Cal Farley Victim At Chapel Service

DEATH came quietly Sunday morning to Cal Farley, 71, during chapel services at Boys Ranch. The founder of the empire for more than 2,000 homeless boys suffered a cerebral hemorrhage in the chapel. He was dead on arrival at Northwest Texas Hospital in Amarillo.

One of the best-known and most beloved men in the United States, Cal Farley had taken an old court house, and given a home to boys and "a shirt tail to hang on to." Boys Ranch has become a world famous empire.

TRAIL DUST

By DOUGLAS MEADOR

Law is the only solvent that destroys the residue of hate.

Peace is not deserved by any society unwilling to defend its own principles of blessings.

Peasants knew that a saddle horn or a horse hitched to a wagon would find his way home tonight in a blinding snow storm, given a free rein. Man, when given a free rein, does not always use his latent facilities to go in the right direction.

The soap never seemed to clean my mother's hands in a wash tub or dish pan. I always remember them as soft and gentle.

If modesty is concerned, a girl wearing a mini skirt should never do anything more involved than walking.

Common courtesy gets much of its strength from a smile and a gentle voice in everyday associations.

The barbering profession has had more than its share of problems over the last two decades. First the safety razor swept out of the confines of progress, later to be challenged by the electric shaver. The new long hair trend seems like the extension of a conspiracy of society against the barber.

If you remember sleeping in a feather bed, chances are that you have met your district Social Security representative.

The reason socialism has never gotten off the ground in popularity is the variance in the amount of money individuals are willing to contribute.

Tutt Garnett to Scramble for Calf

(Special to Tribune)

Tutt H. Garnett, Matador 4-H Club member, has been selected to participate in the "world's greatest calf scramble" at the Saturday, March 4th, matinee performance of the Houston Livestock Show Rodeo in Houston's famed Astrodome.

Contestants come from every county in the state and are selected by the 4-H and FFA leaders in each area. The boys are guests of the show at the performance in which they participate. Dates of the show are Feb. 22 through March 5.

When the Houston show held its first scramble in 1942, 24 calves were awarded. It was not dreamed that the project would result in putting some 4,000 boys into the cattle business in the next 22 years.

As a result of the Calf Scramble contests, over a million and a half dollars in livestock, cash and prizes have been put into the hands of Texas youth, giving them a substantial start in business.

When the calf scramble contestant wins, his work has just begun. With his cash certificate he purchases the best animal he can find. He must then care for the calf, furnish monthly records to the Houston Livestock Show and his sponsor, and return his animal to the show the next year.

Stars for this year's show will be Jimmy Dean, Feb. 22, 23 and 24; Jim Nabors (Gomer Pyle) Feb. 25, 26 and 27; Tennessee Ernie Ford, Feb. 28 through March 3; and Eddy Arnold, March 4 and 5.

Bill Moss Honored By Members of FFA

Modest, reticent Bill Moss does not know that this article will appear in the Tribune. A vocational agriculture student, Gary Markham supplied the details. Communist veteran of World War II, Bill Moss received his degree at Texas Tech, and came to Matador in July 1947, and he has taught here continuously for 26 years. He is held in highest esteem by students and ex-students. His fairness and tact when dealing with boys, makes him an excellent teacher. Under his capable guidance the Matador Future Farmers of America Chapter has received a superior rating," Markham said.

"He is also rated as a superior teacher by Texas Tech," Markham declared, "resulting in his department being qualified for practice teaching. Through the years, several seniors from Tech have been qualified by him.

"On behalf of the past and present members of the Matador FFA Chapter, I would like to thank Mr. Moss for his help in preparing us for the life ahead."

In vocational agriculture, considerable attention is given to training in farm mechanics, involving the selection, care, maintenance, and operation of modern farm machinery.

The Future Farmers of America was organized nationally in November, 1928, during a meeting of students and leaders at Kansas City, Mo.

A first-year member of the Future Farmers of America is called a "Green Hand".

