Eatonic Works Magic

"I have taken only two boxes of Eatonic and feel like a new man. It has done me more good than anything else," writes C. O. Frappir.

Eatonic is the modern remedy for acid stomach, bloating, food repeating and indigestion. It quickly takes up and carries out the acidity and gas and enables the stomach to digest the food naturally. That means not only and probably will, be less instead of relief from pain and discomfort but greater than under the Paris terms. you get the full strength from the food you eat. ## NO PREDICTION ON OUTCOME

England Hopes That Berlin Will Ao cept, but France Prays for Rejection.

London .- The conference of allied premiers, described in commons. by Lloyd George as "the most momentous meeting since the drafting of the Versailles treaty." has come to an official end with the dispatch to Ber lin of a final reparations demand. German now has until May 12th in which to resolve whether to accept the prescribed formula or reject it and invite occupation of her vital industrial centers. British officials, relaxing after their arduous labors, will not predict the outcome. They are hoping and the hope is shared by the Italian delegates, that Berlin will accept, or at least find a government willing to accept. France, on the other hand, urging framing of terms so strong that they would meet immediate rejection, is hoping and praying that Berlin's answer will be "No." The three important points in the document are: 1. The annuities will be variable, equivalent to 25 per cent of Germany's total exports, "or alternatively an equivalent amount reached by any other index of German prosperity.'

2. It is officially stated that the total of the first five annuities can, 3. The real rock upon which the London conference of February broke down disappears with the elimination of the large fixed annuities of the Paris and Boulgone conferences for the later years of payment.

ECUTIVE SHALL WIELD FOREIGN CONTROL

Washington .- President Harding will maintain his prerogatives as director States Senator Truman H. Newberry of the American foreign policy despite in federal courts in Michigan for consigned to force his hand.

The question of executive or senatorial control over foreign policy has namely, the calling of an international power to regulate primaries. conference to discuss disarmament, the recalling of American troops on the Rhine and the designation of an. official representative on the allied but agreed as to the decision.

council which will finally dispose of the reparations question. And the question has assumed such importance as to constitute one of the matters discussed by the president and his cabinet Tuesday. It was made quite clear after the cabinet meeting that the unanimous opinion prevailed that the executive branch of the government, not the legislative, should chart the way in foreign affairs.

Senator Borah had paved the way toward the cabinet discussion by his announced insistence upon attaching a rider to the naval appropriations bill which would call upon the executive to summon a tripartite conference between England, Japan and the United States for planning armament reductions.

This evidence of the senate attempting to force the hand of the executive was seen by some administration leaders also in Senator Lodge's announcement that a modified treaty of Versailles as the means for effecting final peace with Germany appeared to be impracticable.

Finally, a serious question has arisen in the American negotiations designed to bring a settlement of the reparations problem as to whether the senate would sanction the appointment of an American representative upon the allied supreme council It is pointed out that the Germans themselves accepted the Paris pro- to aid the European powers in unposals, but that Von Simons vetoed raveling their indemnity tangle. > Justice McReynolds read the opinion, to which Justice McKenna dissented as to the power of congress,

> Chief Justice White also dissented from the decision that congress did not have power to control all elections, but agreed that the statute had been "grossly misconstrued."

Justice McReynolds said that the lower court erred in dismissing the demurrer of the defendants.

Chief Justice White predicted that legislation would come which would set aside the decision as to the power of congress over primaries, for otherwise the "government can not live." He called attention to those states in which the primary had been made the controlling feature of the election. In such cases, he said, "election is stillborn and the vote without power or weight."

Associate Justice Pitney also read an opinion dissenting in part from the court's decision, and announced that Associate Justices Brandeis and Clark had concurred in the opinion he filed.

Chief Justice White said he concurred in the reversal of the conviction, but thought that a new trial should be held.

Senator Spencer, chairman of the senate subcommittee considering the Ford-Newberry case, said his com mittee would proceed irrespective of

SHERIFF'S NOTICE OF ELECTION

THE STATE OF TEXAS, County of Lynn.

