Knight & Brashear

Rev. Dunn pronounced the remony at the Methodist parsonage Tuesday morning at one o'clock that united Miss Wayman and Mr. P. G. Brown in the holy bonds of wedlock. Miss Wayman has been waiting her cousin, Thurman, for several months and members her friends by her acquaintances. Mr. Brown has made his home in Tahoka for several years and has many friends whom the News takes pleasure in joining in wishing the young people joy and happiness thru life. Mr. and Mrs. Brown will make their home in Tahoka for present.

Dr. J. H. McCoy and family, Marcus Edwards and family, and Mrs. Ruby Wells, andleman Wells and party, spent Sunday on Indian canyon fishing and hunting. The party report very pleasant stay.

Messers Marlin Jordan, Chas.

Shook, Dick Crie, Bernie Shook, Editor and Mrs. James Crie, of Tahoka, and Mr. Adra Hubbard and Miss Ruby Boswell, of Plainview, spent Saturday night and Sunday at Reed tank in Dawson county. Plenty of fish and game was secured and a pleasant outing enjoyed in spite of the hot weather Sunday.

Mrs. B. H. Robinson was hostess to the 500 Club Tuesday afternoon. On account of Mrs. Robinson being called away Monday before the last meeting date, the club was postponed and the ladies entered the game Tuesday with an added zest after the enforced abstinence. Grape punch was served thruout the afternoon and at the close of play strawberry cream and cakes were served to the following: Mesdames, Guy Shook, F. L. Parker, E. H. Inmon, Oscar Rutledge of Floydada, Tul Adams, James Crie and Miss Iva Cowan.

SERVICE - REAL - SERVICE -

are considered by the conservative buyers of this day and age; cost, quality and service.

THE RELATIVE IMPORTANCE

of those three is generally placed in the order given; cost, quality and service; but the order should be exactly reversed.

COST ON ALL LINES

except a few staple ones has been reduced to almost a dead level by competition; quality can be judged by cost, but service, real SERVICE is a rare thing.

REAL SERVICE

is given only by the Merchant who realizes that on your welfare depends its success. Real Service gives to YOUR INTEREST the same Jealous care that you yourself would give it. I can and am ready and willing to render you just that service; if given a chance, by you placing your business with me; will you give me just a trial. It is not my intention to annoy you unnecessarily, but being very desirous of serving you it is my pleasure to address you in this matter.

WE WILL CARRY

from time to time a complete line of staple and fancy Groceries, we handle one of the best Flour accounts to be found anywhere; Light Crust Flour, every sack has my personal guarantee to please you.

ANY THING IN DRY GOODS

both piece goods and ready-to-wear, we sell the White House and Maxine Shoes for Men and Women, Buster Brown Shoes for Boys and Girls.

WE WOULD

be pleased to show you and name you prices whether you buy or not, we carry a complete stock of Shelf and Builders Hardware, when in the market for anything in this line be sure to see me. It pleases me to take this opportunity to thank you for the favors you have intrusted to me in the short time that I have been here, and sincerely hope to be favored with an ever growing share of your business, which I promise that I will execute with promptness and most careful attention. In closing; I extend to you the seasons compliments with sincere wishes for your success.

SYNOPSIS.

Peter Hale returning from Europe meets a charming young woman, whom he loves on sight. He learns on landing that he must marry that very girl to gain his fortune. He sees her in the office and pursuing confronts a masked figure with a warning. He overhears a plot to cheat his father's friend and frustrates it. On his mission he meets the girl and she mystifies him with her peculiar actions.

THIRD EPISODE

An Hour to Live.

Peter was in a quandary; he aroused himself and started down the steps. He was just in time to see Bentley get into the car with the girl.

All sorts of dark thoughts flashed through his mind. He determined to slip on behind and see what happened—to protect Philippa if need should arise.

Mr. Bentley was one of those individuals who regard all girls as fair game. He began his attentions to his companion as soon as they were out of sight of the house and her resistance he put down to sham modesty. Bridget was mistaken. He found it out when he attempted to kiss the young lady. She screamed and struggled, and Peter, pulling himself up, leaped over the top of the touring car and joined in the fray.

