Renewed Memories In Flomot

by Earlyne Jameson

Happy moments from the past that live on in memories that last will be renewed at the Tri-Annual Homecoming in Flomot, July 3rd and 4th, 1993.

Flomot, located in northwest Motley County, has its share of historical data. Let's take a stroll down the memory lane in Flomot.

The Flomot Post Office, taking its name from the first few letters of Floyd County and Motley County, was officially established in January 2, 1902. The town of Flomot began to settle rapidly. Men filed on tracts of land, built dugouts and brought their families to the new homesteads.

Ebb Hewitt built the first house in Flomot in 1902. This landmark, which had been vacant for many years, was torn down in 1984. In the "roaring twenties" over forty families lived in Flomot and in 1993, fifteen families live within the city limits.

The first building of worship in Flomot was the Methodist Church, erected in 1907. It too, is now vacant as the church had its final services, March 3, 1991. Two churches in Flomot still have worship services. The members of the First Baptist Church organized, August 1914. They built a church in 1917 on land donated by Mr. and Mrs. A.L. Clements. The first church services in the present building were held September 1, 1957. The Church of Christ was organized in 1925. The present church building was built in 1928.

Ebb Hewitt had the first gin in Flomot June 11, 1887. The Flomot Gin, operated by the Orville and Roger Lee families, is at this location today. Former owners were G.T. Meese, H.W. "Putt" Gilbert, Joe Degan and J.N. Fletcher. Tom and Myra Spears moved their gin from Four Corners, east of Whiteflat, to Flomot in 1937. It was in operation until 1992. Former managers were H.G. Hunter, Rex Johnson and Linda and Donnie Turner.

The Community Center building in Flomot is the former school building. This building of concrete tile was constructed in 1955. Club meetings, family reunions, luncheons, sport events and the Flomot Homecomings are held here. A Flomot Golden Glove Tournament in 1939 drew over a 100 boxers from 36 schools! The Flomot Schools closed their doors permanently in 1974 and consolidated with the Motley County Schools. For the convenience of travel, students living north of Flomot enrolled at the Valley Schools.

The Post Office in Flomot was a benefiting factor in the establishment of the town of Flomot. Today, it is located east of the town intersection. Mrs. Ruth Lee contracted the Postal Service, August 1990. W.B. Gates was Flomot postmaster, 1919-1937; Wanda Grace Tanner, 1937-1946; Mrs. Bernice Bond, 1946-1982 and Leon Cloyd, 1983-1988.

In the sparsely populated community of Flomot today, it is hard to comprehend there was a booming real estate development during the 1920's and 1930's. Would you believe they had a Mercantile Store where Leonard Crowell sold dry goods, groceries, hardware and had the International dealership? A Hardware Store was built by Jim Williams in 1924 who was also a John Deere dealer. The Will Franklin Allen family, who moved to Flomot in 1916, will be remembered as owners of a hotel in Flomot and a drug store with small round marble topped tables encircled by black iron swirl chairs.

Flomot had numerous stores that sold groceries and not a single one today! Store owners during the 1920's and 30's were J.L. Kuykendall, Sr.; M.J. Trice; Ralph Merrett, J.R. McAtee and Son; W.W. Hunt and A.J. Hudson. Mr. Hudson also had a Produce Market and bought eggs, cream and butter. This empty building is still standing in Flomot. The Cunningham Grocery and Variety Store had a long enclosed candy glass case. It caught the eyes of the children when buying school supplies. After much debating, they would leave the store with a big sack of candy for just 5¢!

During these decades there were several stations and two of the empty buildings are still standing at the corners of the Flomot intersection. Former owners were Bert Cloyd, Robert Amick, Don Wedeman, J.L. Kuykendall, Robert Thomas and Arden Cloyd. These men would scratch their heads over the modern stations that offer just about everything except a pump jockey to fill your tank and check your vehicles for vital fluids! Soda pop was in a rusty old case holding several bottles and a chunk of ice left that morning by the iceman. If you were hungry, drop a penny into the old peanut globe for stale goobers left there months ago.

The most extravagant entertainment in Flomot, 1927-1929 was the Wedeman Movie Theater. Mrs. Dan (Thula) Wedeman showed western and comedy silent films on Friday night, Saturday afternoon and night. The Flomot Barbershop had three barbers, A.L. Clements, Warren Clements and Homer Kingery. John M. Graves had a Blacksmith Shop and grist mill.

Families put up individual owned telephone lines and crank type telephones. To make a long distance call, they had to go to the M.J. Pyron family telephone switchboard in their large home that also accommodated a meat market and cafe. Service was established in 1967 with the Caprock Telephone of Spur. Joe Degan served on the board of directors at its inception as Flomot and Whiteflat representatives until his death in 1992.