Notice is hereby given that an election will be held on the 28th day of May, 1921, at the T-School House in Common School District No. 4, of this county as established by order of the County Board of Trustees of date the 3rd day of May, 1921, which is of record in book de-signated "Record of School Dis-tricts" on pages to determine whether a majority of the legally qualified property taxpaying voters of that district desire to increase the tax upon themselves from the rate of not to exceed 50 cents of the $100 valuation of taxable property to a rate of not to exceed $1.00 on the $100.00 valuation of taxable property in said district for the purpose of supplementing the State School Fund apportioned to said district and to determine whether the commissioners court of this county shall be authorized to levy, assess and collect annually a tax of and at the rate of not to exceed $1.00 on the $100.00 valuation of taxable property in said district for said purpose.

J. W. Simpson has been appointed presiding officer for said election and he shall select two judges and two clerks tot assist him in holding the same, and he shall within five days after said election has been held, make due return thereof to the commissioners court of this county as is required by law for holding a general election.

All persons who are legally qualified voters of ths State and county, and who are resident property taxpayers in said district shall be entitled to vote at said election and all voters who favor taxation for school purposes shall have written or printed on their ballots the words:

"For School Tax." And those opposed to such taxation shall have written or printed on their ballots the words:

"Against School Tax." Said election was ordered by the County Judge of this county by order made on the 4th day of May, 1921, and this notice is given in pursuance of said order. Dated this the 4th day of May.

This Scripture pictures the church, the body of Christ, under the figure of the human body. The topic "Working With Others" can only have application to Christians working with each other; for it is as members of the body of Christ that this relationship and obligation are set forth. The church is an organism, not merely an organization. As such it is:

I. One Body (vv. 12-20).

As a body it has many members, each with a definite ministry or function. Many members are essential to only one of a great many similar cases. a body or organism. So it is with the church. Each member has its own gift and office. The proof of this oneness is that by the sovereign act of the Holy Spirit all believers are constituted one body (v. 13). A multiplicity of organisms does not make a body, but a multiplicity of members with among them (vv. 15, 16). It would be to envy the place of another. A deacon

the Proper Regulation of Outdoor Advertising.

Kansas City authorities have drawn ap rules for the regulation of "outdoor advertising." Other communities would do well to give the matter careful consideration. Many places have even gone to the length of forbidding the billboard altogether, as a nuisance. Whether such a move is advisable is a mooted question, but all will concede that regulation of some sort is necessary. The Kansas City rules are as follows:

"No waste or other rubbish resulting from any billboard or outdoor advertising sign shall be allowed to accumulate on or in the vicinity of the premises where the same is located.

"Bottoms of all signs shall be at least three feet from the ground.

"No outdoor advertising shall be permitted or allowed to be maintained without an annual license from the division of highways of the department of public works."

None of the foregoing rules shall apply to outdoor advertising which is not within public view of a highway, public park or reservation; nor to signs or other devices erected and maintained in conformity with existing law, advertising or indicating the person occupying the premises in question or the business transacted thereon, or advertising the property itself or any part thereof as for sale or to let; nor to advertising for public purposes by the commonwealth or any municipality thereof.

Any city or town, by ordinance or by law, may wholly exclude outdoor

God should not complain that he is not a minister. The church needs its foot-members, that is, those who are swift to run on its errands; it needs its eye-members, who are quick to perceive opportunities for service; it needs its ear-members, who are quick to hear the call to duty; it needs its tongue-members, who can speak forth the message of truth; it needs its hand-members to perform its many deeds of kindness. Each member of the church has its place by the sovereign will of God (v. 18). If this were realized there would be the most efficient co-operation among the members of the church. The pastor would faithfully do the work of a pastor; the minister, the work of a minister, the teacher, the work of a teacher,

"WHO-SHEILA MACRAE? SHE'S A WIDOW."

Synopsis.-Graham Norcross, an all-around railroad man, having finished the construction work on the Oregon Midland, is on his way to Chicago. He intends to take a vacation and then consider a Canadian general manager's job. Jimmie Dodds, his secretary, is with him. They are marooned at Sand Creek siding, with a charming young woman, Mrs. Sheila Macrae, and her young cousin, Maisie Ann. Unseen, they witness an exceedingly odd sort of train holdup. A special car is carried off into the hills. It turns out to be the car of John Chadwick, financial magnate, whom Norcross was to meet at Portal City. The "Boss" and his companions rescue "Uncle John."

