Tahoka Cleans Up, Some!

RUSINESS AND RESIDENT DIS TRICT GREATLY IMPROV-ED.LET'S CONTINUE

The Clean up call which was made last week and set for Monday March 14 began to bring results Saturday. Nice little smokes began to ascend early in the day Saturday from piles of of rubbish from back yards which were being waked out of their winters sleep by the busy garden rake and energetic

Several of the business men were busy with the accumulation of tin cans which have been such an eyesore to the passer by. A lot of rubbish made its last pilgrimage to a resting place on the dumping ground.

his is a fire move in the right direction and the spirit of town cleanliness did not stop with Mony but is still active and promises to grow as spring advances. The existing state of cleanliness is not up to the standard, which must be reached before we can put cleanlibess and godliness in the same

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT.

e-sion March 14, 1910 adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas God in his wisdom has removed from our midst a faithful member and co-worker Mrs. S. C. McCarley.

Be it resolved first; that we, the W. H. M. Society of the M. E. Chu ch South humbly submit to the will of him who doeth all things well.

Be it resolved second; that we extend condolence to the bereaved ones and pray that in this sad trial they may cast their burdens on him that never faileth.

Be it resolved third; that in her death we have lost a member who shall ever be missed because of her faithful attendance, devoted spirit and loving disposition.

Be it resolved fourth; that a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, to each of the papers and the Texas Christrian Advocate also that a copy be spread on the minutes of our society.

Respectfully submitted:

Mrs. D. B. Doak, Pres. Mrs. J. D. Donaldson 1st Vice Mrs H. C.Crie, 2nd Vice. Mrs. J F. Millman, Sec.

Committee.

You cannot afford to do without the Lynn County News.

Mrs. J. V. Dyer and her daughof town, were pleasant callers at shrubery, roses, honeysuckle and Easter Egg hunt Saturday before tra bright and clean. I have 200 the home of Mrs. Crie Monday afternoon.

There were no services at the Methodist church Sunday night Bro Doak having called in his appointment as a token of the bereavement the church had sustained in the death of Sister Mc-Carley.

The darkened-church and silent bell bearing testimony of the feeling of loss that pervaded the whole community.

LADIES AID MAKE APRONS

The Baptist Ladies Aid has been making bonnets for sale, their product is very pretty and a good many ladies have availed themselves of the opportunity to procure a pretty bonnet. These earn est workers have now turned their attention to the making of aprons. Everything from the dainty after noon affair to be worn while doing fancy work, to the big practical cook apron, the sight of which is so sweet to the masculine portion Anthony is one of our most of creation. For where the cook apron waves there is allways promise of something good to eat, The highway to the masculine heart leads straight through the kitchen, with a stopover ticket in the dining room. Hence the La dies Aid is doing double duty, helping the busy housewife andbut what's the use. Everybody knows what happens when a pretty girl dons an apron and goes to the kitchen; some young man is sure to want a home of his own with a cook apron in it.

WOODMEN CALL MEETING

The Woodmen had a call meeting Monday night, March 14, to make arrangements for some one to nurse Mr. Shaw who is very ill with pneumonia at his home 18 miles Northeast of Tahoka. The doctor sent in word that he wanted a day nurse and a night nurse. And he wanted them to take entire charge of the patatient as ab solute quiet and close nursing would be necessary to his recovery Mr. Shaw has been very ill and the family is completely worn out with caring for him and his brother Woodmen will take charge o him from now on. Timp Skinner, Joe Stokes, Bob Majors went out Monday morning to take charge till permenent nurses were appointed. It is eighteen miles to Mr. Shaw's home but the boys were on the way in less than a quarter of an hour after the call for help was made known.

North Tahoka Lots.

I have made arrangements by which I will have the exclusive sale of all the lots in North Tahoka.

North Tahoka is the best and most desirable business and residence part of the town, and among the few of the many advantages are:

First. Perfect title, good as gold. The title is simple and short, being a patent from the State of Texas to the present owner, and and from him to you. Can you ask more?

Second. An abundance of shallow, soft, cold water, and perfect drainage, it being a little higher than the old town section; and lying on the north side of the square and west of the railroad, it is free from dust, smoke and soot.

It is the intention of the management of these lots, to put in, as soon as practicable, a stand pipe and gasoline engine with plenty of hose, thereby insuring perfect fire protection and reducing insurance rates from

Two American Gentlemen Make Love to Two Peasants In Brittany With Serious Results.

