Remedy Is Very Simple. Relief Is Positive.

Croup has lost its terrors in thousands of homes. No more frantic calls to hurry the doctor, who is coming as fast as the law allows. No more tense moments of anxious waiting. No more gasping and strangling little children, whose sufferings seemed almost beyond belief.

When the choking sob wakens father and mother, they may phone the doctor, but they are also telling him that they are using Nash's Croup-Pneumonia Salve and he knows things are going to turn

First apply a little of the salve up each nostril with finger. This clears the nasal passages at once. Next place hot wet cloths on the little fellow's chest and back. After three minutes remove and quickly rub salve on thickly. A miraculous change will come; he will breathe easier and easier. Now cover chest and back with warm white flannels; a quiet, comforting sleep will come. Form bedclothes around chin so that vapors will be inhaled and all's well. The doctor will be pleased; doctors know Nash's

Long Bodices Slightly Blousing; Pagoda Sleeves.

Silhouette Remains Practically Unchanged in Mid-Winter Showings by French Dressmakers.

The silhouette remains practically anchanged in the mid-winter showings of clothes by the French dressmakers, writes a Paris fashion correspondent. The waistline is very low-long bodices are slightly blousing. Skirts flare toward the bottom and sleeves are long. the short sleeve being the exception. Sleeves are of the pagoda type, or they may be caught in at the wrist. There are a few tight-fitting sleeves, some full ones with the fullness gathered into the wrist and many that are wide and straight. Many show fanciful slashings, through which a bright colored undersleeve is revealed. Red is still a favorite color for facing wide sleeves as well as for undersleeves.

The long, floating scarf of a contrasting color is a feature of Jenny's afternoon and evening dresses. Even serge dresses in her collection exploit this idea. Frequently the scarf is of silk, such as foulard.

Skirts are longer, the hem being about six inches from the ground. The perfectly slim, straight skirt is being rapidly replaced by the one of circular cut. In most instances the ripples appear at the sides only, the back and front hanging in straight

Hem lines are irregular. The effect of an uneven hem is not obtained through panels as frequently as it was last season. The wide floating panel is passing. It has served its purpose—that of producing an uneven appearance at the bottom of the skirt.

NOVELTY SILKS FOR SPRING

As to plain materials, from present indications here and abroad crepe dechine is to be one of the most important weaves. A number of fine grades of this weave are being made, including one known under the name of cachemire, and many other titles. It resembles both crepe de chine and radium, having the close, flat appearance of the latter cloth.

Feathered Slippers.

Among the novelties of the season is the evening slipper covered with feathers in several shades. Peacock shades the edge and sometimes a jeweled buckle. CARE IN SELECTING COLORS

Becoming Colors for Everyday Clothes for Mother and Daughters Will Add to Happiness.

Isn't it more important that everyday clothing, both for mother and child, should be pretty and becoming than that the "Sunday clothes" or clothes for special occasions should have all the care? A child that wears a becoming school dress will be much more likely to take care of it and learn better habits and will be a happier child than one who is ashamed of her clothes. A mother who wears neat, pretty everyday dresses will be happier and have a happier family than one who is careless or slovenly or who wears ugly, unbecoming work forty-two families, challenges the

This idealist broke forth into lamentation over the quarrels and trivial animosities which too often exist between men of genius, "My dear," he exclaims, "if twelve of these men would hold together for ten years, the whole world aspect would now be changed, and twelve men did once hold together and the whole face of the world was changed."

Why cannot this wise comment be applied to the existing groups in any city and village-i. e., to its churches, its schools, its lodges, its clubs and what not? Careful Inspection of Car Before Ba ginning Lengthy Journey and Use of Plenty of Common Sense Are Essential.

Some automobile drivers have a real fear of driving in the winter rains along city pavements and country highways. There is a constant dread in the mind that something adverse may happen at a critical moment; the car may skid, something may go wrong with the steering gear or the automobile may fail to perform up to the proper standard in negotiating a steep grade.

"Fears of winter driving would be greatly lessened," declared E. E. Caister, director of sales for the Standard Steel Automotive corporation, "if the motorist would use plenty of common sense in the matter of actual driving. together with a careful inspection of his automobile before a lengthy journey is undertaken. One of the really great errors that a driver can make in traveling during the winter months is to imagine that he can proceed at the same rate of speed that is possible during the dry months.