Mr. Norcross told what we had seen. nd how we had come to be where we were able to see it, but that didn't elp out much, either. From any point of view it seemed perfectly foolish. and the boss made mention of that. If we hadn't happened to be there to bring the engine back, the worst that ald have befallen Mr. Chadwick and he crew of the special would have een a few hours' bother and delay. n the course of time the conductor would have walked out and got to a wire station somewhere, though it might have taken him all night, and hen some, to get another engine. Naturally, Mr. Chadwick was rednot about it, on general principles. I guess he wasn't used to being kid-worse neglected pieces of railroad track in some of the great transcontinental lines, but if there are I haven't happened to notice them. I suppose it is capitalized to death, like many of the others."

"Fictitious values doubtless have something to do with it at the present stage of the game," Mr. Chadwick admitted. "It has always been a good earning property, being largely, even yet, without much local competition. But from the day it was completed its securities have figured in the market only for their speculative values. The property itself has never been considered, save as a means to an end; the end being to enable one bunch of the Wall Street gamesters you speak of to make a 'killing' and unload on another bunch."

"The old story," said Mr. Norcross. "We are bumping over the net result, right now," Mr. Chadwick went on, "Pioneer Short Line is practical-

I hung around while the boss was telling Mrs. Sheila and Malsie Ann good-by, and I was in the baggageroom, digging up the put-off stuff, at the good-by minute. But I guess they didn't quarrel any-the boss and Mrs. Sheila. She was laughing a little to herself as I helped her down from the car, and when I asked her where she wanted to go, she said I might ask one of the porters to carry the traps, and we'd walk to the hotel, which was only a few blocks up the main street.

She took Maisie Ann on the other side of her and let two of the blocks go by without saying anything more, and then she gave that quiet little laugh again and said, "Your Mr. Norcross amuses me, Jimmie. He says I have no business to travel without a guardian. What do you think about it?"

I told her I hadn't any thinks coming, and she seemed to take that for a joke and laughed some more. Then she asked me if I'd ever been in New York, and I felt sort of small when I had to tell her that I had never been east of Omaha in all my life. With that, she told me not to worry; that if I stayed with Mr. Norcross I'd probably get to go anywhere I wanted to.

Something in the way she said it made it sound like a little slam on the boss, and of course I wasn't going to stand for that.

"There is one thing about it: the boss will make good wherever he goes," I hit back. "You can bet on that." "I like your loyalty," she flashed out. "It is a fine thing in a day that is much too careless of such qualities. And I agree with you that your Mr. Norcross is likely to succeed; more than likely, if he will only learn to combine a little gentle cleverness with the heavy hand." "I don't think you have any cause to blacklist Mr. Norcross," I said. 'Hasn't he been right good and brothployees; of common honesty with Mr. Chadwick nodded. "That is about the size of it," he said.

"I wouldn't say that it can't be done," the boss went on. "Perhaps it is possible, for the right man. But I'm not the right man. You need somebody who can combine the qualities of a pretty brutal slugger with those of a fine-haired, all-things-to-all-men, diplomatic peacemaker. I can do the other end of the game When it comes I've either got to smash him or quit. I am too heavy-handed for this job of yours. And as for the other thingthe industrial side of it: that's a large order; a whaling big order. I'm not even prepared to say, off-hand, that it's the right thing to do."

"Right or wrong, it's a thing that is coming, Graham," was the sober reply. "If we don't meet it halfway-well, the time will come when we of the hiring-and-firing side won't be given any option in the matter. You may call it Utopian if you please, and add that I'm growing old and losing my grip. But that doesn't obliterate the fact that the days of the present master-and-man relations in the industries are numbered.

"We'll let it rest until morning and give you a chance to sleep on it. You have spoken only of the difficulties and the responsibilites, Graham; but there is another side to it. In a way, it's an opportunity, carrying with it him run in?"

The night clerk was evidently scared of his job. "I wouldn't dare to 'do that," he chittered. "He's one of the New York crowd-the railroad people-President Dunton's nephewguest of the house."

The young fellow had pulled himself around to our side of the counter by this time and was hooking his arm to make a pass at Mr. Norcross, trimming things up as he came with a lot more language. The boss said, right slugging; I've proved it a time or two short and sharp, to the clerk, "Get in the past. But I'm no good at the his room key and give it to a boy who can show me the way," and the next to handling the fellow with a 'pull.' thing we knew he had bashed that lunatic square in the face and was cuffing him along to the nearest elevator.

> He came back in a few minutes, looking as cool as a cucumber.

"What did you do with him?" asked the clerk, kind of awed and half scared.