Efficiency of American Agriculture Provides Blessing of Abundant Food

Food is so plentiful and so cheap in relation to income that few in the U.S. really worry about hunger. But this is one of the places on earth where abundance is a fact. Somewhere between half and two-thirds of all the world go to bed hungry every night. Starvation is the oldest threat to mankind. The Bible tells how famine forced the people of Israel to migrate to Egypt. Today, thousands of years later, people still are starving in the famines of India, Africa and Latin America.

History is filled with wars that have been fought over food supplies. With the spectacular development of technology, men are beginning to learn that it is less difficult to produce food and other wealth through their own efforts than it is to take it from neighbors or from colonies. The quest for wealth and food through war has been futile in this century. It is possible to become rich only by going to work, not by organizing foreign legions to take wealth from others.

Some 200 years ago, Malthus forecast a tendency for population to out-run the food supply. Recent projections of six billion people on earth within 30 years have raised new fears. It seems desirable that the world have as many people as can enjoy a high level of health, education, housing, food and the other aspects of a good life. But only American type technology applied on a massive scale around the world can provide food for the growth ahead.

The dream of abundant food is closer to reality than it has ever been. The U.S. farmer shows what must be done to make it possible. The answer is to increase the efficiency of agriculture and emphasize those measures which upgrade the capability and quality of people. An acceptable balance between population and food is attainable — it has already been reached in much of the western world.

AGRICULTURE IS MORE THAN FARMING

Agriculture is the nation's largest and most basic industry. Forty percent of our working people are engaged in the production, processing and distribution of agricultural products or in producing supplies and services for farmers.

WE ARE PROUD TO SALUTE OUR FFA CHAPTER

Matador Auto Co.

Through study of vocational agriculture in high school, and participation in activities of the Future Farmers of America organization, many farm boys are preparing themselves for promising careers in farming and rural leadership, or in one of the many non-farm agricultural occupations. During this National Future Farmers of America Week, we salute these hard working farm boys, and extend our best wishes to each of them for success and happiness in the agricultural occupation of his choice.

Official Memorandum

By JOHN CONNALLY Governor of Texas

AUSTIN, TEXAS

GREETINGS:

The Future Farmers of America organization is playing an outstanding role in assuring the future progress and prosperity of our State and Nation.

The importance of agriculture in our State increases as Texas progresses. It is vital to our well-being that we train skilled farmers and ranchers to provide a plentiful supply of food products in years to come and to train those who will provide services to the farmer and process and distribute farm products.

The FFA is composed of boys who are studying vocational agriculture in the public schools in preparation for careers in farming, ranching, and related fields. In studying the science of agriculture, these Future Farmers are striving to continuously improve this great industry for the welfare of all citizens.

Texas now has over 1000 active FFA chapters with over 45,000 active members and more than a quarter of a million former members. During the past 38 years, the Texas Association, FFA, has performed valuable services to our State by developing leadership, encouraging cooperation, promoting good citizenship, teaching sound methods of farming, and inspiring patriotism among its members.

THEREFORE, I, as Governor of Texas, do hereby designate the week of February 18-25, 1967, as

FUTURE FARMERS OF AMERICA WEEK in Texas.

In official recognition whereof, I hereby affix my signature this 25th day of Jan., 1967

John Connally Governor of Texas

Outstanding American Agriculture Has Brought Greatness to Nation

The performance of American agriculture has been outstanding. It transcends that of any other major industry and far exceeds that of agriculture in most other countries. The American farmer deserves the praise of all for his tremendous progress and his efficiency. Instead, he is often blamed for high food prices and criticized for the federal aid given him in an effort to counteract the side effects of his prolificacy.

Farmers have seldom been adequately rewarded in proportion to their contribution. The advance in food prices has been very small in a time of high over-all price increases. Thus farmers have made a great contribution in combating inflation. They have provided people to man our industry. The things they buy support millions of people in industry. Their food products aid our foreign policy and keep millions alive in the underdeveloped countries.

An accurate perspective on farming is very important. It can help us continue to provide food at moderate prices for our rapidly growing population. People around the world look to American agriculture to learn how to speed up development of their own food supplies. Our successes not only provide food for export but show what can be done with the use of modern technology.