Other places of business during this twenty year span in Flomot were the Farmer's Cafe, S.W. Jones; Flomot Drug Store, Clinton Ellis; Tourist Garage, Wingo and Son; Flomot Dairy, J.H. Hines; Tipton's Hamburgers, A.A. Tipton; Colonial Cafe, J.L. Boyd and H-Ton Theater, Pual Landry. They had two doctors, Dr. Stalp and Dr. Sherman. The pharmacist, R.A. Hill became a doctor in later years.

The only three story building in Flomot had doctor offices on the top floor, IOOF Lodge facilities on the second floor and a Drug Store on the bottom floor.

Flomot residents are still initiating worthwhile projects in this small rural community. They have an active Fire Department, Water, Cemetery, Community and Homecoming Associations. They also help with 4-H, school, libraries and other activities in adjacent towns.

I thank Mrs. Donnie Anderson Jenkins of Matador, former resident of Flomot for help with this historical data."

Centennial Ends - New Era Begins For First Baptist Church, Matador

by Lila Meador

With the theme "100 years of commitment to the Glory of God", First Baptist Church of Matador began the centennial celebration of events as scheduled, Saturday afternoon with a reception and welcome to members and former members from out of town. From 3:00 o'clock until 5:30 when a sandwich supper was served, the crowd had increased until the Fellowship Hall was filled almost to capacity.

The evening worship service and two Sunday services, June 26-27 were in observance of the organization date of the church, which was May 14, 1893, and marks the end of that century and beginning of a new era in the life of the church.

The worship services featured nine former pastors as speakers, with musical talents and special recognitions also highlighting the presentations. More than 300 persons registered during the celebration, including many former members from over the state and beyond, and several descendants of the six charter members of the church.

Rev. Gaylon Cox, host pastor, welcomed the congregation at each service.

The current director, Billy Donaldson, led the congregational singing at the Saturday evening services.

Prelude to the evening worship service on Saturday was a duet arrangement of "Precious Memories" by the organist and pianist, who also played arrangements for the preludes and offertories at the other services. Remembrance in Flomot of the Golden Age of Radio

Shannon Davidson and his mother, Mrs. J.M. (Dora) Davidson in San Francisco, Calif., 1939, listening to radio to hear who won second place in the Pony Express Race. Shannon won first. It was King Kerley of Quanah who lagged behind a 100 miles.

Warm memories are sure to be stirred by the remembrance of the first radios and favorite programs through the years in the Flomot area during the Homecoming, July 3-4.

Radio is one of the most important means of communication. Radio broadcasting has served as an important means of information, education and entertainment. Marconi proved the possibility of radio broadcasting in 1895. The first regularly scheduled programs began in 1920. Television itself depends on radio waves to carry the sound and picture.

A radio in the Flomot area was a prized possession in the 1920's, 1930's and 1940's. Residents would save to buy a wind-powered generator, the battery and then get a fine electronic instrument. Slowly and carefully you would plug each big vacuum tube into its socket and they were surprised when it worked. They were selective with their programs, because they didn't want to run the battery down. When there was a storm, they disconnected the battery and antenna for fear it would be struck by lightning.

The sporting event of the year in 1938 was the world heavy-weight championship bout between Joe Lewis and Max Schmeling. It was to be heard coast to coast in a live radio broadcast from New York's Madison Square Garden. One family in Flomot had a new radio, so eight neighboring farmers invited themselves over to listen to the big fight. The radio hummed for several minutes while warming up. When slowly turning the dial, they at last located Madison Square Garden. Everyone was listening intently when announcer, Graham Mac Namie hollered, "The referee is still counting! 8-9-10!!" Joe Lewis has knocked out the big German in two minutes, four seconds of the first round! They sighed in disappointment as the radio battery and antenna were disconnected.

Some of the radios had speakers sitting on top of them. In one household, when they didn't have the money to replace the radio batteries, a boy in the family connected the radio speaker to their crank-type telephone. You could hear the party-line telephone conversations all over the room. He was unhappy when his parents didn't appreciate his discovery and made him disconnect it.

Remember the "All American Boy?" For eighteen years from 1933 to 1951 youngsters hurried home from school to hunker down in front of their radios or crawl under their bed on the cool linoleum and listen to the exciting adventures of Jack Armstrong, a young student at the fictional high school, Hudson High. Then the only sponsor of Jack Armstrong, General Mills Wheaties, the Breakfast of Champions would ask, "Have you tried Wheaties?" For one Wheaties box top and 10¢, Jack Armstrong fans could obtain one of his gadgets. Grocery shelves across the nation were cleaned out of the breakfast cereal. Forty years after his final radio appearance, there is talk of a possible "All American Boy" television series.