"Got a couple of the corridor sweepers to put him in a bath and turn the cold water on him. That'll take the whisky out of him. Now, if you have a minute to spare, I'd like to get my assignment."

We hadn't more than got our rooms marked off for us when I saw Mr. Chadwick coming across from the farther of the three elevators. He was smiling sort of grim, as if he'd made a killing of some sort with Mr. Dunton, and instead of heading back for his car he took the boss over to a corner of the lobby and sat down to smoke with him.

They didn't seem to be talking anything private, so I sat down just be- "You wait and See What Com the Commiddee Room Out." yond them, so sleepy that I could hardly see straight. Mr. Chadwick was become of the boss-who was generally the earliest riser on the jobwhen two men came bulging through the screen doors of the cafe, picking their teeth and feeling in their pockets for cigars. Right on the dot, and in the face of knowing that it couldn't reasonably be so, I had a feeling that I'd seen those men before. One of them was short and rather stocky, and his face had a sort of hard, hungry look; and the other was big and barrel-bodied. The short one was cleanshaven, but the other had a reddishgray beard clipped close on his fat jaws and trimmed to a point at the chin.

After they had lighted up they came along and sat down three or four chairs away from me. They paid no attention to me, but for fear they, might, I tried to look as sleepy as an all-night bell-hop in a busy hotel.

"The Dunton bunch got together in one of the committee rooms up-stairs a little after eight o'clock," said the short man, in a low, rasping voice that

"WHO-SHEILA MACRAE? SHE'S A WIDOW."

Synopsis -- Graham Norcross, an all-around railroad man, having finished the construction work on the Oregon Midland, is on his way to Chicago. He intends to take a vacation and then consider a Canadian general manager's job. Jimmie Dodds, his secretary, is with him. They are marooned at Sand Creek siding, with a charming young woman, Mrs. Sheila Macrae, and her young cousin, Maisie Ann. Unseen, they witness an exceedingly odd sort of train holdup. A special car is carried off into the hills. It turns out to be the car of John Chadwick, financial magnate, whom Norcross was to meet at Portal City. The "Boss" and his companions rescue "Uncle John."

Naturally, Mr. Chadwick was redhot about it, on general principles. I guess he wasn't used to being kidaped.

"I can't help thinking that it is concted with what is due to happen o-morrow morning, Graham," he said, t the end of things. "It has always been ould have befallen Mr. Chadwick and a good earning property, being largely, he crew of the special would have even yet, without much local competition. But from the day it was completed its securities have figured in the market only for their speculative values. The property itself has never been considered, save as a means to an end; the end being to enable one bunch of the Wall Street gamesters you speak of to make a 'killing' and unload on another bunch."

I hung around while the boss was telling Mrs. Sheila and Malsie Ann good-by, and I was in the baggageroom, digging up the put-off stuff, at the good-by minute. But I guess they didn't quarrel any-the boss and Mrs. Sheila. She was laughing a little to herself as I helped her down from the car, and when I asked her where she wanted to go, she said I might ask one of the porters to carry the traps, and we'd walk to the hotel, which was only a few blocks up the main street.

She took Maisie Ann on the other side of her and let two of the blocks go by without saying anything more, and then she gave that quiet little laugh again and said, "Your Mr. Norcross amuses me, Jimmie. He says I have no business to travel without a guardian. What do you think about it?"

I told her I hadn't any thinks coming, and she seemed to take that for a joke and laughed some more. Then she asked me if I'd ever been in New York, and I felt sort of small when I had to tell her that I had never been east of Omaha in all my life. With that, she told me not to worry; that if I stayed with Mr. Norcross I'd probably get to go anywhere I wanted to.

Something in the way she said it made it sound like a little slam on the boss, and of course I wasn't going to stand for that.

"There is one thing about it: the boss will make good wherever he goes," I hit back. "You can bet ou that."

ness; of fair-dealing with its employees; of common honesty with Mr. Chadwick nodded. "That is about the size of it," he said.

"I wouldn't say that it can't be done," the boss went on. "Perhaps it is possible, for the right man. But I'm not the right man. You need somebody who can combine the qualities of a pretty brutal slugger with those of a fine-haired, all-things-to-all-men, diplomatic peacemaker. I can do the slugging; I've proved it a time or two in the past. But I'm ro good at the other end of the game When it comes to handling the fellow with a 'pull,' I've either got to smash him or quit. I am too heavy-handed for this job of yours. And as for the other thingthe industrial side of it: that's a large order; a whaling big order. I'm not even prepared to say, off-hand, that it's the right thing to do."