By ALLAN WRIGHT.

Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association

One summer day two maidens of Brittany dressed in the costumes worn by the peasant classes, walking along a country road, came upon two young art students sketching. One was seated on a stool beside a bridge crossing a brook, at work before his touring easel, while the other was lying on his back on the grass near by smoking a cigarette. The two girls as they crossed the bridge gave a sidelong glance at the canvas on the easel. The artist was putting on the finishing touches and had succeeded in making stopped for a moment and exclaimed under her breath, "How beautiful!" and was proceeding on her way when the artist stopped ber.

These two young men were George Allinson of Chicago and Gilbert Wallace of San Francisco. It was Allinson who addressed the girls. Wallace arose and joined the other three.

"It seems to me," the girl added, still regarding the painting, "that there is something wanting under the cottage on the bank in the background."

Allison looked up at her surprised. omitted to put in the reflection of the bouse in the water."

This was the beginning of an acquaintance between the two Americans and the two girls. Their conversations were carried on in French, which the young men spoke tolerably well. Both the girls were comely, and it seemed to the men that there was something about them to render them superior to their class. Having been asked their names, they gave them as Jeanne and Fanchette. Jeanne, the who criticised Allinson's painting was a brunette, Fanchette a blond.

Nothing can be more delightful than a firtation between two girl friends on the one side and tow men friends on the other, especially when there is no clashing in preferences. Allinson and Jeanne paired; Wallace and Fanchette did the same. The four met frequently and walked and chatted, most of their intercourse being in company of the whole. The girls, who were circumspect, were not to be found by the young men separated, though when all met they would at times stroll in pairs in different directions.

The time came when the two Americans who had entered upon this association with two peasant girls for a bit of pastime began to find that there lace. was a serious side to it. Their communications grew more and more like lovemaking, and the girls gave a willing ear. In time the expression of pleasure and amusement gave way to a thoughtful cast. Were they falling in love? Were the girls giving away Rufus McCarley returned to his their hearts? The men could not marhome in Rix Springs Monday right ry French peasant girls. Yet would it to desert them? Allinson and Wallace consulted with each other over their position, fully realizing its seriousness, but making no effort to break with the girls before matters should be worse. Preparations were made between them to fold their easels and sketching chairs and go to Paris, from whence they came, and thus cut the Gordian knot. But when one was ready to go the other backed out. And so they drifted as in a boat toward a cataract. They have a curious custom in Brittany. On certain fete days the marriageable girls appear in red petticoats with white or yellow borders round them. The number of borders denote give his daughter. Each white band denotes $20 per annum; each yellow band represents $200 a year.

One day when this double pair were together the girls said that one of these fetes was to come off and it would be pleasant for them all to meet there. Neither of the young men realized how far he had gone in his affair till the girl he was devoted to in a learn just what dowry he might expect her to bring him. The young men agreed to meet the girls at the fete: then when the former were alone together they compared notes, each admitting to the other the hint he had received as to the information he could

The matter now looked serious indeed. The two men spent much timeindeed, all their time-endeavoring to find a way out of the escapade, neither of them wishing to find such a way. They drifted into the hall as they had drifted into the affair itself, though they made a resolution to show the girls that they did not consider the affair of any serious consequence by doing considerable of their dancing with others. But they had been making such resolutions ever since the af-is to be especially interested in the stripes on their petticoats."

"And if either of them can show yellow band she'll regard the matter fixed beyond a doubt. Fancy you, with an income of a thousand, being caught by a dowry of two hundred a year."

"And fancy you, heir to a big property, being caught by a couple of white stripes representing $20 a year each." "Do you know what I think we de-

Fanchette, how-"Certainly, monsieur," she replied in ever, looked upon her single white one

The music was not bad, the girls looked very pretty, and between the dances there was moonlight outside. Somehow it seemed to each of these two young men that it could not be possible that the girl he was with was a peasant. There was just enough of his own thinking self left to make him understand that he was looking through rose colored glasses. Each man danced inside, then strolled with fis girl out into a flower garden. The "You are right," be said. "I have flowers, lighted by a full moon, did not appear more heavenly than the girl whose warm hand rested on his arm. When the ball was over and the two men friends went away together neither spoke for some time. Then Allinson said:

> "I've made an ass of myself." "Same here."

"I've offered myself."

"Same bere."

"I wish we could meet the fool killer on the way home."

