62-NO. 9 MATADOR, MOTLEY COUNTY, TEXAS, THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1936 PRICE SEVEN CENTS

Precinct Conventions Give Lead to Johnson

County Reflects General Attitude Over State; Attendance Sets All-Time Record

New Showers Aid County

A rainstorm which developed in the southwest Monday afternoon brought beneficial showers to the southern part of the county and extended east of Matador. Only a trace of rain fell here.

Reports of rain from three-fourths to one inch have been received from the Roaring Springs and south county line areas. A good shower fell east of Matador.

A small tornado developed from the same storm as it moved to the northeast and unroofed several homes in Andrews. One woman was injured by flying glass. No damage was reported in this area but unconfirmed reports said some wind damage resulted in Paducah.

SENATE Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson in Saturday jerked the reins of Texas Democratic leadership out of the hands of Governor Allen Shivers with a landslide 4 to 1 victory in state-wide precinct conventions.

Attendance here set an all-time record for precinct conventions with approximately 50 taking part in two meetings. Matador, for the first time in history, held two precinct conventions (one for each voting box). The precinct is divided by US Highway 70, along Dundee Street was used as a dividing line in the city.

Supporters of Governor Shivers were clearly out-manuevered and out-voted here and throughout the state. On the basis of delegates to the state convention in Dallas, May 22, Johnson had 1,221 to Shivers' 338 in an incomplete report Monday. Roaring Springs voted 9 to 1 for Johnson.

In the county convention held here at 10 a. m. Tuesday, County Judge Vance H. Gilbreath was named as Motley county's delegate to the state convention, and Mayor W. L. McWilliams was selected as alternate.

Johnson's victory in the Saturday precinct conventions, first step in selecting delegates to the National Democratic convention, meant that the Texas delegation to this year's convention will be pledged to support the party's presidential nominee.

Who Is A Demagog?
Johnson in a statement Saturday night said "the voice of the demagog was heard throughout the state" and that the people listened and "voted for the path of moderation."

Shivers replied that in a statement issued through state Democratic headquarters in Austin.

"Time will be the real judge of this issue. I am perfectly willing to let time determine which is the demagog," Shivers said.

The Diary of Mary White

January 25, 1956, Wednesday and at 'em early. Tried not to make the Sgt. as he peeped in his sleeping bag living room rug. Laughed at a great big (235 lbs.) barrel of a man to find room for himself to a breakfast of and eggs after I finally got awake about eight o'clock. I was so sleepy I fell out of bed and he sat up after I got up and read all the newspaper clippings I had saved. The Sgt. and I went to the store to get a gunny sack full of fish and smilingly giving them to the Eskimo women? Sir Galahad of the Arctic! He did bring enough home for supper. Filled a crisp brown and eaten with hamburger relish they are a $3.00 plate.

January 26, 1956, Thursday

No plane today. R. W. has been tom cod fishing all day. He is getting to be a veteran—a hole in the ice, a block of ice to sit on and a bank of snow to protect from the wind and he is happy. Don't mention the candy bars and peanuts stuffed in his pockets to nibble on. Can't you just see him catching a gunny sack full of fish and smilingly giving them to the Eskimo women? Sir Galahad of the Arctic! He did bring enough home for supper. Filled a crisp brown and eaten with hamburger relish they are a $3.00 plate.

January 27, 1956, Friday

A lovely sunny day but no mail plane. School went forward today only because the teacher looked big and ugly and threatening. The children were determined to play and I was just as determined to round up all unfinished work and get checking done so I could start next week with a clean slate. As consolation, when we were finished I read to them from "The Black Stallion". They have seen enough movies with horses in them that they are enjoying the story. Spent the wonderfully dull evening reading, and writing letters.

January 28, 1956, Saturday

Had the whole building to myself from the first ray of sunlight until two-thirty p. m. The mail plane came and that pried R. W. away from his fishing. Roger and Thertha came in later. Letters, papers and packages but no film. The whole village registered their disappointment. Even I was a little 'put out'. Sounds like I'm slipping, doesn't it? Climate and distance weld these little communities into a unit and we find ourselves growing into that unit. Not a bad experience.