"Right or wrong, it's a thing that is coming, Graham," was the sober reply. "If we don't meet it halfway-well, the time will come when we of the hiring-and-firing side won't be given any option in the matter. You may call it Utopian if you please, and add that I'm growing old and losing my grip. But that doesn't obliterate the fact that the days of the present master-and-man relations in the industries are numbered.

"We'll let it rest until morning and give you a chance to sleep on it. You have spoken only of the difficulties and the responsibilites, Graham; but there is another side to it. In a way, it's an opportunity, carrying with it the promise of the biggest kind of a him run in?"

The night clerk was evidently scared of his job. "I wouldn't dare to 'do that," he chittered. "He's one of the New York crowd-the railroad people-President Dunton's nephewguest of the house."

The young fellow had pulled himself around to our side of the counter by this time and was hooking his arm to make a pass at Mr. Norcross, trimming things up as he came with a lot more language. The boss said, right short and sharp, to the clerk, "Get his room key and give it to a boy who can show me the way," and the next thing we knew he had bashed that lunatic square in the face and was cuffing him along to the nearest elevator.

He came back in a few minutes, looking as cool as a cucumber.

"What did you do with him?" asked the clerk, kind of awed and half scared.

"Got a couple of the corridor sweepers to put him in a bath and turn the cold water on him. That'll take the whisky out of him. Now, if you have a minute to spare, I'd like to get my assignment."

We hadn't more than got our rooms marked off for us when I saw Mr. Chadwick coming across from the farther of the three elevators. He was smiling sort of grim, as if he'd made a killing of some sort with Mr. Dunton, and instead of heading back for his car he took the boss over to a corner of the lobby and sat down to smoke with him.

They didn't seem to be talking anything private, so I sat down just be- "You wait and See What Comes Mit become of the boss-who was generally the earliest riser on the jobwhen two men came bulging through the screen doors of the cafe, picking their teeth and feeling in their pockets for cigars. Right on the dot, and in the face of knowing that it couldn't reasonably be so, I had a feeling that I'd seen those men before. One of them was short and rather stocky, and his face had a sort of hard, hungry look; and the other was big and barrel-bodied. The short one was cleanshaven, but the other had a reddishgray beard clipped close on his fat jaws and trimmed to a point at the chin.

After they had lighted up they came along and sat down three or four chairs away from me. They paid no attention to me, but for fear they might, I tried to look as sleepy as an all-night bell-hop in a busy hotel.

"The Dunton bunch got together in one of the committee rooms up-stairs a little after eight o'clock," said the short man, in a low, rasping voice that

"Dawes is a mining man in Portal "ity, and before I'd been an hour in own yesterday he hunted me up and wanted me to go over to Strathcona to look at some gold prospects he's trying to finance. I said 'No' at first, because I was expecting you, and Hought you'd reach Portal City this morning. When you didn't show up, I knew I had twelve hours more on my hands, and as Dawes was still hanging on, I had our trainmaster rive me a special over to Strathcona, on a promise that I'd be brought back early this evening, ahead of the 'Flyer' from the west-the train you were on."

Mr. Norcross nodded, "And the promise wasn't kept."

"No promise is ever kept on the Ploneer Short Line," growled the big magnate. And then, with a beautiful disregard for the mixed figures of speech: "Once in a blue moon the chapter of accidents hits the bull'seye whack in the middle, Graham When Hardshaw wired me from Portaland, I knew you couldn't reach Portal City before this morning, at the very rearliest. That was going to cut my time pretty short, with the big gun a due to be fired tomorrow morning, and you cut it still shorter by losing twelve hours somewhere along the road-they told me in the dis-.: patcher's office that your train was behind a wreck somewhere up in Dregon. But it has turned out all right, in spite of everything. You're here, and we've got the night before us." Then I suppose he nodded toward me, for the boss said:

"Oh, Jimmie's all right; he knew what I had for dinner this evening, and he'll know what I'm going to have "for breakfast tomorrow morning." With the bridle off, the big man went ahead abruptly, cutting out all the frills.

"You finished your building conten of their reorganization and retract on the Oregon Midland, Gracapitalization stealings on the road ham, and after the road was opened itself, but it's no good. The stock has slumped to forty and worse; Shaffer, the general manager and the only able man we have had for years, has resigned in disgust; and if something isn't done tomorrow morning in Portal City, I know of at least one minority stockholder who is going to throw the whole mess into the courts and try for a receivership."

