NEWS ...ABOUT WOMEN ...OF FOR

Linda Huffaker, CHD Agent, Says.....

Is a vitamin a day insurance of good health? Not necessarily.

Vitamins are needed for good health, but excessive amounts can be dangerous. When daily food intake is adequate, you don't need to take vitamin pills.

Individuals differ in the amounts and types of vitamins needed and a doctor can prescribe the type to suit individual needs. See a physician if you need vitamins.

Excess amounts of Vitamins B and C are easily disposed of by the body without harm. However, too much Vitamins A and D can be dangerous because the body has no way of getting rid of excess.

Good food sources of Vitamin A are liver, egg yolk, dark green and yellow vegetable, deep yellow fruits, whole milk, cheddar-type cheese, and ice cream. Most people do not get enough Vitamin A.

Symptoms of excessive intakes of Vitamin A include fatigue, abdominal discomfort, bone and joint pain, loss of body hair, headaches, and yellowing of skin.

Excessive Vitamin D leads to nausea, frequent urination, and diarrhea. It can also cause weakness and depression.

Foods high in Vitamin D are fish liver oils, egg yolks, liver, and milk fortified with Vitamin D.

A well-balanced diet is the best insurance for good health.

Let Art Erase "Bores"

When children recuperate from colds and flu, they get "the bores" at home. "The bores" are easy to diagnose — when the children wander aimlessly about, when they search for something to do, when they look downhearted — they've got "the bores."

"The bores" are easily cured with games and challenging fun. An interest in art has often developed when a wise mother cured "the bores" with pen, paint and brushes.

Calypso printing is an art form any age child can enjoy. Supply the child with modeling clay, paints, brushes and Flair porous point pens in a rainbow of ten colors. He'll need paper too. Later, he might like frames to preserve his creations for all to see.

Cover his working surface with newspapers so accidents won't happen. Now he's ready to start his art and get rid of "the bores."

First he should decide on a simple subject. He might select a fish or a bird... a younger child would be content with a circle or square. Show the child how to mold a piece of clay into his desired shape, making sure that one surface is absolutely flat.

Now, with a brush, teach the child to mix colors on the flat surface of the clay. Use just enough water to keep the paint from drying too quickly. Press the painted surface of the clay onto the paper; then lift the clay straight up from the paper so as not to smear the colors.

Explain to the child that he can repeat the pattern all over the paper. Now let the paint dry a bit.

With Flair porous point pens — in red, black, blue, green, purple, turquoise, orange, yellow, brown and pink — add the finishing touches. If the child has used a fish design, for example, he'll use a pen to draw the eyes, scales and gills. If he's selected a circle, he might want to draw in squares and triangles with his Flair. Flair can write bold or fine lines, depending upon the pressure the child exerts.

"The bores" will be cured and the art of clay printing discovered. It's fun and it's challenging — the best medicine to chase away "the bores."

Your Television Set Can Be Used To Detect Severe Storms And Tornadoes

The use of a television set to detect tornadoes is new and easy to understand. This information has been sent to us by Carroll P. McCoy of Gage, Oklahoma. Gage and much of the rest of Northwest Oklahoma lies in what has sometimes been called tornado alley. We are fairly well accustomed to possible severe weather warnings, possible tornado and damaging winds warnings, and tornado sighted warnings. We know that tornadoes can, with about 50% accuracy, be picked up and located on radar. They can also be picked up on an instrument called an oscilloscope and be partially located directionally and as to place. Other very sophisticated equipment is also available for making a tornado's presence known. Certainly one should pay heed to warnings being made using some of the methods just mentioned. Within the past three years another method of knowing a tornado is in the area and close has been discovered. It was first announced September 22, 1968 and was discovered by Newton Weller of West Des Moines, Iowa. It is called the Weller Method after him. It makes use of television and works on the principle that lightning and the severe electrical disturbance associated with a tornado are near the 55 megacycle frequency found on Channel 2 of one's television set. This method has detected the presence of a tornado as far away as 30 miles, though 20 miles is usually about maximum and 5 miles should be considered average. It has warned of the presence of a tornado when no other warnings of any kind have been given! Using it one has a maximum of 15-20 minutes to reach shelter. It will work with any television set, black and white, or color. It will work with a set using a high antenna or with a built-in "rabbit ears" type antenna. The higher the antenna the farther away a tornado can be detected is all. To use this method of learning of the presence of a tornado one first turns his set to Channel 13, which is 211 megacycles and as far from the frequency of lightning as is possible on most television sets, and turns the brightness control down to the point that the screen is black. Then he turns to Channel 2 and if there is no storm in the area Channel 2 should also be black. Lightning will be seen on this channel. If the lightning of an approaching storm produces wide white bands which linger on the television screen, the storm approaching should be considered dangerous enough to seek shelter. If the screen becomes completely white a tornado is definitely in the area and one should seek shelter immediately. This is true whether there are programs on channels 13 and 2 or not. A portable, battery operated set is probably most satisfactory for use in warning of the presence of a tornado because it will remain on even though there is a power failure. One should, of course, pay attention to severe weather warning advisories. The preceding information has appeared in a number of news media. The immediate source of this writer was an article by Henry and Vera Bradshaw on page 93 of the March 1969 issue of Popular Mechanics and persons interested in more detailed information and in the technical details should consult this publication.

