Roaring Springs Company Chooses US Ring Binder As Distributor

Ray and Grace Zabielski

New Bedford, MA... U.S. Ring Binder Corp. is pleased to announce that it has been chosen by Zabielski Company of Roaring Springs to be the sole Distributor for its patented product the "Butterfly Page Saver" which was invented by its' Company founder Raymond Zabielski. U.S. Ring Binder Corp., a subsidiary of General Binding Corporation headquartered in Northbrook, IL, is a manufacturer of standard and specialty metals for loose leaf binders used in a variety of applications. The "Butterfly Page Saver" is a new product which compliments almost any loose leaf application, allowing pages to flow smoothly without hang-ups. The story behind the invention of the "Butterfly Page Saver" by Raymond Zabielski is an interesting one and is told by Ray himself.

"In 1957 while in the Air Force, I was responsible for keeping up the Air Force Regulations and all types of periodicals. The size of my room was approximately 20' x 25' with wall to wall bookcases. It was set up like a library. Everyone on occasion from Colonels down to Privates had reason to use the administrative or technical information. They would thumb through the ring binders and when finished with the ring binder, try to close it. Many times the binder would not close the way it should and so it was placed back on the shelf in a stressed situation. When the next person would pull the ring binder off the shelf and try to use it, he would find the rings collapsed."

"While many page lifters tried to alleviate the problem, they just were not up to doing the job right."

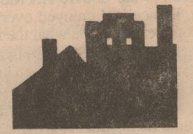

"When I retired and had my own office to keep up, the problem with ring binder hang-up was still around. I had tried many different methods to solve the problem to no avail. Then in 1970 I found a simple page saver made out of metal that worked. When I tried to market it, everyone said plastic is now in and that was the route to go. In 1983, I had my Page Saver patented, and began seeing the light. It worked and I did get some terrific endorsements from teachers, etc..."

"I was 60 years of age when I received my patent. It was an expensive experience but I do get my highs when I go throughout the country and ever so often, find my Page Saver in someone's notebook."

U.S. Ring Binder will market and sell the "Butterfly Page Saver" to their customer base which are the manufacturers of loose leaf binders throughout the World. The first order is already on its way to a customer in South America.

El Progreso Entertains Paducah Study Club

El Progreso Study Club met November 11 in the Senior Citizens building for an afternoon of entertaining 1923 Study Club of Paducah and entertainment in the form of a book review by Mrs. W.N. (Opal) Pipkin.

Mrs. Dale (Joetta) Bumgardner, club president, presided and welcomed the members and guests. Usual business was dispensed with other than to announce the next meeting will be the Christmas program and tea at the home of Mrs. R.C. (Callie) Giesecke on December 9. Mrs. Bumgardner introduced Mrs. George (Sue) Seigler, TFWC Scholarship chairman, Mrs. Robert (Jo Ann) Dickson, TFWC Trustee and Mrs. Harold (Grace) Campbell past Santa Rosa District President. Mrs. Bumgardner then presented Mrs. Robert (Winifred) Darsey as leader for the afternoon who in turn introduced her sister, Mrs. Opal Pipkin, whose topic for the program was ART.

Mrs. Pipkin began by stating "Art is Beauty in the eye of the beholder." She has been to the Louvre Art Museum in Paris, France and enjoyed every moment commenting art is what the individual sees and enjoys. She has always been interested in art, painting when in school. From that pretty little painting she wondered if the Masters were ever satisfied with their own works of art. She recalled a schoolbook with illustrations in the Sepia tones, these works of great artists of days gone by with one in particular that still seen, "The Gleaners". Today's young people in public schools are never introduced to great art and will in the future never know what a great thing they have missed.

Who are the artists? First we think of the great Master of Art but there are also architects, workers of stained glass, enamellists, sculptors, weavers, landscape artists and anything to make this earth more beautiful, not only painting. The 12th and 13th centuries saw the erection of the great cathedrals of Europe and with this came the masters of stained glass. The Louvres destiny was marked for a great museum for Paris was fated to become the artistic capital of the world.

Italian art was developed into "real world" art in the 14th century. The first impetus came from St. Frances, who asserted God should be worshipped in His creation and His creatures. Throughout Italy during the 15th and 16th century art flourished, especially in Florence with each area of the country having its own type of art. She showed a print of "The Card Sharks" by the Italian painter Caravaggio whose original is in the Kimbell Art Museum in Ft. Worth and was purchased for 8 million dollars. His works are identified with realism art form. She mentioned Spanish Art and some of their most influential artists - El Greco who brought art to Spain, Goya who loved to paint the Dutchess of Alba and Picasso.