Joey Meador

Joey Meador, son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Meador, is in his third year of Vocational Agriculture. He raises hogs just north of Matador as his project program.

Joe started out as Green Hand with three sows for pig production. During his second year, he expanded his program to include seven sows, a boar, and eighteen feeder pigs. He also showed a steer, which placed first in his class at the county livestock show. One of his sows was the reserve champion female of the show last year.

This year, Joey runs ten sows and a registered Duroc boar, and has thirty-two pigs in the feedlot.

Joey is very active in the FFA organization. As a Chapter Farmer, he was elected President of the Matador FFA and he is still serving in that capacity. He is also presently serving as District President of the Plainview District, and plans to run for area office in April. He has made the livestock judging team for the last two years and plans to apply for his State Farmer degree this spring.

Larry Bostick

Larry Bostick is another very active member of the Matador FFA and is now in his third year of vocational agriculture.

As a Green Hand, Larry had two breeding gilts, three show pigs, and a cow for calf production. In his second year, he expanded to include twelve show pigs and six market hogs, as well as his sows and beef cow. This year he has a cow for calf production, four sows for pig production, developing three breeding gilts, a

Matador FFA School Farm Serves Laboratory for vo-ag Projects

The school farm serves as a laboratory for the Matador vocational agriculture classes as well as a place for town boys projects.

Of the thirty-six boys in the FFA Chapter, are animals on the farm at all times. These include beef animals, eleven head of beef animals, eleven head of hogs, and twenty-four head of hogs in various stages of production.

At the beginning of each school year, the twelve standing members of the chapter formulate a list of rules and regulations governing the keeping of animals on the school farm; these rules are then either approved or rejected by the chapter at the regular FFA meeting. The regulations serve as a guide for the coming year, under the supervision of the committee and the vocational agriculture teacher.

Each year a student is charged with the responsibility of the farm in the form of feeders, fencing, etc. so that at the end of the year, there has been a gradual improvement in the facilities. These improvements in the majority of cases have been done by students who have learned either in wood shop or metal working, fencing, welding, etc. The theory is to practice in the classroom, practice in the shops, and the skill applied on the school farm.

Commenting on the value of the school farm, Bill Moss, the local vocational agriculture teacher has said, "Although the continual supervision of the school farm projects has seemed to consume more and more of my time, I consider it worthwhile. It serves as a ready source of information because a complete and detailed set of records has been kept on all animals. At the end of each feeding period, the boys figure daily gain, cost of gain, and feed conversion, as well as net profit. At this stage, they realize where improvements can and should be made. Our next long range goal is the purchase of portable scales to enable boys to keep monthly gains on their animals and take the guesswork out of determining the time to change the rations. We try to follow the latest trends and developments in selection of feeding and breeding animals, parasite control, and breeding and feeding management, although we do nothing that any Matley county farmer could not duplicate. Some of these new practices work, some do not — we drop those that do not and try to improve the practices that do help. We try to practice the FFA motto: Learning to do, Doing to learn, Earning to live, Living to serve."

"Believe in Farming" Key Words of the Creed of the Future Farmer

A member of an FFA chapter learns to recite the creed, and must do so to receive the FFA Degree, the words may mean much to him. Like so many other things the young man recites, it is just a matter of time before he will understand the meaning of the words.

After a time of studying the "Believe in Farming" will make an impression on him. Then after a time of working with the FFA and getting to know what the organization is all about, and their friends, the words no longer become "just words" but take on a meaning.

Each person will look again and again at the creed and eventually it will become second nature to him, for he will believe it.

Believe in the future of farming — a faith born not of words but of achievements won through the present and past generations of agriculturists; in the brighter days through better things, even as the better things we enjoy have come to us through the struggles of former years, believe that to live and work on a farm, or to be engaged in other agricultural pursuit, is pleasant as well as challenging; for I know the joys and discomforts of farm life and hold an inborn fondness for those associations which, even in hours of discouragement, I cannot deny.