Mr. Norcross looked up quickly. "Are you the minority stockholder, Uncle John?" he asked, letting himself use the name by which Mr. Chadwick was best known in the wheat pit. "I am-more's the pity. I had a little lapse of sanity one fine morning a few years ago and bought in for an investment. "I don't think you have any cause to blacklist Mr. Norcross," I said. "Hasn't he been right good and brotherly to both of you this evening?"

"Oh, I didn't mean that," she said real earnestly. "But in the stateroom in Mr. Chadwick's car: the ventilator was open, you know, until Maisie Ann got up and shut it, and we couldn't very well help hearing what was said about the kidnaping. Neither Mr. Chadwick nor Mr. Norcross seemed tel. to be able to account for it."

"Can you account for it?" I asked, bluntly enough, I guess.

At this she smiled and said, "It would be rather presumptuous for me to try where Mr. Norcross and Mr. Chadwick failed, wouldn't, it? But maybe I can give you just a wee little hint. You saw the two men who went over to the auto and smoked while they were waiting for the other two to come back? "You are going back to Mr. Chadwick's car?" she asked, when she was telling me good-by and thanking me for coming up to the hotel with them. I told her I was, and then she came around to the kidnaping business again of her own accord.

"You may give Mr. Norcross the hint I gave you, if you wish," she said; "only you must be a good boy, Jimmie, and not drag me into it."

"I see," I nodded; "I'll tell the boss, when I get a good chance, and you can bet your last dollar he won't tangle you up in it-he isn't put together that way."

"Well, then, good-night," she smiled, giving me her hand. And with that she sort of edged the little girl into the elevator before we could get a chance to shake hands, and I heard her tell the boy to take them up to the mezzanine landing.

By and by, I went down to the sta-

reward."

"I don't see it," said the boss, briefly.

"Don't you? I do. I have an idea rambling around in my head that it is about time some bright young fellow was showing the people of the United States that a railroad needn't be regarded as an outlaw among the industries; needn't have the enmity of everybody it serves; needn't be the prey of a lot of disloyal and dissatisfied employees who are interested only in the figure of the pay-day check; needn't be shot at as a wolf with a

The people melted away at last, all but one-a young swell who would have been handsome if he hadn't had the eyes of a maniac and a color that was sort of corpse-like with the pallor of a booze-fighter. yond them, so sleepy that I could hardly see straight. Mr. Chadwick was telling about his early experiences in Portal City, how he blew in first on top of the Strathcona gold boom, and how he had known mighty near everybody in the region in those days.

While he was talking, a taxi drove up and one of the old residenters came in from the street and crossed to the elevators; a mighty handsome, stately old gentleman, with fierce white mustaches and a goatee, and "Southern Colonel" written all over him.

"There's one of them now; Major Basil Kendrick-Kentucky born and raised, as you might guess," Mr. Chadwick was saying.

I grabbed at the name, "Basil," right away: it isn't such a very common name, and Mrs. Sheila had said something-under the water tank, you recollect-about a "Cousin Basil" who was to have met her at the train. I was putting two or three little private guesses of my own together, when one of the elevators came down and here came our two, the young lady and the chunky little girl, with the major chuckling and smiling and giving an arm to each. They had apparently stopped at the Bullard only to wait until he could come after them and take them home.

I saw the boss sit up in his chair and stare at them. Then he said: "That's Mrs. Macrae with him now. Is she a member of his family?"

"A second cousin, or something of that sort," said Mr. Chadwick. "I met her once at the major's house out in

Mr. Norcross let the three of them get out and away, and we heard their taxi speed up and trundle off before he said, "She is married, I'm told. Where is her husband?"

Mr. Chadwick looked up as if he'd already forgotten the three who had just crossed the lobby.

"Who-Sheila Macrae? Yes, she has been married. But there isn't any husband-she's a widow."

For quite a while the boss sat staring at his cigar in a way he has when he is thinking right hard, and Mr. Chadwick let him alone. Then, all of a sudden, the boss got up and shoved his hands into his coat pockets.

"I've changed my mind, Uncle John," he said, looking sort of absent-like out of the window to where the major's taxi had been standing. "If you can pull me into that deal tomorrow morning-with an absolutely free hand to do as I think best, mind you-I'll take the job."