We have had 300 years of art in America. One hundred and five years ago Whistler in his famous lecture "Ten O' Clock" said, "Art is upon the town." Today he might have added, "Especially American art." We are, at this point, challenging France for prominence in the leadership of this science. Many American artists studied abroad and therefore are said to carry that "form" into their art in this country although they have developed their own style. In the "local" area we have three great art museums where noted art is displayed, the Kimbell, the Amon Carter and Ft. Worth Art museums, all within a short distance of each other. Southwestern art is rapidly becoming an important art form with many local artists becoming very well known, i.e. Glenna Goodacre of Lubbock with her sculpture of the nurses in Vietnam recently placed near the Vietnam Memorial Wall in Washington D.C. Peter Hurd is another western artist of note from this part of the country. She mentioned other local artists she has become acquainted with in the New Mexico area.

Mrs. Darsey used for her inspirational thought one of Rudyard Kipling concerning art and its way of becoming a part of each individual. The refreshment table was laden with finger foods brought by club members for all to enjoy. Thanksgiving decorations adorned the tables and walls and everyone enjoyed the many delicious foods provided by club members. Guests from the 1923 Study club of Paducah were Alma Long, Mosell Jones, Freida Brooks, Juanita Whitaker, Patricia Wilkins, Barbara Walker, and Gail Brothers. Members other than those mentioned were Mrs. E.A. (Dorothy) Day, Mrs. Harry (Pearl) Patten, Mrs. Ted (Bailey) Elliott, Mrs. Frank (Lola) Pohl, Mrs. Joe (Loys) Campbell, Mrs. Furman (Beverly) Vinson, Mrs. Douglas (Lila) Meador, and Mrs. R.E. (Lucretia) Campbell.

ATTENTION: El Progreso Club has a project to raise money for their continued work. Mrs. Grace Campbell has crocheted a beautiful afghan that is now on display at the Matador V&S Variety. Donations are one dollar per ticket or six (6) for five dollars. Everyone is urged to participate in this drawing at the December Old Fashioned Christmas celebration.

Back To Nature Beauty At Do Gooders' Club Meeting

The Do Gooders Club of Flomot met Tuesday afternoon, November 9 at the Community Center. Featured guest, Mrs. Rhenda Bursen, co-owner of Caprock Floral Ranch in Silverton, presented a program on Back To Nature Beauty.

Mrs. Bursen stated we did not have to go anywhere to enjoy the beauty of nature, because we live right in the midst of it. Homemade arrangements are easy, inexpensive and virtually foolproof and one of the nicest ways to enhance a rustic decor. She portrayed nature on a grand scale with her floral demonstrations using broom blooms, dried flowers and weeds. The plants were dyed, bleached and those left natural were shades of green turning to yellow, gold, red, orange and brown. Each one attending made a small angel using bear grass seed pods and completed the artistic endeavor with decorated hair and a crown.

The Thanksgiving theme was on display throughout the building with colorful decorations of pumpkins, autumn leaves and gourds. The table was laid with a yellow cloth and the centerpiece was an Indian Corn wreath encircling a honeycomb turkey. Hostesses, Mrs. Erma Washington and Mrs. Jimmie Hunter served chips and dips, pumpkin roll, cake and pie with whipped cream, coffee and spiced tea.

Presiding at the business meeting was president, Mrs. Erma Washington. Plans were made for the 1993 Christmas party to be at 2:00 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 7 at the Community Center. Secret Pal names will be revealed.

Members attending besides those mentioned above were Mesdames Bernice Bond, Alma Shorter, Lucille Monk, Mildred Hulsey and Judy Poulson True.

APPLIANCE WARRANTIES BASED ON TIME, NOT USAGE.....

Some major appliances are used very little over a year's time such as that dishwasher in your weekend lake cabin or the mini-refrigerator in your motor home.

When these appliances act up, some owners feel that four years of periodic usage should be the same as one year's worth of warranty coverage. This is not the case! Warranty coverage is for a stated period of time, not for how much you use the appliance.

Remember that warranty coverage may vary with the product's components. For example, a window air conditioner warranty might provide for free repairs of any part that breaks down in the first year but partially cover repairs of the sealed system components (compressor, evaporator, etc.) for an extra four years. Manufacturers can offer almost any type of warranty as long as the provisions are clearly stated and the warranty is available for your review before you buy.

Although periodic usage may result in less wear and tear on an appliance, there are at least two reasons for not basing warranties on usage:

— Basing a warranty on usage rather than appliance age is unrealistic because it is difficult, if not impossible, for a manufacturer to monitor actual consumer usage.

— Some appliances actually suffer more from extended periods of non-use than from continuous daily operation. For example, many consumers don't realize that the seals in the pump area of the dishwasher are meant to be immersed in water at all times. The water tends to keep the seal soft and pliable which is necessary for proper operation.