Meanwhile the girl, freeing herself, leaped from the car, and the chauffeur, slowing down, devoted his efforts to aiding his master overpower Peter. They accomplished this in short order—a blow on the head knocked the young man unconscious and he lay like a log at the bottom of the tonneau.

Mr. Bentley was surprised as well as angry. The chauffeur pointed in the direction of the woods into which the girl had run. He shook his head savagely. "Never mind the girl—an apology will square all that—but let's get this fellow to town. We'll get rid of him for good. Drive to the city. You know where."

Arrived at their destination, the owner of the car was so intent in helping his man get the limp Peter into the basement that he did not notice a taxi which stopped close by, nor observe its occupant, a dark young woman, who peered out and seemed to take a sudden interest in the proceedings.

Just to what extent her interest went Mr. Bentley was to learn later—but now he was occupied in getting his victim safely into one of the upper rooms, where a group of his workers was waiting.

They jumped when they heard the noise on the stairs and then hastened to assist their leader in binding Peter hand and foot. He regained consciousness during this proceeding and, gazing wildly about him, asked where he was, and struggled to set himself free. Mr. Bentley stood aside and laughed. "Glad to see you're all right again, Hale," he said mockingly. "It will help you to appreciate a little entertainment I have arranged for you."

Mr. Bentley's idea of a little entertainment proved to be a slow waiting for death staged with all the ingenuity of the middle ages, for Peter was carried, bound as he was, until he stood before a grandfather clock, from the face of which extended a large army pistol. Before he was fully aware of the plot his hands were tied above his head, his head secured in a kind of iron brace such as photographers use to steady nervous sitters and he was left with his eyes on a level with the deadly revolver.

When he realized the hopelessness of his position a wave of terror swept over him.

His thoughts were diverted from his terrible position and a glimmer of hope dawned in his breast when footsteps were heard, as though someone was descending the stairs. The noise caused a sudden alarm to Mr. Bentley and his crew. The leader dashed out to investigate, leaving his men to watch the prisoner. Creeping up the stairs he came face to face with a dark figure, and immediately grappled with it.

But Mr. Bentley had reckoned too much on his strength. With a sudden motion his antagonist, who was no other than the mysterious woman who had seen him from the taxi, herself unseen, tossed him head first down the stairs. The thump, thump of his fall brought the watchers pell-mell from the room, and while Bridget was carefully feeling his shoulders and legs in a search for broken bones, several of the desperadoes ran up the stairs after his assailant.

The mysterious lady, who by gaining the roof of the adjoining house had been able to enter the skylight of Bridget's rendezvous, had a good start of her pursuers. She had ever time to use a saw on the plank that served as a bridge across the well that divided the buildings. The foremost of the desperadoes, seeing the skirts disappearing, started on the plank, felt it break under his hands and fell through the air.

His horrified companions, sick at the sight, stood peering below, weak and trembling.

But Bridget Bentley was not the sort of man to let even such an accident divert him from his object.

He moved closer to Hale, and with a cruel look pointed to the clock. "Watch closely the face of that clock, Hale," he said. "It will become more and more interesting as the minutes go by—up to eleven o'clock, when it will become absolutely engrossing."

There was no mistaking his meaning. He sneered as he backed away and gave his men instructions. Then, as if struck by an after thought, he again approached Peter and carelessly took several papers from his victim's pockets.

But it was no part of the astute Mr. Bentley's plan to allow Mr. Hale's sudden taking off to be ascribed to him or to any such method as the one he had selected to do away with him. The second he was outside the house he set to work to establish an alibi that would be proof against any contingency. With this object in view his actions were rapid and practical. He sent his chauffeur to borrow a taxi from a friend of the former's and, paying liberally, started off for the Brewster place, driving his own machine and followed by the taxi driven by his chauffeur.

It was an easy matter on reaching a steep incline for Mr. Bentley to alight, head his machine for a bank and watch it speed to destruction over a high wall and into a deep pool. Likewise it was an easy matter for him to climb down, drop some of the papers he had filched from Peter's pockets and clamber back to the taxi.

A black eye bestowed on him by the chauffeur at his master's order, a lot of dirt and dust sprinkled on his clothes and Mr. Bentley was ready to head for the Brewster country house, where he arrived before the family had retired, gloating in his mind over the fact that it was now close to eleven and picturing the agony of Peter.