Agriculture Secretary Clifford Hardin recently said it will probably take the new Administration nearly a year to draw up a general farm policy and that Administration officials probably will not be considering any new legislation with Congress until next winter. Meanwhile the new Secretary has announced that a series of regional hearings will be held across the country on farm problems and farm legislation. And, hopefully, one of those hearings will be held in Lubbock to give Plains farmers a better first hand opportunity to include their thoughts among the "many different ideas" the Secretary has said would be examined during the next few months. Both Plains Cotton Growers, Inc. and Grain Sorghum Producers Association have extended the Secretary an invitation to hold a meeting in Lubbock. In his letter to the Secretary, PCG Executive Vice President Donald Johnson pointed out that Lubbock is the center of the most concentrated area of irrigated cotton and grain sorghum production in the land and has significant production of wheat, sugar beets, vegetables, soy beans, castors, corn and other field crops, as well as a huge and booming cattle feeding industry. He added "Lubbock has completely adequate transportation and meeting facilities, and in this atmosphere we believe you and your people can truly feel the pulse of modern commercial agriculture." Secretary Hardin's statement that USDA officials probably will not be considering new legislation with Congress until next winter came in an address to the Illinois State Committee on Agriculture. He also said in the address that he was not sure at this time whether the philosophy of paying for land taken from production on a crop-by-crop basis will be included in the current Administration's long range plans or whether "other methods will be required." He said "The Government has been involved in diverting land from production for 36 years, and urban Congressmen have become increasingly sensitive to the cost and methods used." Which brings up the fact that while new farm legislation may not be considered until next winter, at least one subject of paramount importance to farmers - that of payment limitations - will see heated discussion in the halls of Congress long before that time. Members of Congress who have through the years repeatedly proposed a limit on the total Government payments that can be made to an individual farmer will have two occasions in the very near future to renew their efforts. They are certain not to miss these opportunities. A debate on the limitation of payments when the House considers the Agriculture Appropriations Bill has become an annual expectation. And that Bill is scheduled to come before the House within the next week or ten days. Also it will soon be necessary for Commodity Credit Corporation to seek an extension or an expansion of its lending authority, and proponents of a limit on farm program payments will in all likelihood be ready with a rider which would accomplish their purpose. CCC operations are financed largely by borrowings, mostly from the U. S. Treasury. Its statutory borrowing authority is currently $14.5 billion, of which on January 31 CCC had in use all but about 495 million. Seriousness of the payment limitations threat to agriculture became more apparent last year when the House, in the process of extending the Agriculture Act of 1965 for one year to December 31, 1970, voted a $20,000 individual ceiling on payments. The limiting amendment was later deleted from the Bill in the Senate-House Conference Committee. Still, the House vote is having its effect. Perhaps more than anything else it can be held responsible for the National Cotton Council's Producer Steering Committee proposing that producer income be supplemented through a "certificate plan" rather than by direct Government payments. The certificate plan, as envisioned, would not take away or reduce the portion of producer income which under the current program has come through direct payments. Instead of a payment from the Government, producers would get the necessary "cost adjustment" on each bale of cotton from the buyer or from someone on down the line in trade channels. A certificate, with value calculated basically in the same manner as direct payments are now figured, would be issued on each bale and would be redeemable by anyone who handled the bale of cotton. This, it is felt, would make it more difficult to tie payments to individual cotton producers and perhaps reduce public and Congressional criticism of the program. The certificate plan, along with a general legislative proposal advanced by the Producer Steering Committee, was adopted by the Planning and Policy Committee of NCC and was recommended by the Delegate Body as "guidelines" for the NCC Board of Directors. It will doubtless be discussed at the regional hearings scheduled this spring by the Secretary.