"Of course, the pavements, after the oil has been washed off by the early rains, are in no sense a danger, yet promised by the use of this electric it is well to observe proper precaution and play safe. The reason for driving at a slower speed in the winter months than during the summer is that a motorcar cannot be brought to an abrupt stop as easily on a wet pavement as is the case on a dry stretch of roadway. The brakes may be applied but if the car is going at a high rate of speed it is not at all certain that it will not slide just enough to cause a collision at a curve or a railfoad crossing."

TIRE LOG WILL HELP OWNER

Use Small Note Book and Keep Accurate Record of Date Put on, Taken Off and Mileage.

Do you keep a tire log? It will help a lot when you go to the adjuster with your tale of woe. Use a small note book and give a separate page to each tire. Rule off five vertical columns. Label them as follows: Date put on, speedometer reading, date taken off, speedomoter reading, mileage. Make the partial totals in the last column and add any other information necessary, such as kind of weather, etc.

GOOD TEST FOR VENT PIPES

In Filling, if Clear, Fact Will Be Indicated by Overflow of Water Over End.

In filling the radiator of the car, allow enough water to pass in to bring the level over the end of the vent pipe. If this pipe is clear, as it always should be, the fact will be indicated by the overflowing of the water through it. If it is not clear, the water will overflow through the filter cap and not through the vent pipe, which should be attended to at

BLACKBOARD LECTURES GIVEN TO OFFENDING BROOKLYN MOTORISTS

Offending motorists brought before Magistrate Fisk in the traffic court. Brooklyn, are punished in a rather novel manner. They are compelled to listen to a blackboard lecture, delivered by Policeman John M. Finnerty on trailic regulations and the rules of the road as shown in the photograph.

GOOD JOKE ON DANISH KING

Monarch Jumped Too Quickly to Conclusion That Eskimo Was Actuated by Loyalty.

An amusing story of the king of Denmark's recent visit to Greenland was recently told by M. Aagaard of the Danish legation, to members of the Danish club in London.

As the royal yacht was approaching Greenland a dark speck became visible on the open sea. It proved to be a solitary Eskimo in his little cayak (native canoe). The Eskimo came on board and his loyalty in having braved the perils of the sea in such a frail craft assured him the warmest of welcomes. The king presented him with a cigar and, what the Eskimos most highly prize, a rifle.

One third of your life is allotted to sleep. Do you get your share?

The most important period in the process of applying nutrition to the repair of the body is while you are asleep. For the most favorable transformation of digested food into nerve and cell tissue, so doctors tell us, sleep is absolutely essential.

Is it any wonder that those who suffer from lack of proper sleep are weak, pale and lacking in energy or ambition?

One of the causes of insomnia is nerve-irritation from tea and coffee drinking. Tea and coffee both contain caffeine, which has a tendency to cause undue stimulation. The irritating effect of caffeine often results in insomnia, depression, and a weakened nervous system.

You can easily overcome these troubles by drinking Postum instead of tea or coffee. Postum is a delicious. satisfying cereal beverage, and it is absolutely free from caffeine, or any other harmful substance.

Ask your grocer for Postum. Drink this delicious, refreshing beverage for ten days. Then see if you do not feel better and more clear headed, and if you do not sleep better at night-as so many other people have proved for themselves.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

Tahoka Man Appointed

The news that District Judge W. R. Spencer, would have to leave his duties in Lubbock in the near future for three weeks to take his wife to some health resort in quest of her return to normal physical conditions, awoke great unrest among the lawyers of Lubbock as during his absence some of the most important cases in the court were to be tried, but a little corporation on the part of the bar members has induced G Lo.khart, of Tahoka, to act in the absence of the judge.

The writer is not acquainted with Judge Lockhart, but we assure the people who will be interested in court proceedings during his rule, will find him competent, willing to work and reliable for to find a man who would not act as well as Judge Spencer is no little task. As Judge Spencer knows the laws and is true to every principle embodied in our statues, and his judgment is quickly and decisively understand, and that those who had to do with the appointment have selected Judge Lockhart place him high in the estimation of the p-ople.

ELISHA AND THE SHUNAMMITS WOMAN LESSON TEXT-II Kings 4:8-36.