It happened that the first person he met was Philippa Brewster, who was in the library. To her Bentley advanced and in an assumed "too-much-to-drink" voice began to apologize.

"I beg pardon," he said thickly, "for my kiss, this evening."

Philippa arose hurriedly. "What do you mean?" she demanded, her eyes indignant as much at his condition as the purport of his words.

"In the car," stammered Bentley, "on our ill ride, you know."

"I have not been in your car," said Philippa. "I have not been out of this room all evening."

Mr. Bentley pretended great astonishment. Naturally, he reasoned,

His Eyes on a Level With the Deadly Revolver.

Philippa wouldn't admit it. So far, so good. He made a bow and staggered to the dining room, where Mr. Brewster was just pouring out a little brandy.

He paused on seeing his guest and invited him to join him, but Mr. Bentley insisted on telling in a drunken way how he and Hale had taken the car, gone to a saloon, got into an argument and started off with Hale at the wheel. How the car had dashed over the precipice and hurled the young man to death while he had escaped with a few bruises, a black eye and ruined clothing.

Mr. Brewster shook his head. He could not take Mr. Bentley seriously. He suggested with all the politeness he could summon that bed was a good place for the bibulous Bridget.

Chuckling to himself, he made his way upstairs, carefully simulating intoxication, and then into his active brain came a new idea. Peter's room was near his own. Why not boldly enter and go through his papers? Mr. Bentley no sooner thought of this than he put it into execution.

No one knew better than he that he would be interrupted by the occupant of the room. In fact, Mr. Bentley found a delicious joy in pulling out his watch and watching the minute hand touch eleven. He could almost hear the report of the pistol and see the convulsed shrinking of his enemy as the shot took effect.

Bridget smiled—a sinister smile—and proceeded to go through Peter's belongings. He was looking for the option when he came across something far more important—a paper which caused him to forget the oil and land in view of a bigger stake and one more to his liking.

This was a copy of the will of Peter's father. Mr. Bentley held it up and his cunning eye caught the section which read:

"...all of my property, real and personal, to my son, Peter, contingent upon his marriage to the woman especially trained by me to be his mate. She is perfect in both mind and body, and will appear to him of her own volition and show him on her right arm just below the shoulder the brand of a double cross, a fac-simile of which is here given. However, should the girl of the double cross be won by any other than my son Peter, to such man will the Hale fortune go.

Here indeed was a treasure. Mr. Bentley bent his brows. Was that the reason Peter Hale was so attentive to Philippa Brewster? Was she the girl of the double cross? He determined to find out. Nothing could be easier. Immediately a scheme occurred to him which would render his plan easy and natural. He had done himself a good turn in getting rid of Peter—a better turn than he realized.

But if Bridget Bentley could have seen the reality when the clock hands reached eleven he would have seen a far different scene than the one he pictured.

He would have seen Peter gazing in terror at the clock face; he would have seen the two men left to guard him go out a few minutes before the hour. He would have seen the minute hand barely touch eleven and at the same second the door of the clock case open and a masked figure emerge silently, cautiously. He would have seen the masked figure raise the pistol, heard the shot reverberate, seen the bullet hit the ceiling and beheld the masked stranger cut the cords that held Peter taut.

Leading Peter to a closet, the Masked Stranger pushed open a secret door and pointed. "Do not try to thank me," he said, quickly. "Be true to the girl of the double cross and some day you will know me."

Peter nodded and was gone. The Masked Stranger slipped out of the room. Bridget Bentley had been outwitted.

Once outside, Peter's thoughts turned immediately to the Brewster house and to the possible danger to Philippa. He hailed a taxi and hurried away.

Thus it happened that he met Mr. Brewster not a great while after that gentleman had listened to Mr. Bentley's wild tale of disaster. As Mr. Brewster, who had taken more drinks than were good for him, saw Peter, more or less excited and dusty, he concluded that both he and Mr. Bentley had had a night of it, and again he suggested bed. Peter left him and passing through the library, saw Philippa asleep, her arm resting on the library table and her lovely head on her arm.

Here, indeed, was a chance in a thousand. Why could he not gently raise her sleeve and thus discover without her knowledge, whether she was, indeed, the girl of the double cross?

