Motley County Appraiser Gives Agricultural Tax Advice

SAVING ON AGRICULTURAL LAND TAXES

Agricultural appraisal lowers the value of land owned by qualified farmers and ranchers. It values rural land based on the land's capacity to produce crops, livestock or timber, instead of its value on the real estate market. This lower value reduces property taxes on the land.

WHAT LAND QUALIFIES?

Taxpayers may qualify for agricultural appraisal under two different laws. The newer law is called "open-space valuation" or "1-d-1 appraisal". Nearly all land that receives agricultural appraisal is under this law.

Details on the older law known as "1-d" or agricultural use laws are available from your appraisal district.

For "1-d-1 appraisal", the land must meet the following: THE LAND MUST BE DEVOTED PRINCIPALLY TO AGRICULTURAL USE. Agricultural use includes production of crops, livestock, poultry, fish or cover crops. It also can include leaving the land idle for government program or for normal crop or livestock rotation. Land used for raising certain exotic animals (including exotic birds) to produce human food or other items of commercial value and cutting wood for use in fences or structures or adjacent agricultural land also qualifies. Using land for wildlife management is an agricultural use. Such land was either appraised as qualified open-space land or was eligible to be appraised under the 1-d-1 special appraisal on January 1, 1992. Wildlife management land must be used in at least two of seven specific ways to propagate a breeding population of wild animals for ultimate human use. Contact your local appraisal office for details.

* Timberland must be used with the intent to produce income and be devoted principally to the production of timber.

* Both agricultural land and timberland must be devoted to production at a level of intensity that is common in the local area.

* The land must have been devoted to agricultural and/or timber production for at least five of the past seven years. However, land within the city limits must have been devoted continuously for the preceding five years, unless the land did not receive substantially equal city services as other properties in the city.

* If your land qualified for agricultural appraisal and you change its use to a non-agricultural use, you will owe a rollback tax for each of the previous five years in which your land got the lower appraisal. The rollback tax is the difference between the taxes you paid on your land's agricultural value and the taxes you would have paid if the land had been taxed on its higher market value. Plus, 7-percent interest is charged for each year from the date that the taxes would have been due.

The chief appraiser determines if a change to a non-agricultural use has been made and sends a notice of the change. If you disagree, you may file a protest with the ARB. You must file the protest within 30 days of the date of notice was mailed to you. The ARB decides your case.

If you don't protest or if the ARB decides against you, you owe the rollback tax.

The owner who changes the use of the land gets the bill for the rollback tax.

HOW TO FILE FOR AGRICULTURAL APPRAISAL

1. Get an application form at your local appraisal district office.

2. Fill out the form completely and return it to the appraisal district office after January 1, but no later than April 30. Remember, making false statements on your application is a criminal offense.

3. If your property is valued by more than one appraisal district, you must file an application in each appraisal district office. If you don't, you could end up paying taxes on your property's full market value to one or more taxing units. This occurs when your property is located in a taxing unit that is also in a neighboring county. Contact the appraisal district if you aren't sure.

4. If you need more time to complete your application form, submit a written request to the chief appraiser before the April 30 deadline. The chief appraiser can grant up to 60 extra days if you have good reason for needing extra time.

5. If you miss the April 30 deadline, you may file an application any time before the appraisal review board approves the appraisal records (usually about July 20). However, in such a case, you will be charged a penalty for filing late. The penalty is 10 percent of the tax saving you obtained by getting agricultural appraisal for your land. Once the appraisal review board approves the records, you can't apply for agricultural appraisal for that year.

6. If the chief appraiser asks you for more information, you will have at least 30 days to reply. You may ask for more time but you must have a good reason. If you don't reply, the chief appraiser must deny your application.

7. If the chief appraiser denies or modifies your agricultural appraisal, he or she must tell you in writing within 5 days. This notice must explain how you can protest.

8. Once you receive agricultural appraisal, you don't have to apply again in the following years unless your qualifications change. However, the chief appraiser may request a new application to verify that you still meet the qualifications. If you get a notice to reapply, be sure to do so. If you don't, you will lose your eligibility. If you become the owner of land that is already qualified, you must reapply in your own name by April 30. If you don't you will lose your eligibility. You must notify the appraisal district in writing by April 30 if your land's eligibility changes. Failure to do so results in a penalty charge.

9. The agricultural appraisal is based on an estimate of the typical annual income during the five-year period preceding the year before the Appraisal. The agricultural appraisal may change annually based on this income and the capitalization rate.