Try a Two-Tub Bath for Spring

Before you shed your boots and overcoat for shorts and sandals; try some personal spring cleaning on yourself. Warm weather wear will show off skin on legs, arms, feet and other areas that are covered up in winter. You'll want to be sure that every inch of exposed skin is scrupulously clean and smooth. As a special spring treat, try a two-tub bath that includes a rinse with clear water. You always rinse your hair after you shampoo, so why not whisk away the residue that clings to skin after you bathe. Start by filling the tub half-way with warm water. Then give yourself a thorough scrub with an antibacterial soap, like Dial, to help control odor causing bacteria and inhibit germs that can cause infections. And Dial is mild enough even for a baby's tender skin. As you wash be particular with areas that get warm weather exposure. You might want to rub your feet with a soft-bristled handbrush and use a pumice stone for roughened skin on heels. Smooth cuticles back on your toes as you bathe. To prepare for short skirts and sleeveless dresses, scrub knees and elbows carefully. Warm suds and a long-handled brush will work wonders on back and shoulders. Be sure to suds your neck to your hairline too. Now take the second step in your spring bath time ritual. While you're draining the water, as an extra invigorating touch, splash yourself with water from the shower or from a shoulder hose spray attached to the faucet. Then, if you have loads of time and plenty of water to play with, top off your bath with a luxurious second soak in water treated with bath salts, bath oil, or any other favorite additive. After drying thoroughly with a fresh bath towel, massage with lotion. Pay extra attention to rough skin on elbows and knees. You'll want to repeat the ritual all through the spring and summer to keep yourself in super-shape for warm weather fashions.

Wet Weather Hint
 Springtime means rainy days and waterlogged youngsters tramping through the house. Prepare in advance for watery weather by hanging a roll of Kleenex paper towels in the back hall or on the porch where children enter the house. When children come in, they can lay wet hats, gloves, or shoes to drain on towels. Hang coats on a rack with towels underneath to catch dripping water. Use damp, sudsy towels to help you clean mud off shoes, boots, or plastic raincoats.

THE PHILOSOPHER
New Idea
 (Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm takes what must be a backward look at a new invention.)
 Dear editor:
 I was out here walking over this Johnson grass farm inspecting things and planning my work for the months ahead—well I wasn't actually doing much planning, what I was doing was getting away from the noise of my house, noise like "other homes around here have washing machines, why can't this one?" or "this land is about as good as that across the fence, how come it doesn't make as much?" or "when are you going to fix that loose board in the back steps?" and so when I stumbled on a newspaper it was especially welcome.
 Since most problems can't be solved anyway, a smart man will worry about those furthestest away from home.
 According to an article in this paper, the latest thing in space work is a camera that takes four pictures at the same time for a satellite circling the earth, and it's so accurate it can actually detect the condition of crops, can tell what insects are bothering them, can reveal the moisture content of the soil, can even spot fish in lakes and oceans.

 Some people call this progress but I call it scientific snooping. It's bad enough to have to explain the condition of my crops right around the house, without having to defend what's over the next rise.
 While I guess I should be grateful for the scientists' sending up a 10-million-dollar satellite to tell me whether or not I need a rain, up to now I've always managed to find out on my own.
 And as for locating fish, maybe in the middle of the Atlantic would be all right, but let some high-powered camera sent back a message from space that fish are biting in a place I'd figured out for myself and was keeping quiet about, and I'd have more company than a new Governor with 1500 jobs to fill.
 However, I don't suppose there's any way to stop progress, outside of Congress, and I was just wondering, if this camera can tell me what insects are bothering my crops, why don't the scientists train it on South Viet Nam and find out where those Viet Cong are shelling Siagon from?
 Yours faithfully,
 J. A.