He tiptoed softly to her side. But Peter was not the only interested party. Behind the portieres stood Bridget Bentley, shaking with anger, amazement written over his face. How had Peter Hale escaped? What had gone wrong? The cruel eyes of the social pirate contracted as he resolved to punish the men who had failed to carry out his orders.

But for the present he watched Peter with an intensity that showed he, too, was eager to see whether Philippa was the girl who held the key to the Hale millions.

Just as Peter was lifting the sleeve Philippa awoke and, in so doing unconsciously blew into Peter's eyes some ashes from an ash tray directly beside her. Peter was blinded for a moment. Philippa, laughing sarcastically, vanished and young Mr. Hale, groping his way, passed through the portieres, close enough to Mr. Bentley to have touched him.

The social pirate smiled. He was now engaged in a game worth the playing.

(END OF THIRD EPISODE.)

Time to Quit.
 "What made you stop drinking?"
 "You know I used to say there was only one George Washington."
 "A sentiment we can all subscribe to."
 "I went into a picture gallery to see his portrait. I had been hoisting in a few."
 "Well?"
 "And instead of one George Washington, I give you my word I saw two."
Keeping It Up.
 "Nobody ever invites me to ride in their automobile."
 "Well."
 "And when I get one I ain't a-going to invite anybody to ride."

Sure! High Heels Cause Corns But Who Cares Now

Because style decrees that women crowd and buckle up their tender toes in high heel footwear they suffer from corns, then they cut and trim at these painful pests which merely makes the corn grow hard. This suicidal habit may cause lockjaw and women are warned to stop it.

A few drops of a drug called freeze-one applied directly upon a sore corn gives quick relief and soon the entire corn, root and all, lifts out without pain. Ask the drug store man for a quarter of an ounce of freeze-one, which costs very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn or callus from one's feet.

This drug is an ether compound and dries in a moment and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin. Clip this out and pin on your wife's dresser.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 15 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

DRINK HOT WATER IF YOU DESIRE A ROSY COMPLEXION

Says we can't help but look better and feel better after an inside bath.

To look one's best and feel one's best is to enjoy an inside bath each morning to flush from the system the previous day's waste, sour fermentations and poisonous toxins before it is absorbed into the blood. Just as coal, when it burns, leaves behind a certain amount of incalculable material in the form of ashes, so the food and drink taken each day leave in the alimentary organs a certain amount of indigestible material, which if not eliminated, form toxins and poisons which are then sucked into the blood through the very ducts which are intended to suck in only nourishment to sustain the body.

If you want to see the glow of healthy bloom in your cheeks, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, you are told to drink every morning upon arising, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless means of washing the waste material and toxins from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract, before putting more food into the stomach.

Men and women with sallow skins, liver spots, pimples or pallid complexion, also those who wake up with a coated tongue, bad taste, nasty breath, others who are bothered with headaches, bilious spells, acid stomach or constipation should begin this phosphated hot water drinking and are assured of very pronounced results in one or two weeks.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs very little at the drug store but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, purifies and freshens the skin on the outside, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the inside organs. We must always consider that internal sanitation is vastly more important than outside cleanliness, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.

HOW SHALL WE PAY FOR THE WAR?

A Constructive Criticism on the House Revenue Bill.

LOANS BETTER THAN TAXES

Five Reasons Why Excessive Taxes at the Outset of War Are Disadvantageous—Great Britain Example Worthy of Emulation—How the Taxes Should Be Apportioned.

By EDWIN R. A. SELIGMAN, McVickar Professor of Political Economy, Columbia University.

On May 23, 1917, the House of Representatives passed an act "to provide revenue to defray war expenses and for other purposes." In the original bill as presented by the Committee of Ways and Means, the additional revenue to be derived was estimated at $1,810,420,000. The amendment to the income tax, which was tacked on to the bill during the discussion in the House was expected to yield another $40,000,000 or $50,000,000.

In discussing the House bill, two problems arise:

I. How much should be raised by taxation?
II. In what manner should this sum be raised?

I. How Much Should Be Raised by Taxation?

How was the figure of $1,500,000,000 arrived at? The answer is simple. When the Secretary of the Treasury came to estimate the additional war expenses for the year 1917-18, he calculated that they would amount to some $6,900,000,000, of which $3,000,000,000 was to be allotted to the allies, and $3,900,000,000 was to be utilized for the domestic purposes. Thinking that it would be a fair proposition to divide this latter sum between loans and taxes, he concluded that the amount to be raised by taxes was $1,800,000,000.