MAKING SENSE OF FATS

Recent statements by heart disease researchers have indicated that partially hydrogenated vegetable oils used to make margarines are linked to heart disease. Although making headlines, the problems with hydrogenated oils are not new.

Manufacturers add hydrogen or hydrogenate corn, soy, and other liquid oils to make them more solid and stable and to cut costs. This gives margarine a creamy consistency and prolongs the shelf life of crackers, cookies, potato chips, and other foods that contain the semi-solid oils. Because they are less likely to turn rancid, hydrogenated oils are also often used for deep-frying in fast-food restaurants.

Most important, hydrogenation transforms many of the unsaturated fatty acids, making them more saturated and changing their structure in other subtle ways: these are called trans fatty acids or trans fats. While regular unsaturated fats lower blood cholesterol, studies have shown that trans fats act more like saturated fats -- raising total and LDL ("bad") cholesterol. There is also some evidence that trans fats lower HDL ("good") cholesterol. Thus, trans fats increase the risk of heart disease and perhaps other health problems. But the full range of adverse effects of trans fats is not yet fully understood.

It is hard to tell whether margarine or butter has a more harmful effect on blood cholesterol, but some things are clear:

— You don't need to worry about occasionally eating small amounts of either butter or margarine. If you want to give up either, try a little olive oil or butter or just put jam or honey on your morning toast.

— If you eat lots of margarine and also many processed foods that contain hydrogenated oils, cut back. At least switch to tub or liquid margarine. The more solid the vegetable oil, the more hydrogenated and, therefore, the more trans fats it has.

"Diet" margarines are very soft and contain more water and only half the fat of regular margarine.

— When cooking or baking, it is preferable to use liquid vegetable oil rather than margarine or butter.

— Instead of topping vegetables with butter or margarine, try herb mixtures or lemon juice.

— The best course is to cut down on the total amount of fat you eat - that will automatically cut back on the amount of trans fats you consume.

Educational programs of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service are open to all citizens without regard to race, color, sex, disability, religion, age, or national origin.

THOUGHT FOR THE DAY: The best gift - Forgiveness.

But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you.

CHRISTMAS COFFEE

The traditional annual holiday coffee hosted by LaVoe Thacker assisted by Pam and Blair Thacker, and Donna and Laurie Hoyle, was held on Saturday, December 17, 1994.

It's always fun anticipating what the theme will be from year to year.

This year when we arrived, first view of the entrance porch was a large nutcracker soldier between entry columns decorated with lights and glitter, nutcracker theme.

On TV was a hanging Christmas tree with nutcracker figures around it Center-piece on table had six nutcracker candles atop.

In the master bedroom a wall mural was lighted with lights all among the trees in the mural and a "Merry Christmas" strung between the trees. The mural was painted by LaVoe's sister, Johnnie Lowrance.

Among other decorations were two animated carousels on the piano and fireplace mantel.

The serving table was laden with dainty tidbits. One of the most unusual and colorful was the Christmas strawberries made by Donna and Laurie. All the morsels were very tasty and delicious..

'Twas good to see friends and have a little visit. Lillian, the matriarch, was greeting friends, in her usual gracious manner and warm smile from her wheelchair.

Cora Mitchell, despite the recent death of her son and previous to that had suffered a broken hip, been on a walker and cane, discarded all of them, moving around 'on her own'. These two ladies, Lillian and Cora, are truly remarkable.

Out of town guests were from Lubbock, Amarillo, and Spur.

Addendum: Some personal observations: The large nutcracker pots body was made of 2 huge flower potter's painted red and blue. (No doubt but that the pots came from Marshall, Texas, home of the pottery factory).

Coincidentally, Winifred Darsey entertained her bridge club for a Christmas luncheon and chose the nutcracker theme for her table appointments with favors of nutcracker magnets. This must be the year of the nutcracker.

From the spacious sun porch view in the backyard, centered on the gazebo with deer nearby, a buck, doe and two fawn, making for an interesting scene.

Three Important Questions

"Who am I?"
"Why am I here?"
"Where am I going?"

There are various answers given for these often asked questions. The answers usually given reflect one's viewpoint. There is the Atheistic, the Agnostic and the Christian points of view. This article will answer the question from the Christian perspective.

I am created in the image of God (Gen. 1:26). I am a person of value, my Lord tells me in Luke chapter 15. God's love gives me value (Rom. 5:8-11). I am here on this earth in order to glorify my God by obeying His will and to accept my responsibilities of this life. How I respond to these determines where I am going.