"I believe in leadership from ourselves and respect from others. I believe in my own ability to work efficiently and think clearly, with such knowledge and skill as I can secure, and in the ability of organized farmers to serve our own and the public interest in marketing the product of our toil. I believe we can safeguard those rights against practices and policies that are unfair.

"I believe in less dependence on begging and more power in bargaining; in the life abundant and enough honest wealth to help make it so — for others as well as myself, in less need for charity and more of it when needed, in being happy myself and playing square with those whose happiness depends upon me.

"I believe that rural America can and will hold true to the best traditions in our national life and I can exert an influence in my home and community which will stand solid for my part in that inspiring task."

Modern Farming has Advanced From Pitchfork to the Office

A Roman peasant would have felt right at home on the American farm of a century ago. He would have recognized the pitchfork, the scythe, the hoe, and many of the other tools in use. Indeed, he could step right into a farming job in many of the under-developed countries today!

The changes on the American farm over the last century have astonished the world. More progress has been made than in all of the thousands of years of previous agricultural history. And the pace is speeding up with each passing year. Within the past 15 years, field mechanization has moved from the 3-plow to the 6- and 8-plow range. The feedlot has advanced from the shovel to the pushbutton. And a whole list of scientific improvements in seed, fertilizer, and feeds has revolutionized farm practice.

Today's farm technology has moved from the pitchfork to the office. Ability to build a square stack of hay no longer is the mark of a good farmer. Today, the man who can plan and manage is moving ahead in agriculture. The buying, selling, and other management decisions he makes after the consideration of the facts and records filed in his office make the greatest contribution to profits.

Dick Moss

Dick Moss, son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Moss, has kept his projects on the school farm west of town. Dick has had several projects since he has been in high school. During his Green Hand year, he had two breeding gilts and two feeder pigs. As a sophomore, he fed three commercial calves, two sows for pig production, and developed eleven breeding gilts. In his junior year, he fed out thirty-three head of market hogs developed a breeding herd of fifteen hogs, as well as acquiring a breeding beef heifer. This year, Dick is feeding out twenty-six head of market hogs, maintaining a herd of twelve breeding gilts and sows, and has a cow and calf.

As a Green Hand, Dick received the Star Greenhand Award and was a member of the Chapter Conducting team and the dairy cattle judging team. As a sophomore, he was elected chapter secretary and received the Star Chapter Farmer Award. Last year, Dick was elected Reporter of the Plainview District FFA, received the Livestock Award, served again as Chapter secretary and was awarded the State Farmer degree last summer. He is now serving as vice-president of the Matador FFA.

Coy Franks

Coy Franks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leidon C. Franks, makes his home in the Flomot community. He transferred to Matador High School last year.

Now in his second year of vocational agriculture, he raises hogs as his project program. Last year he managed four sows and fed out twenty-six pigs. This year he is feeding out thirty-seven pigs as well as maintaining his sow herd.

Coy made the Dairy Cattle judging team last year and was a member of the Radio Broadcasting team this year. He is presently serving as chapter secretary and is chairman of the Recreation committee. He also plans to apply for his State Farmer degree this spring.

Gary Markham

Gary Markham, who lives north of Matador, has completed three years of vocational agriculture and is in the fourth year of FFA work. Gary's project program now consists of ten sows for pig production and includes four head of registered Duroc gilts. He plans to purchase a registered boar and expand his sow herd to around twenty head. Some of Gary's past projects have included grazing and feeding six steers, feeding out twenty-two hogs, twenty-four acres of sudan for grazing and two acres of wheat.

Gary's FFA activities include making the livestock judging team as a freshman and sophomore, being on the Chapter Conducting team two years, and showing animals in the County Livestock Show. He also attended the FFA Electric Workshop sponsored by Southwest ern Public Service last summer and won a trip to the national FFA Convention. Gary is now serving as Reporter of the Matador FFA and has been responsible for the gathering of material for the special FFA edition of the Matador Tribune.