GOLDEN TEXT-Verily, verily, I say unto you, the hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear shall live.-John 5:25. REFERENCE MATERIAL-John 11:

PRIMARY TOPIC - Elisha Brings Boy to Life. JUNIOR TOPIC-How Elisha Brought

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC Boy to Life. -Elisha Helping in a Home YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC -Our Ministry of Comfort and Help.

1. The Shunammite's Hospitality to Elisha (vv. 8-11).

1. Its occasion (v. 8). A wealthy woman of Shunem, observing that Elisha passed continually by her house in his journeys, was moved with compassion toward him. She determined according to her ability to supply his

2. Its nature (vv. 8-11). "She constrained him to eat bread" (vv. 8,-9). As a result of her earnest entreaty, as often as he passed by her house he turned in to eat bread. She received a prophet in the name of a prophet.

II. Elisha Endeavors to Repay Her Kindness (vv. 12-17).

1. He offers to ask a favor from the king or head of the army (v. 13). This offer implies that Elisha had influence at the royal court. The woman's reply shows her truly to be a great woman. She did not desire to change the calm and quiet of her home for a place even in the royal court. Her answer also shows that her motive in extending generosity to the prophet was entirely unselfish, purely because he was God's prophet.

2. Elisha announces the giving of a son to her (vv. 16, 17). Through inquiry of Gehazi it was discovered that this woman was childless. So the prophet made known to her that in about a year from that time she should experience the joy of a mother. III. The Coming of Sorrow to the Shunammite's Home (vv. 18-21). The child which brought joy to her home was suddenly taken away. How many homes are like this! Scarcely do we begin to enjoy life until death enters and snatches away some loved one. The cause of his death was probably sunstroke, for the heat of the sun at harvest time in this country is very intense. When the boy complained of his head, the father sent him home to his mother. By noon the child died and the mother laid him upon the bed of the man of God. Faith prompted her to do this. She did not make preparation for burial, but for restoration to life (Heb. 11:35).

IV. The Mother Goes to Elisha

(vv. 22-28). When one is in trouble or sorrow the best place to go is to the man of God who is able to give counsel and comfort. Happy is the one who in the days of prosperity and sunshine has so related himself to God and His prophets that he can have help and sympathy in time of trouble.

1. She took hold of Elisha's feet (v. 27). This was the eastern way of enforcing a petition. She passed by Gehazi. She would not be content with the servant when the master could be reached.

2, She chided the prophet (v. 28). "Did I desire a son?" This implies that it would have been better not to have had a child than to have lost him so soon,

V. The Child Restored (vv. 29-37). 1. Gehazi's fruitless errand (vv. 29- is candy-like Cascarets. One or two a box. Children 31). He hurried away and placed the prophet's staff upon the child's face, but it did not revive. Perhaps the fault lay in Gehazi-his lack of faith, The woman seemed to perceive his lack; she would not trust him. She would not go until Elisha was willing to go along. This fruitless errand of Gehazi shows the worthlessness of the forms of religion when used by those who have no faith in them.

2. Elisha's efficient service (vv. 32-37). He went to the house where the dead child was. (1) He prayed (v. 33). He knew that no one but God could help, so he closed the door, shutting all others out. Our service to men should be preceded by prayer, (2) He stretched himself upon the child (v. 34). He brought his warm body into touch with the cold body of the child. God blesses and saves through the warm touch of those who are in touch with Him. After we pray we should get into actual touch with those dead in trespasses and sin. God's method of saving the world is through the ministry of saved men and women.

A Daily Prayer.

I jollied him a bit and let him nose me to his heart's content. Then suddenly, as if he had discovered a longlost master, he broke away and began to leap and dance around me, barking a furious and hilarious welcome. In the midst of this hubbub I heard hoofbeats and the squeaking of saddle leather, and the dog's owner rode up. At first I thought the dimly outlined Stetson-hatted figure in the saddle was that of a boy. But it was a woman's voice, and a mighty pleasant one, that called to the dog: "Down, Barney. and behave yourself-what's the matter with you, sir!"

I stood up and pulled off my cap. "I'm chiefly the matter." I said. Your dog seems to think he knows me, and I'm awfully sorry that his memory is so much better than mine."

