices of silk and skirts of material like the coat. Great names sponsor the three-piece suit having a cape instead of a coat, but the most popular of all styles appears in the Jaquette suit like that one pictured here. It is very "livable," either with a skirt and blouse or a one-piece frock with silk bodice, to be worn under the Jaquette.

Any of the twills and smooth-faced suitings are adapted to the Jaquette suit which is shown in a charming version in the illustration. A plain front panel is formed in the skirt by two deep plaits at each side and it is of sensible walking length. The plaits are pressed down, achieving the slender, play equally conspicuous parts in the construction of a simply designed but distinctive dress. It has a long bodice of satin with a deep berth of silver lace, making sleeves unnecessary. The full, straight skirt is very long and slightly trained, but, in nearly all models, skirts escape the floor and are fashionably draped.

The Jaquette Suit

The veil of tulle, falling from a cap of silver lace, is very long and supports small sprays of orange blossoms that are posed on the train. The bride has chosen a white prayer book with markers of white satin ribbon, in which little sprays of lilies of the valley are tied. Fashion approves either the prayer book or a bouquet. Gloves are eliminated and plain slippers of white satin are worn—they may have little sprays of orange blossoms as an ornament. Or, if the wedding gown is embroidered with pearls and crystals, they carry out this decoration, while plain satin slippers may have silver heels. Jewels are not worn unless the groom has presented his bride with a strand of pearls or a pendant that adds to the beauty of the ensemble.

As the styles in suits for spring and summer passed in review, they straight line which appears to have bewitched the feminine world, but the plaits allow plenty of freedom for walking. Soutache braid contributes the adornment, in a strictly tailored finish, for this Jaquette and the side-sash is made of the cloth.

LESSON FOR MAY 27

ISAIAH, THE STATESMAN AND PROPHET

LESSON TEXT—Isaiah 6:1-13.
GOLDEN TEXT—Here am I, send me.—Isaiah 6:8.

REFERENCE MATERIAL—II Chronicles 26:22; 32:20; Isaiah 1:5; 7:1-17; 8:1-4; 9:1-7; 11:1-10.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Isaiah Who Was Ready.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Isaiah's Call to Service.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Isaiah's Work for His People.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Isaiah, the Statesman and Prophet.

I. Isaiah's Vision of the Lord (vv. 1-4).

No one's ministry will ever be fruitful until he has had a vision of Jehovah. The scope of his tasks and the power to perform services will be lacking until he sees God.

1. He Saw the Lord on His Throne (v. 1). The prophet's gaze penetrated to the very throne of the eternal. We need not so much know things concerning God as to have a vision of Him, even to see Him on His throne. Surely now, as perhaps never before, with the awful darkness settling down upon the world and the foundations of culture and civilization, institutions and governments are tottering, we need a vision of the enthroned Lord.

2. He Saw the Seraphim Above (vv. 2, 3). Whatever form or rank these things have, they clearly are ministers of the Most High. Their standing indicates that they were in readiness to do His bidding. Their equipment with six wings shows the celerity with which they executed His will. In the Divine presence they find different uses for wings. One pair was needed to veil the seraph's head from the "intolerable effulgence" of the glory. One pair veiled the feet, which had been soiled in the execution of the commission. The third pair was suspended in midair while waiting to depart on any errand which the Lord willed. All ceaselessly cried, "Holy, holy, holy." The supreme attribute of Jehovah is holiness. It is for this that His creatures worship and adore Him. The treble repetition doubtless refers to the triune God. Holy is the One who created us, holy is the One who redeemed us and holy is the One who sanctifies and keeps us. From the position of God's throne they see the whole earth filled with His glory.

3. He Saw Manifestations of Majesty (v. 4). As the holy ones cried the very door posts moved and the temple was filled with smoke. Smoke indicates the Divine presence in anger (Ex. 19:8; 29:18). This indicated that the selfishness, idolatry and ingratitude of Israel provoked God's anger.

II. Isaiah's Conviction of Sin (v. 6). When the prophet got a vision of the holy God he was smitten with a sense of sin. This is always true. The reason that men think well of themselves is that they have never seen God. Face to face with the Lord, Isaiah saw himself as wholly vile. He realized that he had sinned in speech and, if in speech, then in heart, therefore the cry of despair. He was not only guilty himself, but was living in the midst of an unclean people.

III. Isaiah Cleansed From Sin (vv. 6, 7).

Having been convicted of sin and having made confession of it, a burning coal was taken from the altar to purge away his sin. His penitential guilt was forgiven and removed. Those unclean lips were refined by fire and, with pure speech, he expressed the holy thoughts of God. Only fire from God's altar can purge us from our sins.

IV. Isaiah's Call.

God did not call the prophet until after he was cleansed. The purged soul is the soul ready for the Lord's service. Indeed, the unconvicted, unforgiven and uncleaned soul cannot even hear the Divine call for service.

V. Isaiah's Dedication (v. 8).

Following the cleansing from sin there was the quick response for service. The one purged and sanctified and made meet for the Master's use readily responds to the call of God. They did not inquire as to the issue, did not desire to see the end from the beginning, but with freedom came forward to serve.