One Flomot gentleman when growing up in World War II, he and his buddies had fun listening to their favorite late afternoon radio programs. Shows like Little Orphan Annie and I Love a Mystery were most popular. However, they had to listen to Jack Armstrong, the "All American Boy" to learn what Wheaties would send them in exchange for box tops. They received "Genuine Imitation Norden Bombsight" or "Authentic Aviator's Wings" to pin on jackets. The best though in the summer of 1944 was when Wheaties offered a series of model airplanes that really flew for two box tops and a nickel. You had to assemble the heavy cardboard and glue a penny in the nose cowl for weight. With a good toss, the completed fighter planes soared through the air in a marvelous flight. Their families wondered if they would ever tire of eating Wheaties. They put away bushels of the stuff!

"I survived the 'WAR of the Worlds' on Halloween Eve in 1938", said one man. He was at his grandparents home when his granddad began twisting the Philco radio dial and heard a news flash. A Chicago scientist had observed several big explosions on the planet Mars. That was a million miles away, but when the announcer in a trembling voice said, "There are fragmented unsubstantiated reports of many people dead or injured in New Jersey." They continued that a reporter had sighted the landing of a silver spacecraft of some sort with creatures carrying weapons like ray guns, shooting deadly green flame. "Most people knew it was only make-believe," he said, "but we younger ones stayed awake for hours watching for Martians." The next morning, newspapers and radios revealed the embarrassing truth. The "War of the Worlds" was a broadcast by Orson Welles. He had frightened a good portion of North America!

In 1934, one man's family would sit around the radio and listen to Admiral Richard E. Byrd's explorations in Antarctica from his camp, "Little America". He said he was every bit as excited during those Saturday evening reports as his sons were when they watched Neal Armstrong walk on the moon 35 years later. The weekly series of broadcasts aired over a special shortwave frequency, a communications marvel.

Youngsters of the '40's grew up facing several challenges. There was Hitler rationing, the atomic bomb and perhaps worst of all, live radio's amazing "Quiz Kids". Having to compete with those eggheads of the airwaves was awful. It was a popular radio show (at least with adults) from about 1940 to 1953. It climbed steadily in the ratings and quickly became a national sensation. Countless ordinary kids winced when parents asked, "Why can't you be like them?" They were glad when the program finally left the radio.

Saturday and Tuesday were the most popular nights for radio listening in 1930's-40's. Bob Wills was with the Light Crust Doughboys in 1934 and in the 1940's you could hear his band play around midnight on Saturday from Cain's Academy in Tulsa, Oklahoma. Bob Hope's 55 year relationship with NBC began in 1938 when he began hosting "The Pepsodent Show" on radio. Other radio shows with devoted followings were "Fibber McGee and Molly", "Aldrich Family", "Amos and Andy", "Kraft Music Hall" with Bing Crosby and "Lux Radio Theater". Another Saturday night favorite was The Hit Parade, listing the top ten songs of the week.

When talking about the golden age of radio one woman said her favorite program was Little Orphan Annie and she often listened to it on her grandparents console radio. It was tall and boxy and the front was covered with a beautiful floral pattered cloth. One night when in front of the radio, she thought how great it would be if she could SEE Little Orphan Annie and Sandy. She was sure they were inside that radio, so she took her grandmother's scissors and cut that floral cloth off the front of the radio. When slowly peeling back the material, she was utterly shocked to find nothing but a bunch of tubes in a tangle! When her grandmother returned to the room, she was more than a little upset. However, her grandmother made a new embroidered cloth to replace the one she had ruined and was pleased with all the compliments she received for her beautiful work. She forgave her granddaughter's costly curiosity and they kept buying Ovaltine, the show's sponsor.

They had scary radio programs such as Lights Out and The Shadow. The coal oil lamps would cast shadows on the walls and when they would hear a creaking door, kids were too terrified to go to bed in a dark room.

In 1932 when a former Flomot resident was eight years old, he was listening to The Lone Ranger on their battery-powered radio when his mother called him to get his chores done. Not wanting to miss any of the story, he turned off the radio and warned his sister, "Do not turn the radio on, because I want to listen to the rest of the story when I finish my chores."

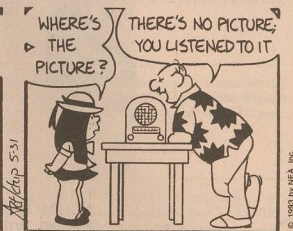

Some of Flomot's older citizens remember their favorite daytime radio programs, Ma Perkins, Young Doctor Malone and Mary Worth. Another was Young Widder Brown. A woman's daughter remarked, "That lady was forever having problems and my mother used to think up ways for Mrs. Brown to avoid such awful situations."