There are two extreme theories, each of which may be dismissed with scant courtesy. The one is that all war expenditures should be defrayed by loans, and the other is that all war expenditures should be defrayed by taxes. Each theory is untenable.

It is indeed true that the burdens of the war should be borne by the present rather than the future generation; but this does not mean that they should be borne by this year's taxation.

Meting all war expenses by taxation makes the taxpayers in one or two years bear the burden of benefits that ought to be distributed at least over a decade within the same generation.

In the second place, when expenditures approach the gigantic sums of present-day warfare, the tax-only policy would require more than the total surplus of social income. Were this absolutely necessary, the ensuing havoc in the economic life of the community would have to be endured. But where the disasters are so great and at the same time so unnecessary, the tax-only policy may be declared impracticable.

Secretary McAdoo had the right instinct and highly commendable courage in deciding that a substantial portion, at least, of the revenues should be derived from taxation. But when he hit upon the plan of 50-50 per cent, that is, of raising one-half of all domestic war expenditures by taxes, the question arises whether he did not go too far.

The relative proportion of loans to taxes is after all a purely business proposition. Not to rely to a large extent on loans at the outset of a war is a mistake.

Disadvantages of Excessive Taxes.

The disadvantages of excessive taxes at the outset of the war are as follows:
1. Excessive taxes on consumption will cause popular resentment.
2. Excessive taxes on industry will disarrange business, damp enthusiasm and restrict the spirit of enterprise at the very time when the opposite is needed.

3. Excessive taxes on incomes will deplete the surplus available for investments and interfere with the placing of the enormous loans which will be necessary in any event.

4. Excessive taxes on wealth will cause a serious diminution of the incomes which are at present largely drawn upon for the support of educational and philanthropic enterprises. Moreover, these sources of support would be dried up precisely at the time when the need would be greatest.

5. Excessive taxation at the outset of the war will reduce the elasticity available for the increasing demands that are soon to come.

Great Britain's Policy.

Take Great Britain as an example. During the first year of the war she increased taxes only slightly, in order to keep industries going at top notch. During the second year she raised by new taxes only 9 per cent. of her war expenditures. During the third year she levied by additional taxes (over and above the pre-war level) only slightly more than 17 per cent. of her war expenses.

If we should attempt to do as much in the first year of the war as Great Britain did in the third year it would suffice to raise by taxation $1,250,000,000. If, in order to be absolutely on the safe side, it seemed advisable to increase the sum to $1,500,000,000, this should, in our opinion, be the maximum.

All Bank Depositors

are now safely guarded by the most rigid system of bank supervision that has ever prevailed in this country. Politics have been eliminated from the banking department of the State as well as of the Federal Government with the very gratifying result that public confidence is again at top notch.

The Guaranty State Bank.

The non interest bearing deposits of this bank are protected by the Guaranty Fund of the State of Texas.

In considering the apportionment of the extraordinary burden of taxes in war times certain scientific principles are definitely established:

How Taxes Should Be Apportioned.

(1) The burden of taxes must be spread as far as possible over the whole community so as to cause each individual to share in the sacrifice according to his ability to pay and according to his share in the Government.

(2) Taxes on consumption, which are necessarily borne by the community at large, should be imposed as far as possible on articles of quasi-luxury rather than on those of necessity.

(3) Excises should be imposed as far as possible upon commodities in the hands of the final consumer rather than upon the articles which serve primarily as raw material for further production.

(4) Taxes upon business should be imposed as far as possible upon net earnings rather than upon gross receipts or capital invested.

(5) Taxes upon income which will necessarily be severe should be both differentiated and graduated. That is, there should be a distinction between earned and unearned incomes and there should be a higher rate upon the larger incomes. It is essential, however, not to make the income rate so excessive as to lead to evasion, administrative difficulties, or to the more fundamental objections which have been urged above.

(6) The excess profits which are due to the war constitute the most obvious and reasonable source of revenue during war times. But the principle upon which these war-profit taxes are laid must be equitable in theory and easily calculable in practice.

The Proposed Income Tax.