VI. Isaiah's Commission (vv. 9-13).

The previous outlook was not promising. He shrank back from the responsibility and instantly cried, "How long, Lord?" The people were steeped in selfishness and the Lord assured him that their blindness and sin, though long, would not continue forever. The people would go on in sin, to be taken captive and the land be made desolate.

Economy.

The regard one shows economy is like that we show an old aunt who is to leave us something at last.—Shenstone.

Conscience.

The worm of conscience is the companion of the owl. The light is shunned by sinners and evil spirits only.—Schiller.

Neighborly Love.

Love your neighbor, yet pull not down your hedge.—George Herbert.

RED TOP'S POLITENESS

Now, Red Top, the Rooster, was really very polite. He had the best of Rooster manners. Not only was he a splendid one for crowing, but he really was very kind to all about him. Of course he was fond of boasting a bit, but that did no one any harm—not even Red Top.

With all his boasting he never really became conceited. He simply seemed to feel that he must boast so as to let them all know that he was Red Top, the champion Rooster of the Barnyard, the one who awoke them all up in the morning and who attended to the business of the barnyard.

Just what business it was he attended to no one knew and neither did Red Top, but he knew that it was always well to pretend that he had many important business thoughts and ideas which none of the barnyard creatures could understand.

It made him sound so superior to say to some young creatures who had asked him what he was thinking about: "Ah, you wouldn't understand. All heavy business matters which are very important and which are things you don't have to worry your pretty (or otherwise) head about." But still he was a very good sort, and now he was thinking more and more of the nice things he could do for the rest of his barnyard friends. He was just as attentive and polite as he could be.

"Cock-a-doodle-do," he said one day, "come, barnyard friends and relatives and take a walk with me."

"In the garden beyond there are seeds and worms and the little fresh blades of grass are coming up."

And all the creatures of the barnyard started to take a walk with Red Top.

"Cackle, cackle," said Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen, "this is kind of you to share your pleasures with me."

"Cock-a-doodle-do," said Red Top, "always glad to be obliging and kindly."

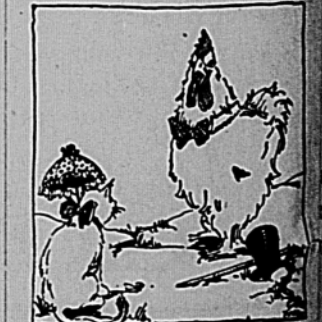

"Cackle, cackle," said Mrs. Brown Hen, "indeed, Red Top, you're a gentleman."

"I was always taught by my Mother Hen," said Red Top, "to be a gentlemanly and well-mannered rooster, and I never want to forget my good mother's teachings."

"Ah, you were a comfort to your mother always, and never caused her any worry, I'm sure," said Mrs. White Hen.

"Well," admitted Red Top, "she was saved from seeing some of my pranks, for it was decided upon by those in authority that she would make a most delicious chicken broth."

"Ah, yes, I might have worried her

"Ah, You Wouldn't Understand."

had it not been that she had the other engagement.

"But, then, I tried my best, and, I say, I've always tried to be a credit to her teachings."

"And you've been that," said Mrs. White Hen. And Mrs. White Hen said: "Cackle, cackle, you've been a fine chap, Red Top."

So Red Top took everyone to partake of a delicious meal and he showed the way and pointed about and scratched about in the ground so that all could have a feast.

And after the feast was over Mrs. Brown Hen said: "Cheers for Red Top. Three cheers for Red Top, hip, hooray! Cackle, cackle, cackle, hip, hooray!"

And Mrs. White Hen said: "Hip, hooray! Three cheers for Red Top. Cheers, cheers, cackle, cackle, cackle."

And Miss Fidgety Fashionable Hen said: "Three cheers for Red Top. Cheers, cackle, cackle, hip, hip, hooray."

Then Miss Red Hen said: "Cackle, cackle, cackle, three cheers for Red Top, hip, hip, hooray."

And Mrs. Spotted Hen said: "Cackle, cackle, cackle, three cheers for Red Top, hip, hip, hooray!"

So Red Top was cheered and he rose upon a stump which they were passing and he said: "Ladies, thank you! Let me always be at service to you. Call upon me at any time you need me or my assistance. I'm only too glad to give you of my rooster time and my rooster help."

And there was a great cackling in the barnyard of joy that such a gentleman as Red Top was the expenditure of more than $1,000,000. These fields of honor will be located at Belleau Wood, near Chateau-Thierry; Bony, near St. Quentin; Suresnes, near Paris, and Remagne, in the Argonne, near Montfaucon. More than 500 Americans will remain buried in England. A gift of land by the British government allows for the future decoration and care of these graves. Under plans already advanced a little cemetery for those Americans who died in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales will be located at Brookwood, Surrey, England. "This year still fewer of the proud, white-haired old heroes of '61-'65 will bear their colors and their flowers to the sacred ground where their comrades are in eternal bivouac. Last year the thinning ranks were filled with sturdy, tanned youngsters in their army drabs and navy blues who were honored to march at the side of the veteran patriarchs on their holy mission. The present Memorial day finds the hosts of Grant and Lee all but dissipated and as the youths of the World war strive for the honored files of the vanished procession, the day takes on a new significance."

of all.