A basic requirement for membership in the Future Farmers of America is that a boy must be a student of vocational agriculture in high school, although he may retain his membership for three years following graduation.

Farm Productivity Must Increase 50% Within the Next 10 Years

Look ahead at the next 10 years. The population of the United States will increase by more than 100 million. And we will be much more abroad, too. The combination of more volume and demand could mean a doubling of farm sales for farm-land.

Additional million people will require another 172,000 beef cattle, 172,000 dairy cows, 433,000 hogs, and 172,000 chickens, at today's consumption rates. A population growth of 100 million people per year will require a steady expansion of livestock numbers if we are to sustain present level of nutrition.

By the year 1976 probably will require computer data for its management. The computer will help farmers figure out the best use for his farm. This is a new way of thinking.

In the field, most tractors now have above 100 h.p. Fertilizer use has increased in the last 8 years and is expected to double again.

There will be more large factory farms — but the bulk of the production will come from the large family farm. This is the farm that will handle 100 or more acres. It will turn out 1,500 bushels plus the feed for them. Beef feeding enterprises will be in the 1,000 head range. Proof, controlled environment will be found on a number of farms, and mechanization will be highly developed with the emphasis on efficient farmers will use increased amounts of sealed storage to store the nutrients they grow. These are the changes that seem to be in the next 10 years. They will give a fair share of the market to the farmer. It is only through increased investment and wise use of inputs that farmers will be able to continue the excellent record they have established.

Farm boys train for future leadership roles by following parliamentary procedure in their FFA meetings and taking part in public speaking contests.

Awards offered to Future Farmers of America members encourage the boys to work harder in their study of vocational agriculture.

More Services and Non-Food Items Make Modern Grocery Bill Higher

Housewives are responsible for some of the higher food prices. When they ask for the "built-in maid service" of TV dinners, cake mixes, and other easy-to-prepare foods, they must expect to pay the bill. You can't have frozen foods without paying the cost of processing and freezing, and the expensive equipment that does the job. It is estimated that 70% of all sales today are for products that did not even exist 10 years ago. All of these innovations cost money and add to the food bill.

A turkey dinner ready to pop into the oven costs about 50c. The USDA estimates that a serving of the same dinner, prepared at home, would cost 20c. Millions of housewives demonstrate every week that they are willing to pay the extra 30c per serving to win the convenience. Because of the large amount of processing involved, the farmer's share is about 8c out of the TV dinner's retail cost.

Supermarkets carry from 6,000 to 10,000 items on their shelves. They offer the wonderful variety and top quality that Americans have come to expect. But a choice of 25 breakfast cereals is expensive. Trading stamps, promotion, and advertising all contribute to the size of the bill.

Grocery shoppers often pile many non-food items on their carts. Cigarettes, cosmetics, hardware, drugs, and even clothing go through many a grocery check-out counter. These are not part of the

I liked best about Abraham Lincoln." Recreation was conducted by Melba Jameson.

Refreshments were served by the hostess to Mesdames J. M. Jameson, Maggie Hamilton, Wilson Barton and Bob Martin; a new member, Mrs. Dewayne Martin; Miss Melba Jameson and Miss Helena Mokray, Home Demonstration agent; and visitors, Mrs. D. E. Rattan, and her daughter, Mrs. Wes Byers of Lubbock. Children present were Darla Beth Byers and Stephanie Martin.

The next meeting will be with Mrs. Maggie Hamilton.

Why and How of F.F.A.