"It would be the only way out of it." What are we going to do? "What we agreed last night-take the train this morning to Paris. There. away from these two girls, we may find some solution of the problem." The next morning they breakfasted in silence, went to the train in silence and rode to Paris in the same unsociable condition. Each had given his fiancee his address and begged her to write him at once and two or three first mail that could bring a letter from Brittany each feared he would get a letter, and each was disappointed because he did not get one.

No letter came the next day nor the pext nor the next.

"What does it mean?" asked Wal-

"Don't know," replied Allinson.

"I've a mind to go and find out." "Like the man who jumped into the bramble bush a second time to scratch his eyes in again."

"You're right there. I won't go." At the end of a week the two men were in a fever. Though they had probably been let out of the affair comfortably, they would have preferred some other way of being let out. That's the trouble in such matterseach party prefers to do the breaking off. They were thinking of going back to Brittany to find out what was the matter when they met with a surprise.

They received a card. It read thus: Miss Grace Nettleton and Miss Leola Thorne would be pleased to see Mr. George Allinson and Mr. Gilbert Wallace at a musicale to be given at 12 Rue de 8.

on the evening of Oct. 2 at 9 p. m. "Who in thunder are Grace Nettleton and Leola Thorne?" exclaimed Allin-

Wallace said nothing for awbile. His eyes were glued to the card. Presently he broke silence.

"George, it seems to me there's a nigger in the fence." "What do you mean?"

"I have a theory. It's this: Those two girls we have been courting are either American or English girls studying music in Paris. They went to Brittany for a vacation and for some reason best known to themselves -probably to better mingle with the class. people-assumed peasants' costumes. They just simply wiped the floor with "You don't mean it!"

"I do. Look at their names, Nettleton and Thorne. I feel a prickly sensa-

"Well," exclaimed Alliuson, "my girl has made a bargain, and I'm bound to hold her to it." "So I will with mine if I can."

The two young men, immaculately dressed, went to the musicale, where they were received by the two girls who had snared them. She who had been "Jeanne" wore two yellow silk bands around her skirt, while "Fanchette's" costume was decorated by a single white one. Jeanne turned out to have $200,000 in her own right, $2.00. and Fanchette was heir to a million They were both Americans.

The young men expected to see a pair or dancing eyes in each girl's head, but the triumph was well concealed. Though two pairs of lovers made a long wooing with many setbacks, the affair terminated in a dov-

How to Make a Bed of the Edible Young Shoots.

Asparagus is a perennial berb cuiti rated for its edible young shoots. It is a rugged plant and will thrive under adverse conditions, but to obtain the succulent stalks needed for culinary purposes well drained, rich soil is absolutely peressary. The soil should be well mixed with rotted manures con taining much nitrogen and potash.

Prepare the bed by plowing or spad ing deeply, beginning the work early and looking after the drainage problem carefully. Plants at least one year old should be obtained for this bed. They can be raised from seed, which is sown outdoors in April in drills one foot apart, the seed being covered about one-balf inch. Plants suitable for transplanting the following spring may be easily grown this way, or roots may be obtained from one to three years old.

Set the plants in the permanent bed in furrows eighteen inches apart, the plants being the same distance apart in each furrow. How to Paper the Walls In an Attrac-

So many mistakes are made in the papering of walls that perhaps a few bints will not be out of place, as spring will soon be here, when repairs are being made everywhere.

Never paper the walls of a small room with large figures. No matter how pretty they are, the whole effect is likely to be crowded and very homeiy. If the room faces north, use & warm tone, urver a blue or a gray or a green. Yellow is admirable in a dark room, sod bright rose makes even a plain, dreary room look rich and in-

The fashion in dining rooms at pres ent dispenses entirely with pictures The walls are either covered with tapestry paper or done in paneled effects. Wainscoting is very much the fashion for those that can afford it.

If the chair covers and portieres are of figured material they require a plain paper, and vice versa. A plain paper is much better than a figured one for showing off paintings and engravings.

If the room is very high it is a good plan to do away with the frieze and to bring the ceiling tint down on the side walls at least eighteen inches, when the moiding can be placed at the top of the wall paper proper.

The servants' rooms and the kitchen should be natuted with a durable color, so that they can be scrubbed thoroughly with seap and water.

It is dangerous to trust the eye in matters of color; therefore the samples of upholstery materials should at ways be taken along when choosing the paper.

How to Clean Glass Water Bottles. To clean glass water bottles cut up a large potato fine and put it in the bottle with some warm water and shake it rapidly until it is clean. Some use shot and soda, but potato is even more effectual.