January 29, 1956, Sunday

I yelled help! help! when I saw everyone doming outside clothing this morning. There were many chores yet undone that had to be done before Monday morn and I did not wish to do them all. To no avail, however, for I was left to "fight manfully on". Well, maybe grumbling as one works isn't manfully, maybe it is just manlike. Anyway at eight tonight the cache has an extra sack of fish, the storeroom has been raided for tomorrow's lunch and everything is ready for Monday morning except my disposition.

February 5, 1956, Sunday

Forty-one years today! The little children in Sunday School sang happy birthday to their teacher and what's better, grinned while they sang. Handshakes and happy birthday greetings met me as I went the rounds of my patients tonight. One man said, "Happy birthday, and may you have as many more!"

"Thank you kindly," I said but I thought to myself 'the heavens forbid'.

I "put out the fleece" today and as usual I'm impatient for a reply. Will I never learn that the Lord cannot be rushed?

February 11, 1956, Saturday

Saw that the day was clear and still, as soon as I crawled out of bed. The hope of a mail plane and the thrills it brings came next. A hurried breakfast and I became comparable to an Egyptian foreman of a gang of brick making Hebrews. I know that the work I got out of this family (myself included) before the plane came would be all for the day. Sure enough, about a quarter of twelve, that lovely booming melody, a flash of red in the sunlight and it was down on the ice and little Eskimos were sliding joyously down the embankment on to the runway. I had managed to get the school room swept and mopped, the clinic woodwork washed and the floor mopped, the soot removed from the lunchroom stove, all beds made and all floors swept in our quarters so I was ready for my bunch to ski down the cliff too. The children did but R. W. went stepping gingerly toward the post office. He has new mukluks and he can't stand up on the ice. These well traveled paths get to be like waxed glass.

February 12, 1956, Sunday

Got my household ox out of the ditch this morning and struggled hard to get my correspondence and my personal added makes lots of work but if I got one letter less I'd squawk so I dare not write one less. Today we reread all the letters we received yesterday and, score for me, I got all the memoranda filed. One held forth a two week in-service training course to be held in June at Mt. Edgecumbe, in southeastern Alaska. All expenses are paid so it sounded wonderful. They also said anyone wishing educational leave in order to go to summer school might have it. Tra-la-la! The very thought of being able to go to the University of Alaska sets the drums echoing along the river of my desires. Oh well, nice day dreaming anyhow.

February 13, 1956, Monday

School ran smoothly today... only had six tardies and no major upsets. The radio is receiving again and we heard that our new educational director for this district is in St. Michael. Guess we are on his list soon. We seem to have the luck of getting everyone to this station except the one we direly need... the mechanic.

Thertha got her mukluks tonight. That makes me the only civilian left and, frankly speaking, I aim to remain that way. I have no wish to go around with a clothes pin on my nose. I love the smell of new shoes... but new mukluks, who-e-e-w!

Had to give only two shots today and with no planes and regular council meeting in the schoolroom tonight this day could well be written off as routine.

February 14, 1956, Tuesday

Stateside customs (stupid and otherwise) are well entrenched into the routine life of this little village. For days scissors have been busily snipping and little fingers have been smearing paste and putting together various combinations of colored paper and each finished product has been proudly dubbed a valentine.

By noon of today the poor teacher had been asked dozens of times, "When do we give out the valentines?" She, the stubborn one, always answered, "Later, maybe." By the time the bell had rung after lunch anticipation had the children in such a state that she realized they would never settle down to a regular reading class so she had one of her brilliant? ideas.

She assigned three older students to search the encyclopedia for information on St. Valentine and then erased the black board nice and clean preparatory to listing the facts learned about this saint and his day. One child read from Comp-ton's one from Britannica Jr. and one from the World Book. These are the facts that appeared on the board:

1. There were no fewer than three and no more than seven early Roman priests by the name of St. Valentine.

2. All were beheaded.

3. There is no connection between any of them and the fourteenth day of February.

4. An early superstition honored February 14, because all birds chose their mates on that day.

5. Another belief was that the first person of the opposite sex that one's eyes beheld on that day was sure to be one's future mate.