Kenneth Graeber
Past President of the Association, FFA

We are living in a time when science fiction has become a fact. No longer is space travel a dream, it has now become a reality. It is no longer a subject of national importance, it is a subject of national necessity. Mechanical counterparts, problems in mind, work men weeks to when we say "The American produced more food on less land than ever one gets excited." Has and all those connect-agricultural related oc- taken for granted? It is time we re-examine to see where agriculture stands in our history, our economy and in our nation's future. As our young nation developed from thirteen struggling colonies into the greatest nation in the world, agriculture not only provided food and fiber to feed and clothe the people, but it also provided nearly all of our national economy. Many of the first in- dustries attempted in America failed because the European nations could produce better and less ex- pensive products; therefore, there was no foreign market for Amer- ican goods. For this reason Amer- ican quickly developed agriculture and in doing so agriculture quickly developed America. In 1790, 95 per cent of America's population lived on the farm and depended 100 per cent on agriculture for livelihood. The independent nature of this group contributed greatly to why our nation developed free and in- dependent. Many of the great lead- ers such as Washington and Jef- ferson were truly agriculturists at heart. Without this type of men as leaders, the independent nature of American citizens and the econ- omic advancements brought by agriculture, we could never have developed into the greatest nation in the world.

Has the importance of agricul- ture changed? Has agriculture ac- tually taken a back seat? Maybe in the minds of a few who think of agriculture as just farming and fail to realize the true economic value of this "American Giant." Today Agri-business accounts for almost forty-five percent of our national economy. Texas' share of agriculture products is a gigantic two billion dollars each year. While it is true only seven per cent of our population is engaged in the farming and ranching business, four out of every ten in our work- ing force are employed in some process or manufacture goods that either buy, sell, transport, process or manufacture goods that directly involve agriculture. Agri- culture is still the "backbone" of our nation.

Looking to the future we can see even greater importance for agricul- ture. Recently it was announc- ed that agricultural production in the world reached an all time high, however population continued to gain on production. This simply means, tonight many people in the world went to bed a little hungrier. Statistics today show that two thirds of the people went to bed hungry. Let's not forget only one third of the world's population is in Asia, a country we usually associate with starvation! More than one half of the rest of the world lacks food to feed its peo- ple. This problem will continue to grow and as it does, so will the challenge to agriculture to meet it. Yes, even in America, the idea of starvation should not be ruled out. Agriculture has been the builder of our nation, the backbone of our economy, and is the challenge of the future. It cannot be rated second or given the back seat in our minds. There must be an organiza- tion such as the Future Farmers of America to keep the proud heritage of the past and produce the leaders and the type of citizens necessary to meet the challenges of the future. We desire to keep Amer- ica the best fed and best clothed nation in the world, strong enough to remain free and independent. This is the "why" of the FFA. The question is: how will the Future Farmers of America do this?

When a young man enrolls in vocational agriculture and volun- tarily joins the FFA, he not only receives training necessary for the highly technical field of farming and other agricultural related oc- cupations, but also receives train- ing that will help to mold his character. The primary aim of the FFA is the development of agri- cultural leadership, cooperation and citizenship. The FFA achieves this goal in many ways. The member must first realize that responsibil- ity is opportunity. Every time he accepts responsibility he develops himself, whether the re- sponsibility is serving as an officer in his chapter, or a judging team or taking care of his supervised farming program. He learns that he can achieve anything he wants, if he wants it badly enough. In order to do this, he must be will- ing to work hard with determina- tion, make necessary sacrifices, have faith in himself, and trust in God. Through working with his hands, he learns the reward of a job well done is to have done it; and, that the best helping hand is at the end of his own arm. By working with the members of his local chapter in planning and carrying out a program of work, he finds that cooperation is the key to success. That which may be im- possible to do by yourself, comes easy if you work with others.

Working record books not only gives the FFA members an insight to business operation, also it shows him the importance of good man- agement and thrift. Through im- provement projects whether they be at home or in the community the FFA member learns that ser- vice to others is a service to one's self. Each meeting is closed with the pledge of allegiance to the flag as a constant reminder that without the many rights and freedoms we have in America, not one of the above would be possible and that we have a responsibility to our nation as well as to ourselves:

- Learning to Do
- Doing to Learn
- Earning to Live
- Living to Serve

As each future farmer dedicates himself to the above motto, realiz- ing its true meaning, he becomes the "how" the FFA will meet the challenges of the future.

It takes about 70,000 blue cor- duroy jackets each year to satisfy the demands of FFA members throughout the nation.

The FFA publishes the National Future Farmer Magazine, which goes into the homes of 450,000 members.