You'd think-anybody would think -that a woman riding alone in the dark on a solitary mountain road would be handsomely startled, to say the least, at seeing a man rise up fairly under her horse's nose. But if my little lady were scared, she certainly didn't parade her fright.

"Barney is such a foolish dog, somered it, and began to twist it times," she said apologetically. "He has a double brain, you know; half of it is good-natured and silly and the other half is-well, it's-"

> The dog had come around again wagging his tail and at that magic word "half" I stooped to let him stick shouting out and scaring the entire combination into a wild stampede. For, if you'll believe me, the dog was my dog. One-half of his face was white and the other was so black that it merged and faded harmoniously in-

She spoke to her pony and we went on. Ahead of us and diagonally up a steep slope I could see the dim shapes of a number of buildings, all dark. Then we came to a great dump, looking as if the mountain had at one time opened to pour out a cataract of

CHAPTER VI.

The Old Cinnabar.

"Daddy, here is a man I found down at the head of Antelope gulch; he had lost his way, so I brought him home with me," was the simple manner in which she launched me; and I found myself shaking hands with "Sure!" I bellowed, "I knew it!" an elderly man who looked as if he might be a farmer, or a miner, or something of that nature-you will know what I mean-flannel shirt, trousers tucked into boots, iron-gray whiskers all over his face, an eye as mild as a collie dog's.

> "You done plum' right, Jeanie," he remarked; and then to me: "Come right on in, stranger, and be at home.

A Little Later the Girl Returned to Set the Table.

for it." After which he went to take care of the piebald pony.

The log cabin proved to be primitive only on the outside. The interior was a dream of cozy homeliness. A hanging lamp lighted it, and in its mild hand of cards over carefully to the glow I had my first real look at the end that I should not overplay it.

She wasn't beautiful in any showgirl meaning of the word; she was

And in the face | mouth neither too large nor too small which way I should go, to the right of all that she was willing to take upheld by a firm, round chin, and the or to the left. Just as I was making a chance on me! If she had only chin upheld by an extra firm little jaw. up my mind I heard a patter of feet known that I would cheerfully risk As she had admitted, her eyes were sleeping in the cellar-to say nothing | blue-the blue that shades into violet -and they were well-set; wide apart beast, indistinctly. He had been com- her . . . but she was going on a bit and perfectly fearless; the kind of eyes fit to match the straight-lined brows that usually go with them.

I sat before the cheerful blaze, chuckling quietly to myself over the mad adventures of the day and their highly romantic, not to say miraculous, outcome. Beyond all manner of doubt I had stumbled upon the three talismans of Cousin Percy's cryptic letter. By the most marvelous of accidents I had discovered the girl, the horse and the dog; and, if the remainder of Percy's letter were to be taken at its face value, I should now be in touch with my legacy.

As to the character of that legacy, there could be no further question. Grandfather Jasper had left me a mine; and I was fully prepared to find it the drowned mine of Bullerton's story. What I might be able to make of it was a matter which could well be postponed to another day. Just as There it was, you see: THE MINE! I reached this postponing conclusion, the girl's father came in, drew up a chair on the opposite side of the hearth, and began to make me welcome in a mild-mannered way, saying that they didn't have much company, summer day; refreshing, you know, and were always "master" glad to see a new face. He did not ask me any "I sup-pup-pose my eyes are blue; troublesome questions; and beyond telling me his name, which was Hiram Twombly, did not volunteer any information about himself or his daughter, nor did he explain how they came to be living in so much comparative a while back, Miss Jeanie, you gath-

A little later the girl returned to set the table, and presently we had supper. It was an amazingly good meal; crisp bacon, fried potatoes, hot biscuits and honey, and coffee that was most delicious in spite of the condensed milk which was made to serve as cream.

After we left the table the blueeyed maiden got housewifely busy, and the old man and I sat before the fire and smoked. I don't remember just how it was that we finally drifted around to automobiles and motor boats | noon." and such things, but we did, and maybe I may have bragged a bit about having driven and tinkered pretty nearly all the breeds of go-cart on land and water-as I really had.