Highlight of listening to the radio in 1939 was when the twenty two year old cow hand from Flomot, Shannon Davidson participated in the Pony Express Race. He was one of the eighteen young riders to travel 2,000 miles from Nacona, Texas to San Francisco, California. Residents followed his 231/2 day race over the radio and in newspapers. Shannon and his horse, Ranger, were met with cheers as they rode down the 200 yards of "Rainbow Ramp" as the winners of the race. He received $750.00, congratulations of dignitaries and newspaper headlines. Motley County showed its appreciation by having one of the most enjoyable and historical events in Matador with "Shannon Davidson Day" when he returned home.

If we have brought you a smile or two, we're glad, because remembering when brings us plenty of smiles too!

Deadline Nears For Museum Plaque

Motley County Museum's deadline for the third Motley County Honor Roll is July 15. The walnut plaque with individual engraved name plates honoring residents of the past and present will join two others hanging in the museum lobby. By having a cut-off date at this time the plaque will be ready for viewing by visitors during the Old Settlers Reunion in August.

Those wishing to add their own or family members' names should contact Hazel Donovan, Glenn Woodruff, or Marisue Potts. The cost is $100 per name plate, with a two line maximum. The donations are used to make improvements to the 1927 private hospital building, such as the recent addition of much needed air conditioning to the upstairs.

Thanks and appreciation for removing excess hospital beds goes to R.C. Giesecke and crew. This will free-up valuable space for new displays of old things.

Needed to display the old fashioned kitchen items is a cupboard and stove. A puzzle for visitors is how to set up a one-legged wooden ironing board. Kids' toys remain an elusive item.

The Motley County Arts and Crafts ladies faithfully man the museum on Monday afternoons from 1 to 5 p.m. Everyone is welcome to come by at that time or call Glenn Woodruff or Marisue Potts to set up an appointment for personal convenience.

Recent out of town visitors have included Kay Russell Watson, Libby and Brady, Amarillo; W.A. Park, Jr., Canyon; Charles and Jammie Cammack, San Antonio; Clara Cammack Park, and Wilbur G. Park, Sr., of El Paso; Anthony Holcomb of Wolforth; Lillie Crouch, Lubbock; Maxine Gwinn, Nacogdoches; Phyllis Gwinn, Broken Arrow, OK;

Howard and Oleta Gwinn of Levelland; Codine and Myrtle Gwinn, Bellaire; Carol Holcomb, Childress; Aly Gwinn of Lubbock; Josie Raetz, Spur; Mable Miller, Portland, Ore.; Gloria Lee, Spur; Michelle Bearden, Lubbock; Katelyn Branson of Keller.

Flomot 1935-36 Football Teams

League Clay and Lossie Gilbert of Flomot renew memories when playing on the 1935-1936 Flomot football teams.

A Flomot Longhorns football team was started from "scratch" in 1935. The school bought the suits and the boys bought their shoes. Dewey Rattan, superintendent of the Flomot Schools, converted the back portion of his garage into a shower and dressing room. Coach McWilliams and the Flomot Longhorns played their first game against Estelline on a vacant lot across the road from the L.W. Crowell home in Flomot. The score is not known, but there is a deep embedded memory of their being more goatheads than grass on the playing field. Other teams they competed against in 1935 were Lockney, Floydada, Spur, Quitaque and Turkey.

The 1936 Flomot Longhorns football team had 13 members. They remember Steve Thomas, center; Red Ammonett, backfield; Cordell Light, backfield; Lossie Gilbert, backfield; League Clay, left tackle; Wilson Bourland, tackle; Billy Landry, tackle. Other players were William Bynum, Wilmer Marler, J.C. Martin, Johnny Jacobs and Talbot Brown. The football teams played were Floydada, Lockney, Matador, Estelline, Quitaque and Turkey.

The 1936 team played Paducah for the district title in Matador and won 36-6. They again played in Matador for bidistrict against Wheeler. The dirt football field was too muddy for a football game, so they moved to pastureland, marked it off for the event and played the game that ended in a 6-6 tie. Flomot won on penetrations.

The Longhorns advanced to Regional and played the Panhandle football team. League said, "We got beat so bad, we forgot the score!"

However, they do remember the cheerleaders during these two years! They were Hattie Standifer, Veneta Lee Webb, Lou Ruth Clements and Glenna "B". Davidson. Pep squad members were Alice Speer, Lula Stapleton, Florene Dyer, Maxine Calvert, Melba Jo Jones, Lois Titus, Inez Marler, Gertrude Martin, Ila Faye Webb, Florea Washington, and Wanda Morris.

Flomot has no statistics on record for these years. In 1937, Leo Jackson was the new coach and fewer boys played football. They began to keep records of the Flomot School athletic program in 1937.