Literary Land
 by Elaine Dixon

Pride and Prejudice, written in 1813, is generally considered to be the major work of the English novelist Jane Austen.

A definite parallel exists between the author's life and the lives that she portrays in her novels. She writes of middle-class England in the nineteenth century. She writes of their manners, of the normal routine life, and of the neighborhood conversation. Her characters fall in love and sometimes face disappointments, but these seem less significant than the family routine.

Though there are many characters involved in Pride and Prejudice, Miss Austen achieves unity by having the reader view the conflict through Elizabeth's eyes.

When Mr. Darcy is introduced into the book, the reader immediately dislikes him because of his seemingly ill treatment of Elizabeth; however, as Elizabeth discovers his true personality and her love for him, the reader also changes his opinion. Similarly, because of Elizabeth's immediate attachment to Wickham, the reader thinks him to be an admirable person until Elizabeth's esteem turns from Wickham to Darcy. Elizabeth's narrow prejudice was justified in only two cases; that of Miss Bingley and of Lady Catherine de Bourgh.

Darcy (pride) and Elizabeth (prejudice) are the only characters who are aware of their own imperfections. It would be wrong to say that Elizabeth overcame prejudice, and Darcy pride. It is more exact to say that both overcame prejudice and that pride was justified.

Larry Bynum, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dwayne Markham, was in Methodist Hospital at Lubbock, Texas, last week for surgery on his knee. Larry obtained the injury while he was working cattle during the week end.

Matador High School students wish to convey congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Byerley for their new son, Bradley Bishop. Mr. Byerley teaches math in high school, and Mrs. Byerley was third grade teacher last year. When Principal Wayland Moore announced the birth to the student body in general assembly he stated that he was a little irritated at the Byerleys due to the recent addition of a daughter to the Moore family. He went on to say that the Byerleys were just trying to keep up with the Moores — two boys and one girl.

Miss Frances Martin, sweetheart of the Future Farmers of America, was presented with a jacket by Joey Meador, FFA president, last week during general assembly. Miss Martin, who is a senior, represented Matador's FFA Chapter in the District Sweetheart Contest earlier in the year.

Future Homemakers Hear Karol King
 by Jana Jones

Special feature of the monthly meeting of the Matador Chapter of the Future Homemakers of America was a book review presented by Karol King, a senior student of Matador High School. Karol reviewed the book Oh! Ye Jigs and Julips by Virginia Cary Hudson. The book is a short, humorous account of the enlightening way in which an eleven year girl sees life.

It was also announced at the meeting that June Sandefur, a sophomore homemaking student, is FFA girl of the Month. This honor is based on a point system and the winner is determined by the one having the most points.

The meeting was held in the high school auditorium Thursday, Feb. 16, with Sue Robbins, chapter president, and Mrs. A.L. Fair, chapter advisor, presiding over the meeting.

As a part of their course of study, vocational agriculture students are required to have farming programs, or to gain agricultural work experience, under the supervision of the teacher.

The American Farmer degree is awarded to about 450 outstanding FFA members each year. Only one member in a thousand may receive it.

"Learning to do, Doing to learn, Earning to live, Living to serve" is the official motto of the Future Farmers of America.

More than 60,000 boys each year get leadership experience by serving as officers of local FFA chapters.

Vocational agriculture in high school provides an excellent background of training for boys planning to farm, enter agricultural college, or work in a wide variety of non-farm agricultural occupations.

Agriculture is by far the nation's largest single industry. While the percentage of farm people to total U. S. population is declining, there still are about 14 million persons living on farms. The value of farm products sold in 1966 was in excess of 49 billion dollars.

The telephone will always revolve around people. There is—and always will be—a courteous, willing operator as close to you as your telephone dial. She is ready to serve you in any situation or emergency where her personal help is needed. The very fact that she is there every hour of the day and night is a comforting thought in itself. The next time you routinely dial a number to talk to a friend or transact business, we hope you'll remember that the telephone is still a very personal instrument. It wouldn't work at all without our people, nor serve so well without our operators. That is the way it will always be.