"Know about machinery, do you?" said my hearth-mate; and then, with a humorous glint in his mild eyes: "Shouldn't wonder if you could be sort of a Godsend to me, if you wanted to. To-morruh, if you ain't in too big a hurry to be leavin' us, I'll get you to show me a few things that I don't know, 'long them lines, maybe." Of course, I acquiesced, cheerfully. By and by the girl came in and sat down to knit, just as her grandmother might have done, and at that her father got up, and, lighting a lantern, went out. I was fairly perishing by this time to know a vast number of things, but hardly knew how to begin asking about them. So, as the old man clapped on his hat and left the cabin, I blew out the first foolish remark that came uppermost.

"All dressed up, and nowhere to go; isn't that about the way of it for you two up on this mountain?" "Meaning Daddy, and now, particularly?" she said, smiling across at me. 'He has gone to make his regular round of the mine buildings and cabins. Not that there is the slightest use of it; only he likes to feel that he is at least pretending to earn his pay."

"The mine?" I queried. "Yes; this is the old Cinnabar, you know; and Daddy is the-well, I suppose you might call us the caretakers, though there isn't much to take care of. The mine has been shut down for a year and more."

"Is it a gold mine?"

"It was."

"Why the past tense?" "Water," she said, briefly. "It's a shut down."

Of course, this was exactly what I plain unvarnished confirmation of afraid Daddy Hiram would come back ing of despondency. Percy had wired, she said, with more curiosity than reou remember, that his letter was no sentment, I thought: joke; but it seemed that it really was one, and that the joke-which was a mighty grim one-was on me. "Can't the water be pumped out?"

I asked. "It seems not. I understand the trying to pump it out. It's-it's rather | whatever poor fragment of a mind I | storm, because in the fiercest gales

"Oh, not indeed; he was very kind. When he found that Daddy's gulch claim wasn't going to pan out anything, he said he needed a caretaker here, and since that time he has sent us money every month. But now I suppose it will all be different. Mr. Dudley is dead,"

"But the heirs?" I suggested. "We don't even know who they are. When Mr. Dudley went away he left a sealed envelope with Daddy. He said he might come back again, some time, but if he didn't, or couldn't, Daddy was to keep the envelope and give it to his-Mr. Dudley's-representa-

"How were you to know this representative if one should come?" I edged in cautiously.

"I don't know," she replied simply. "I should suppose he would be able to identify himself in some way, though; shouldn't you? That is, if he ever comes."

"Sure: nothing easier, of course." I agreed; and then, since we seemed to have scraped the bottom of the Cinnabar dish clean I switched off to something else. "When we were coming up the road

If I had reached up and got her pistol out of its holster over the mantel to bang it off into the fireplace she could hardly have been more startled. "Ch-Charles Bullerton?" she stammered. "Is Mr. Bullerton here?"

"Not here, exactly, but he was in Atropia two days ago. Do you, by any chance, happen to know him?"

"Oh, yes; qui-quite well." "Then, naturally, you know best whether or not he is in my class-the crazy class, I mean." Once more she let the blue eyes drop to her knitting, and if I wasn't mistaken the pretty lips were twisting themselves in a sort of wry smile.

"The last time I saw him he told me he was crazy," she admitted. "Isn't this delightful!" I murmured. "Bullerton is crazy and I'm crazy; perhaps we are all a bit crazy. Do you know, Miss Jeanie, that I have come thousands of miles to find you?" "To find me?"-the blue eyes were as round as the full moon. "Even so; you, your horse and your dog. Would you-er-would you permit an exceedingly personal question? Remembering always that it is put

I stuck my head out of the blankets and listened greedily. It seemed to be very highly necessary that I should be made acquainted with the precise ingredients of that kettle of fish. But my luck had exhausted itself. In a few minutes there was a stir in the living-room below, and I heard Daddy Twombly shoveling up ashes to cover the fire. That meant goodnight; and though I cortinued to listen, there were no more sounds, and I was finally obliged to go to sleep, leaving the fishkettle still unanalyzed.

"Well, hello, Charley Bullerton! What in Sam Hill are you doin' up in this neck o' woods?"

Origin of Wedding Cake. The wedding cake dates back to the laws of Remulus and the early days of Rome. Instead of elaborate marriage festivals Romulus instituted the confarreatio. The union of the man and woman was solemnized simply and quickly by the eating of a loaf of barley bread together. This marriage ceremony was in force for some generations among the Romans. Then, as civilzation developed, the barley bread became a cake,
