FIRST RESTAURANT IN PARIS

Founded Not Much More Than a Cen tury Ago During Louis XV.'s

Time.

A Paris journalist, searching some old records, has made an amusing

discovery, the correspondent of the London Express writes. The first restaurant is quite a modern invention. It was founded by an innkeeper named Boulanger during the last years of the reign of Louis XV.

Before there were any restaurants,

places, that, is where one could or der meals a la carte, travelers were obliged to feed at the cabaret, where the customer brought his own food, which was cooked for a fee, and the landlord supplied the wine. There was also the "traiteur," which was the forerunner of the Swiss table

d'hote. There, until 1772, meals were served at stated times to a fixed number of people, who, as the old chronicler writes, "were forced to eat according to the landlord's tastes,

HEARD HIS MISTRESS' VOICE

Ponto, a Bad Dog, Listened at Phone Went Straight Home, as Ordered.

"I left my dog accidentally at a friend's house yesterday," said a young girl, according to the Clevewould not leave. He plainly held that I would soon return-that since I had gone without him I must inevitably return for him. And he stuck to the room where I had parted from him, feeling that such was his duty. "Finally my friend called me up on the telephone. "Your dog won't go,' she said. He thinks you will be back, and we can't drive him out.'

"Hold him up to the phone,' I ordered.

"She held him up. "Ponto, you bad dog, come right straight home!' I cried into the transmitter. Well, sir, he wagged his tail, wriggling out of her arms and beat it for the door. He was home in less time than I could have imagined."

ALL THE INFORMATION NEEDED

What the Bashful Girl Learned From the Brutal Clerk in the Postoffice.

She was all dolled up in her gayest winter togger'v and she advanced to the information window at the postoffice with a pink tinted missive in her hand.

"I want you to tell me," she commanded between tell-tale blushes as she showed him the address on the envelope, "how long it will be before I can get an answer to this letter?"

"That all depends," growled the cold, indifferent clerk, upon whom her charms made not the slightest impression. "If he's in jail he can't write but once a week, or maybe once a month. If he's dead broke he'll have to wait until he can raise the price of a stamp, and I don't know how much of a hustler he is. If he's laid up in a hospital he may not want to send you his choicest heart throbs via a third and disinterested person. If he's meanwhile died he'll he beyond the reach of the mails. If he's picked up a new best girl-"

But she had gone on her way.

SPOILED THE EDITOR'S FUN.

An amusing story is told of M. lemenceau, the French statesman, who is credited with the intention of being about to edit a new paper. When arranging his staff M. Clemenceau decided that a young man who came to him with strong recommendations should write on foreign affairs. "Yos really know foreign questions, then?" he said. "Certainly," replied the young man. "To some extent," he added, not to overstate the case.

"Are you familiar with the eastwe know. The wise youth will "lay low" till he gets a whole lot of knowl-edge, and then in later days turn it "With the Austro-Hungarian problem?"-"Yes."

"With pan-Slavism?"-"I have studied it with care."

What a bother it is," said M. Clemenceau, "that you should know these things! If you hadn't, it would have been great fun." VARIOUS VARIETIES.

"There's a wayfarer at the back foor. Shall I unchain the dog?" "Not too hasty. Is it a tramp, a yoy scout or a hiking suffragette?"

INFERENCE.

"The native takes that missionary went out to were so glad to see him "What is your object in wanting they fairly ate him up." "Why, were they cannibals?"

DAY'S DUTY PUT ON RECORD

Resourceful Mistress of House Devised Shrewd Scheme for Instruction of Swedish Maid.

A Brooklyn woman who was going out of town for a few days was in a quandary over the problem of her husband's existence during her absence. The maid was Swedish and could neither read or write Engish, yet she somehow must be told each day, as only the mistress could tell her, what should be done about the house. A moment's thought solved the problem.

A list of each day's duties was made out. Next a phonograph dealr was called up and instructed to send up half . dozen blank records. The mistress then sat down in front of her machine and dictated her orders, using one record for each day's instructions. The records were then placed in their pasteboard cases, and the days on which they should be used were indicated on the outside by one, two, three and four straight lines, making a mistake impossible. As a result not only was everything in perfect order upon her return, but the novelty had so appealed to the maid that she had "played" her orders over and over until she could repeat them word for word.

AUTOMATISM.

The extraordinary plea of "automatism"-the doing of acts without consciousness thereof on the part of the doer-was recently set up in England in the case of a culprit who had stolen a motor car. A London mental expert testified that a person in the condition in which he found the prisoner could perform complicated mental and physical actions of which he would have no recollection on recovering his normal state. The accused declared that he had no recollection of anything that had happened during an entire month until he found himself in a prison cell. The judge did not take kindly to the new defense, and citing the dual personality of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, uttered the dictum that if Hyde had committed a murder, which by definition implies previous intention, Dr. Jekyll would have been hanged for it. The culprit was sentenced to four months in