It is important to carefully read the warranty on each new appliance. Use the appliance enough during the warranty period that any defects will have time to surface. Use every feature and control on the new appliance soon after it is installed.

Remember, even if you don't use that appliance, the warranty clock is still ticking!

FEDERAL TELEMARKETING REGULATIONS

If you are tired of receiving calls from salespeople trying to sell you something, a recent law may help. The Telephone Consumer Protection Act has several provisions consumers can use to stop calls. Before you hang up, tell the caller to put your name on a permanent do not call list. Telemarketers are also prohibited from calling you before 8 a.m. or after 9 p.m. Callers must identify themselves and give an address or phone number where they or the company can be reached. In addition, companies cannot sell your telephone number to another company without your permission. If a company continues to call after you have told them not to, you can sue them to have them stop calling for up to $500 in cash damages.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are for people of all ages regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex, religion, handicap, or national origin.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: What most of all hinders the spiritually minded is that they pay so little heed to small sins.

Texans Heading For Good Deer Season

Early rains helped get deer off to a good start. Recent drought is beginning to cause problems. Lack of vegetation should improve hunter success. General season opened November 6 in most of Texas, November 13 in South Texas.

AUSTIN - Deer across Texas are in fair shape with most areas of the state receiving sufficient rainfall earlier in the year. Most of these same areas, however, went through extended dry spells and definitely need more rain before winter.

The spring rains helped with fawn production and antler development earlier this year and the drought should push more deer out into the open, inevitably improving hunter success this year.

"Overall, the Texas deer hunting season for white-tailed deer is going to be real good this year. There will be a lot of pleased hunters, a lot of successful hunters," said Butch Young of Hunt, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department's white-tailed deer program leader. "For a good meat hunt, I would recommend the Edwards Plateau. For trophy animals, hunters should go to South Texas. Traditionally, that has been a big trophy area and it will be again this year."

TPWD wildlife biologists began annual deer census surveys in mid-July and results won't be complete until some time in late October. However, biologists who are conducting the field surveys are aware of current conditions in their particular area.

"I suspect the deer are starting to hurt some. Pin oaks have some acorns on them, nothing to speak of. It's a poor acorn crop this year," he said. "If we are dry for another three or four weeks, rain won't help at all for growth. It won't be real easy on the deer either. It will make the deer more accessible to the hunter."

"People taking care of the deer will do better - those with food plots and those who haven't overgrazed. Management is geared for times just like this."

PANHANDLE

Once again timely rainfall produced suitable vegetation for the deer herd.

With much of the state in an extended drought, the Panhandle only began drying out the past three to four weeks, said Danny Swepton, TPWD wildlife biologist from Amarillo.

"Our numbers are fairly close to last year. We're expecting a good season," he said. "We're beginning to dry, but we haven't gone through a drought like most of the rest of the state. The numbers appear to be good, so I suspect we'll have a good year."

"Usually, if the deer are in good shape now, they will be in good shape during hunting season."

Swepton said the rainfall has helped in all areas. The deer are in good condition and the whitetail fawn crop is average, about 30 percent. Biologists also noticed some nice mule deer and whitetail racks during census counts.

"We've got a good antler crop. We've seen some pretty good deer. We had a good winter and the deer were in good shape through most of the summer when antler development is most important," he said.

Whitetails also are in good body condition. Timely rains have given the deer plenty to eat until now, when the winter wheat crop begins to come on. Swepton said a continued dry spell, though, will hurt the dry land wheat.

"It won't be a bumper year. I think if it continues drying, the deer will be moving into the wheat fields," he said. "We've come through in good shape."

Preventing Household Accidents

Although there's no place like home, more accidents occur in the home each year than anywhere else. In 1991, approximately 20 million Americans sustained injuries in the home that required medical attention.

"Most home accidents can be avoided by taking common sense precautions," said Chuck Barton, M.D., medical director of Methodist Hospital's Adult Emergency Center.

Following is a list of the most common type of home injuries and accident prevention techniques.

Knife cuts - Injuries from kitchen knives are the most common type of injury in this country. To prevent this type of injury keep knives sharp to prevent them from slipping off the item being sliced. Keep hands and knife handles dry. Store knives where they can be seen (in a wooden block) and a kitchen drawer.

Household chemical exposure - Accidental exposure to chemicals can occur through inhalation of vapors and sprays, ingestion and skin contact. Exposure to chemicals can cause eye, nose and throat irritation or corrosion, skinburns and damage to the kidneys, liver and nervous system. To prevent this type of injury only use chemicals in well-ventilated areas and wear protective gloves and safety goggles. Store household chemicals and cleansers out of reach of children.