"I think that was choost so," said the big man, speaking slowly and with something more than a hint of a German accent. "Beckler was choost what you call him-a tam blunderer."

Like a flash it came over me that I was "listening in" to a talk between the same two men who had sat in the auto at Sand Creek siding and smoked while they were waiting for the actual kidnapers to return. You can bet high that I made myself mighty small and unobtrusive.

After a while the big man spoke again.

"What has Uncle Chon Chadwick up his sleeve got, do you think?"

"I don't think-I know!" was the snappy reply. "It's one of two things: a mceivership-which will knock us into a cocked hat because we can't fool with an officer of the United States court-or a new deal all around in the management."

"Vich of the two will it be that will come out of that commiddee room up stairs?"

"A new management, Dunton can't stand for a receivership, and Chadwick knows it. The securities would be knocked out and the majority holders-Dunton and his bunch-couldn't unload. Chadwick will name the man who is to take Shaffer's place as general manager of the railroad outfit. We might have stood it off for a while, just as I said yesterday, if we could have kept Chadwick from attending this meeting."

"But now we don't could stand it off-what then?"

"We'll have to wait and see, and size up the new man when he blows in. He'll be only human, Henckel. And if we get right down to it we can pull him over to our side-or make him wish he'd never been born."

The big man got up ponderously and brushed the cigar ashes off of his bay-window. "You wait and see what comes mit the commiddee room out. I go up to the ovvice."

When I was left alone in the row of lobby chairs with the snappy one I was scared stiff for fear, now that he didn't have anything else to think of, he'd catch on the fact that I might have overheard. But apart from giving me one long stare that made my blood run cold, he didn't seem to notice me much, and after a little he. got up and went to sit on the other side of the big rotunda where he could watch the elevators going and coming.

This Scripture pictures the church, the body of Christ, under the figure of the human body. The topic "Working With Others" can only have application to Christians working with each other; for it is as members of the body of Christ that this relationship and obligation are set forth. The church is an organism, not merely an organization. As such it is:

I. One Body (vv. 12-20).

As a body it has many members, each with a definite ministry or function. Many members are essential to a body or organism. So it is with the gift and office. The proof of this oneness is that by the sovereign act of the Holy Spirit all believers are constituted one body (v. 13). A multiplicity of organisms does not make a body, but a multiplicity of members with their separate functions. Rules Adopted by Kansas City for the Proper Regulation of Outdoor Advertising.

Kansas City authorities have drawn ip rules for the regulation of "outdoor advertising." Other communities would do well to give the matter careful consideration. Many places have even gone to the length of forbidding the billboard altogether, as a nuisance. Whether such a move is advisable is a mooted question, but all will concede that regulation of some sort is necessary. The Kansas City rules are as follows:"

"No waste or other rubbish resulting from any billboard or outdoor advertising sign shall be allowed to accumulate on or in the vicinity of the premises where the same is located.

"Bottoms of all signs shall be at least three feet from the ground.

"No outdoor advertising shall be permitted or allowed to be maintained without an annual license from the division of highways of the department of public works."

None of the foregoing rules shall apply to outdoor advertising which is not within public view of a highway, public park or reservation; nor to signs or other devices erected and , maintained in conformity with existing law, advertising or indicating the person occupying the premises in question or the business transacted thereon, or advertising the property itself or any part thereof as for sale or to let; nor to advertising for public purposes by the commonwealth or any municipality thereof.

Any city or town, by ordinance or to envy the place of another. A deacon $1.25 per 100 lbs: Texas yellow Bermnda by law, may wholly exclude outdoor

Why Castoria?

YEARS ago Castor Oil, Paregoric, Drops and Soothing Syrups were the remedies in common use for Infants and Children; Castor Oil so nauseating as to be almost impossible and the others all containing Opium in one form or another, but so disguised as to make them pleasant to the taste, yet really to stupify the child and give the appearance of relief from pain.

It required years of research to find a purely vegetable combination that would take the place of these disagreeable, unpleasant and vicious remedies that from habit had become almost universal. This was the inception of, and the reason for, the introduction of Fletcher's Castoria, and for over 30 years it has proven its worth, received the praise of Physicians everywhere and become a household word among mothers.

A remedy ESPECIALLY prepared for Infants and Children and no mother would think of giving to her baby a remedy that she would use for herself, without consulting a physician.