6. An early English custom was to hold a lottery. All girls names were placed in a container and the boys drew. The name he drew had to be his favorite, or valentine, for one year.

The brilliant idea had backfired for the poor kids were non-plussed and the teacher was chagrined to find no explanation for some of the strange customs of her people.

Teacher and children agreed they didn't want any part of any thing they had read in the encyclopedia, so they asked themselves, "Why do I make something pretty and give it to my friends?"

The ensuing discussion was most hectic and finally we agreed to erase what was on the board and write, "Because we love our friends we give them pretty things we have made. Now, we had our self respect back and could pass out our valentines. The kids were happy and immediately forgot the distioning that had been theirs for a brief time and the teacher was more than glad to be out of deep water.

For the first time in all my teaching career there were no store bought valentines and I could detect no loss of pleasure in the giving and receiving. I liked my little stack better for each was revelatory of the child who gave it.

I've made the visits to the sick in colder weather but never in worse. Maybe I sampled an Arctic blizzard. The falling snow, driven by a furious wind was blinding. I'd hate to be a little birdie and have to find my mate this 14th of February. There'd surely be one old maid in the flock!"

PIED PINIONS

By Mrs. M.

We're still trying to find out what youngster made the observation that Jinks Wilson is now wearing a civilian hat!

The new top piece which the deputy is wearing is one of these sporty straws which definitely takes him out of the cowboy category, but he says the reason he doesn't have a new Stetson is because he can't afford one. He looks so out of character however, that we think something should be done about the matter. Even Geneva, his own wife, doesn't recognize him.

Three hundred (count them) youthful fingers simultaneously flying over the keyboards of ten pianos made history in Clovis, New Mexico Tuesday evening, when a trio of little boys at each piano played "Musketiers" (Schaum) . . . thirty lads, with ten fingers each. The event was a piano festival staged by the Clovis Music Teachers Association in observance of National Music Week. Other numbers on the program were given by ensemble groups of 10 and 20 pupils (singly and in duets at the pianos).

Three hundred students of seven music teachers had been learning their pieces since September, and had been in rehearsal since March under the direction of a professional conductor, John Pylman, Jr. The performance was declared to be the first of its kind ever staged in the state of New Mexico. Whether a similar feat has ever been accomplished in Texas or not, we do not know.

While the entire program was novel and enjoyable, our attendance was due to the fact that a niece, Nola Fulkerson, was one of the performers. Her Grandmother Tipton and ourself were obligingly chauffeured to Clovis by Treasa (Mrs. Jim) Meece. Treasa, by the way, is making preparations to leave June 1st, to join her paratrooper husband in Germany.

District Attorney
Efforts to Salvage
Months From Crime

District Attorney John B. Stapleton, a candidate for reelection, would prefer to return to the courts and to citizens rather than make convicts of them and his policy has met with marked success.

Following is his formal announcement, titled: "To The Citizens of the 110th Judicial District."

I hereby announce my candidacy for reelection to the office of District Attorney. For some time now my application has been on file with all the county magistrates and the disinterested chairmen of the district and I take this method of making such fact public.

I deeply appreciate the privilege of having served you in an important office, and the cooperation which you have given me in the history of our district. Together we have all made a record of which we can be proud. Crime has not increased in the last few years in the four counties of this district as it has throughout the rest of the State.

For a number of years now crime has been at its lowest level in the history of our district, and I think that is a record in which we can all take pride.

I admit to you in complete frankness that I have tried to salvage young men and boys and make good citizens of them rather than to make convicts of them. That is a policy which I know you have wanted me to follow, and that is a policy which I shall follow if re-elected. I am happy to report to you that in almost every case we have succeeded; in a few cases we have failed, of course, and those cases have broken my heart, but I am still glad that we tried. The many, many cases where we have succeeded make the effort more than worth while. But I have prosecuted vigorously where the circumstances demanded it, and I shall continue to do so.

"I feel that I am now in my prime as a lawyer and that fact, together with the experience I have had in the office, will enable me to serve you better in the future. I shall appreciate from the depth of my heart all that you may do in my behalf."

Sincerely,
John B. Stapleton