The additional income tax as passed by the House runs up to a rate of 60 per cent. This is a sum unheard of in the history of civilized society. It must be remembered that it was only after the first year of the war that Great Britain increased her income tax to the maximum of 34 per cent., and that even now in the fourth year of the war the income tax does not exceed 42 1/2 per cent.

It could easily be shown that a tax with rates on moderate incomes substantially less than in Great Britain, and on the larger incomes about as high, would yield only slightly less than the $322,000,000 originally estimated in the House bill.

It is to be hoped that the Senate will reduce the total rate on the highest incomes to 34 per cent., or at most to 40 per cent., and that at the same time it will reduce the rate on the smaller incomes derived from personal or professional earnings.

If the war continues we shall have to depend more and more upon the income tax. By imposing excessive rates now we are not only endangering the future, but are inviting all manner of difficulties which even Great Britain has been able to escape.

Conclusion.

The House bill contains other fundamental defects which may be summed up as follows:

(1) It pursues an erroneous principle in imposing retroactive taxes.

(2) It selects an unjust and unworkable criterion for the excess-profits tax.

(3) It proceeds to an unheard-of height in the income tax.

(4) It imposes unwarranted burdens upon the consumption of the community.

(5) It is calculated to throw business into confusion by levying taxes on gross receipts instead of upon commodities.

(6) It fails to make a proper use of stamp taxes.

(7) It follows an unscientific system in its flat rate on imports.

(8) It includes a multiplicity of petty and unproductive taxes, the vexatiousness of which is out of all proportion to the revenue they produce.

The fundamental lines on which the House bill should be modified are summed up here.

(1) The amount of new taxation should be limited to $1,250,000,000—or at the outset to $1,500,000,000. To do more than this would be as unwise as it is unnecessary. To do even this would be to do more than has ever been done by any civilized Government in time of stress.

(2) The excess-profits tax based upon a sound system ought to yield about $500,000,000.

(3) The income-tax schedule ought to be revised with a lowering of the rates on earned incomes below $10,000, and with an analogous lowering of the rates on the higher incomes, so as not to exceed 34 per cent. A careful calculation shows that an income tax of this kind would yield some $450,000,000 additional.

(4) The tax on whisky and tobacco ought to remain approximately as it is, with a yield of about $230,000,000.

These three taxes, together with the stamp tax, at even the low rate of the House bill, and with an improved automobile tax, will yield over $1,250,000,000, which is the amount of money thought desirable.

The above program would be in harmony with an approved scientific system. It will do away with almost all of the complaints that are being urged against the present. It will refrain from taxing the consumption of the poor.

It will throw a far heavier burden upon the rich, but will not go to the extremes of confiscation. It will obviate interference with business and will keep unimpaired the social productivity of the community.

It will establish a just balance between loans and taxes and will not succumb to the danger of approaching either the tax-only policy or the loan-only policy. Above all, it will keep an undisturbed elastic margin, which must be more and more heavily drawn upon as the war proceeds.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE— DRINK HOT TEA!

Get a small package of Hamburg Breast Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hamburger Brust Tee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour through a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time during the day or before retiring. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores of the skin, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking up a cold. Try it the next time you suffer from a cold or the grip. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore safe and harmless.

A hauling unit that moves twice the tonnage moved by horses—that has demonstrated a ton-mile operating cost of less than 8 cents from records obtained from over 18,000 users in over 600 lines of work.

A sturdy truck construction that has reduced time lost out of service to a minimum. The first Smith

Form-a-Truck has been in steady service for four years—has covered over 20,000 miles—hauling an average load of 2,050 pounds and cost but $8 for repairs.

A proved transportation service of wonderful day in and day out efficiency and earning power. That has added to the profits of every user by cutting down expense in the hauling and delivery departments and by eliminating unnecessary and wasteful equipment.

The Smith Form-a-Truck gives you a one-ton truck of 125 in. wheelbase; with either 9 or 12 ft. loading platform; with a sturdy double chain drive; solid truck type rear tires; a rear axle construction that supports 90% of the load carried—takes all the carrying work off the power plant and puts it on the truck construction.

Every type of body from the light, flare board express type to the big steel dumping bodies for contractors and the huge vans for movers is used on Smith Form-a-Truck. There is no line of business in which the new era hauling and delivery vehicle does not find a ready place.