Falls from ladders - Ladders and stools are the cause of more than 150,000 accidents each year. These mishaps can be avoided by planting a ladder's feet one foot out from the supporting wall for every four feet up, and allowing three feet of overlap at the top. Never stand on the top two rungs of a ladder, and make sure it's adequately secured ideally with someone holding the base.

Fires - Approximately one-half million home fires were reported in this country in 1991. The No. 1 cause of these fires was space heaters. Other culprits include faulty wiring, Christmas lights, overloaded electrical circuits and electric blankets. Fire prevention techniques include installing a smoke detector on each floor of the home (check the batteries at least once per month), keeping a dry-chemical fire extinguisher handy and if you must use a space heater, turning it off before leaving the house or going to bed.

Burns - Cooking ranges and stoves are the cause of more than 40,000 injuries each year. To prevent burns make sure there is adequate lighting over the stove and wear short or tight-fitting sleeves while cooking.

Hot water burns - Although this type of burn is less common, thousands occur each year, some of which are fatal. To prevent hot water burns, set the hot water thermostat at 120 degrees. Protect children from accidental scalds by using cool mist vaporizers instead of steam.

Electrocution - Generated electricity causes more than 1,000 deaths annually, usually due to cardiac or upper respiratory arrest. To prevent electrocution, eliminate such hazards as open sockets, exposed connections and worn insulation on electrical cords. Also, never use electrical appliances around a bathtub or shower.

Propane Gas Home Safety Experts Go For 100 Percent

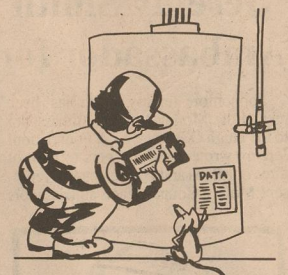

Over two million American homes that use propane gas have already taken advantage of the home safety audit program offered by the National Propane Gas Association (NPGA). Now NPGA safety experts have announced they'd like this figure to become 100 percent.

Nearly 4,000 propane gas dealers nationwide, who are members of NPGA, offer the home safety audit program called GAS Check®, short for Gas Appliance System Check®.

Just like automobiles, home appliances and fuel systems need regular checkups to keep them energy efficient and safe, according to the NPGA. That's the reason behind the nationwide program, which received recognition from the National Fire Protection Association for being one of the best examples of a public fire safety education program in the nation.

As part of GAS Check®, a specially trained service technician explains in everyday terms how to use gas appliances safely and efficiently. The technician also checks the entire propane gas system for leaks, and makes sure all local regulations and industry standards are satisfied. This comprehensive program includes:

- Familiarizing homeowners with the distinctive odor of propane, which is like the smell of rotten eggs.

- Checking the tank, piping, regulator, gauges, connectors, valves, vents, thermostats, pilots, burners, and appliance controls to assure they are in top working condition.
- Advising the homeowner of any worn or damaged equipment and a discussion of repair options if necessary.
- Discussing recommendations for improvements to the propane system to make it more energy efficient and safe.

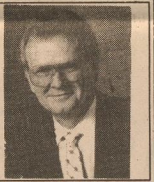

For additional information on obtaining a GAS Check® in your home, simply contact your local propane dealer.

Mental Health

by Ron Trusler, M.Ed., L.P.C.
Assistant Executive Director Central Plains Center for Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse.

MEN AND WOMEN HANDLE PROBLEMS DIFFERENTLY
When a man and woman discuss a problem, they are approaching it from two different directions.

The man wants to listen long enough to reach a solution to the problem. In fact, he is interested in the "bottom-line" - not a lot of details. He wants to fix things, make them better. He becomes frustrated when he offers a solution to the problem and it is rejected. He may become defensive and stop listening.

The woman wants to talk about all the details to the problem. She is not necessarily looking for a solution when she discusses a problem. She, mainly, wants to express all of her emotions, to be heard and understood. She becomes frustrated when the man seems to rush her, past the details, to the bottom line. When the man offers a solution too quickly, she feels he is not interested in what she feels and will either keep on talking in an effort to be heard or quit. If she quits talking, it may be to THAT man and find someone else to talk to. What can help? First of all, begin to understand and accept the differences. Realize the man's need to fix things and the woman's need to express feelings. Second, if the man can understand that he is not being rejected because the woman keeps talking, he can listen better and the woman will feel more accepted. Third, if the woman can assure the man that by his listening to her feelings, he is fixing things, he will feel better.

Believe it or not - men and women can get along great! It takes work but it's worth it! I'm really glad that every person does not think or see things alike - what a mess that would be!

In my distress I called upon the Lord, and cried to my God: and he did hear my voice out of his temple, and my cry did enter into his ears.