I have a Godly origin, a spiritual mind, a heavenly purpose, an eternal destiny -- for I have value. My value is seen in the price paid to give me the hope of eternal salvation.

Where I live eternally is up to me. I will determine that by what I do with Jesus. Let me ask you, "What will you do with Jesus?"

A Message From P.T.O. ....

The P.T.O. will be having a general meeting in the near future, and would like everyone who possibly can to be there. Interest in the P.T.O. has been steadily dwindling over the last several years, and we are in hopes that we can build it back up once again. If any of you parents or teachers ever has a suggestion for us please feel free to let us know. We would love to listen to what you have to say. We are here for the children of our school and the teachers and parents are a vital part of all that we attempt to do.

Congratulations to...

Heather Turner, who has been named a University Scholar at Southern Methodist University and will receive a $12,000 scholarship.

Lindsey's Lines

by Lindsey Williams

Currently our school has two Tech-Prep classes. The Tech-Prep system is a national effort to develop a work force system that opens up high wage jobs for students.

These two classes are Accounting, taught by Beverly Darsey, and Micro-computer Applications, which is taught by Denise Gastineau. By taking these classes, you get three hours of college credit for each class. This credit is good at South Plains College and in the Tech-Prep Consortium, which consists of several junior colleges in the Panhandle.

The Tech-Prep system has expanded to most junior colleges throughout Texas and is very beneficial to any student interested in attending college.

CORRECTION

The information about Bobby Barton and Humberto Espinoza in the Powerlifting story which was printed in last week's paper was incorrectly printed. The paragraph should have read as follows:

Bobby Barton finished seventh out of 18 lifters in the 165 lb. division with a total of 880 pounds. 880 was good enough to place Humberto Espinoza tenth in the 220 lb. division.

We apologize for this mistake!!

The article about the Methodist Senior Youth Group should have said that their next meeting will be held on Thursday, January 26 at 7:00 p.m. instead of February 28.

***
The outline of Lady Matadors in "Miraculous Matadors" last week stated that Tanya Barkley and Rebecca Jameson were Sophomores. It should have read Freshmen.

BROWN CHIROPRACTIC CLINIC

DR. RON BROWN, D.C.

The human body must have balance in order to have good health, and one of the most important balances is achieved through proper treatment of the nervous system, which controls every function of the body. The main objective of DR. RON BROWN, D.C. is to heal using natural methods. Their goal is to educate people to an alternative method of health care. Care without harmful side effects due to unnecessary medication. People are suffering needlessly. Many times a chiropractic examination of the spine will reveal the cause for many problems. In addition, it can help relieve a problem that is just beginning. If people would get a spinal checkup, like they do a dental checkup, chest x-ray or eye exam, serious health problems could be averted. The spine is such an important part of our bodies, but given little attention until pain shows up. By this time the problem may be of serious nature. This is why DR. RON BROWN, D.C. spends time with his patients educating them to the reasons behind their present health problems. Chiropractic medicine uses standard diagnostic procedures. This includes chiropractic examinations, and use of x-rays when needed. These procedures help reveal the problem so the body's balance can be restored to good health. The goal here is to find the cause for illness and treat that cause. DR. RON BROWN, D.C. of BROWN CHIROPRACTIC CLINIC, located at 1205 Ave. F.N.W. in Childress, phone (817) 937-6011, invites everyone to call for a spinal check. No one need suffer needlessly. Most insurance companies cover chiropractic care. Office hours are Monday through Thursday 9am to 12pm & 2pm to 5pm, Friday 9am to 12pm. We, the editors of this 1995 New Year Business Review, recommend this fine chiropractic clinic to all our readers.

THANK YOU

Thank you to everyone who was concerned for me in any way during my emergency.

Howard Martin

Words can never express our gratitude for the overwhelming love and care shown to us at the time of Randy's death. We are grateful to Dr. David Martin whose call of concern to ask why Randy had not come to work allowed us to find him before dark and who, continues to help us in so many ways; to the Arnold Johnsons who let us use their telephone, furnished blankets, and stayed with us through the evening; to all who helped in getting Randy from the Canyon and retrieving his personal belongings from the scene of the accident. Each hug, word of comfort, helpful action, all the food brought to our home and the Community Center, the abundance of plants and flowers at our home and church, the beautiful and appropriate Memorial Service, the telephone calls, sympathy cards, and donations to worthy causes in memory of Dr. Randall Hunter which continue to come in daily touches our lives in a special way that will not be forgotten. Thank you for your wonderful expressions of love, for sharing your memories with us, and for your prayers which sustain us.
