It is quite a shock to the American tourist when he comes upon the Coffin Shops. Caskets, both the small white ones, and the larger, black ones, are on display in full view to the passerby. In some cases, I have even seen some of these caskets placed outside on the sidewaks, leaning against the front of the shop. Then one sees huge floral set pieces, mostly wreaths, made up in white and purple flowers with silver leaves. These are very large some of them measure more than six feet in diameter. #### . . . Why Go to College

Many parents have children in the secondary school and the college. At all times the advantages of a college education are of exceeding great interest to them. Why do so many parents sacrifice to send their sons and daughters to college? Why do so many young people wish to spend four of the best years of their life in these institutions? Doubtless because they believe a college education better fits them for life's work and, possibly, for easier work.

President Butler, of Columbia University; President Angell, of Yale; President Wriston, of Lawrence, and Professor Foerster, of Iowa State University, have of late written books in which they attempt to answer the question of why young people go to college and go in such large numbers. Their matured judgments seem to be at variance with the answers one might get do not go to college to be educated and that they do not receive education there; that they go for one of three purposes: To secure a diploma as a passport to economic success; to obtain vocational preparation, the vocation of matrimony being the one usually sought by women; or to take part in student activities, which have all along been declining in cultural value as interest in debating, glee, and dramatic clubs has yielded to the engrossing interest in

One of Dr. Butler's critics offers a remedy: Let every pupil in high school and college study social science, history, economics, sociology and government. It does not appear how courses in these things would be of much value to pupils

. . . Development of Industries

In common with every other patriotic Texan and Oklahoman, we should be happy to see our natural resources developed and factories built in every part of the two States. But we should do some of these things ourselves and not leave them altogether to outside parties.

It has always been the misfortune of our Southern people to prize independence so highly that they cannot co-operate with each other in business. Many years ago a Massachusetts cotton-mill employe told my brother that he and many other men of small means had combined their capital and built a cotton mill in which the owners and members of their families worked every day, just as Southern farmers and sons work in their fields. Many factories of New England were established that way. There are signs that our Southern people are more ready than ever before to pool their interests and work together for the common good.

We read that the production of Texas-Oklahoma natural resources are far over one billion dollars. We confess that these figures do not unduly stir our pride, although we do know that

In other relations of life, little things may make us or mar us; it will not do to ignore them. "For want of a nail, the shoe was lost; for want of a shoe, the horse was lost; for want of a horse, the kingdom was lost," is the moral of an old fairy tale.

In writing many of us pay slight at tention to the comma; but it will not do to ignore it because it is little, or to put a comma in where not needed. Oscar Wilde once gave himself credit for a hard day's work because "this morning," he said, "I put a comma and this afternoon I took it out again." They have lately been having heated arguments in the French Senate, with a threat to overthrow the government, all over a single comma. It was argued that the insertion of one where it was not intended in the Wheat Bill might cost the French farmers $15,000,000.

Several cases in this country have gone to the Supreme Court on account of a comma. Older people will recall that the insertion of a comma in the free list of one of our tariff bills caused our government to lose an immense sum before Congress could correct the error. A section of the bill, as drawn, placed on the free list "all fruit trees." Somehow or other, a comma got between "fruit" and "trees," and everything from pumpkins to mulberries were imported without paying any duties, much to the disgust of citrus fruit growers in Florida and California.

Sprinkling commas around promiscuously where not needed sometimes make ludicrous centences. A classic example is: "For sale a piano, by a lady with carved logs."

Increase in Southern Cattle

The Agricultural Department has given out figures showing that the South has surpassed the nation as a whole in the increase of beef and dairy cattle. The number of all cattle, including dairy cattle, in the 13 Southern States increased from 18,616,500 in 1982 to 20,051,000 in 1987. The number in the whole country showed 66, 676,000, a gain of only 906,000. In every Southern State the increase was marked-Texas from 6,890,000 to 7,547,000; Oklahoma from 2,200,000 to 2,252,000.

The Southern States as a whole had an increase during the period of 279,000 dairy cattle, of which they now have 6,455,000. In the North Central States, ing either every penny, every nickle, or long considered the great dairy section, every dime. We tried the dime plan there was a decrease of 206,000 head, probably due to the drouths of 1984 and

There are several reasons for the marked cattle increase in the South. Many farmers no longer plant all their land to cotton, but raise cover crops such as cow peas, clover, and lespedeza, which furnish good grazing and hay of the best quality, while at the same time improving the soil by collecting nitrogen from the air and preventing erosion; our cattlemen are terracing their ranches and ploughing deep furrows above the terraces for retaining rainwater and preventing erosion, with the result that grass grows better and longer. Many cheese factories and creameries are already in operation and there is promise that more will be established. giving the Southern farmer a market for his milk products near home. Due to our comparatively mild winters, the expense of shelter is not so great as in other sections, but we hope no dairyman will try to economize on good shelter. The cost of feed is less here than farther North, as the grazing season is longer.

It is encouraging to have evidence of always be worth while.

It is a sad commentary on modern collegiate education that these university presidents are so pessimistic about the values students get in higher educational institutions. Doubtless they have not looked closely enough. In their institutions, as in all others, there is a saving remnant who have a serious purpose to acquire an education, and for such pupils a college education will

HIS is a mystery story, and to me spersed with many other teachings in mystery. But I shall present the low-man, the importance of character,

Another subject which Professor Bedichek often discussed with his students was history, especially the period of the war between the States. To me. the most interestingly part of this history teaching was his recital of the time he spent in "Quantrell's Militia" during the Civil War days. Always he touched lightly upon his own part in the incidents of which he told us, and often he explained that many Quantrell believed that he could fight more effectively by carrying on a guerrilla type of warfare, rather than enlisting with the regular army, Professor Bedichek used to say. The fact that a number of Quantrell's militia, the best known of whom were the James and Dalton brothers, afterwards indicted for banditry, lent credence to many false reports later written into history about Quantrell, the old school teacher would tell us.

Always I felt that the part Bedichek had played in the daring adventures of Quantrell's band were more important than he indicated, as he modestly effaced his share in the deeds of which he

Stories Vividiv Recalled

Professor Bedichek's stories about Quantrell's men came back to me vividly one day, a few years after his death, when an elderly visitor dropped into the office of the newspaper which I was editing and publishing in a town many miles from Eddy. My visitor, an erect, sprightly man despite his years, introduced himself as Frank Dalton, a cousin of the James brothers, and a member of Quantrell's band during the Civil Daiton wanted to write some articles telling of his experiences with Quantrell's men. When I told him of my former school teacher, my visitor asked me his name.

The name was unfamiliar to him, but he explained readily that names meant nothing, as most of the men who had served under Quantrell changed their names at the end of the war, adding that his real name actually was not Frank Dalton.

But when I described Professor Bedichek, Dalton began asking questions concerning certain manners of speech, the professor's size, and whether he

The change has come mainly in mothods of handling and marketing as well as in appearance and grade of the ani-

Fifty years ago many ranchers were vague as to number of cattle that bore their brands, between bi-annual or anand roundups, and paid little attention to breed, but they did know that Spanish blood predominated in most of their herds. Today old-timers who are still active-and many are-not only know the exact size of their herds at any time and their breeding, but also know individual defects. They can tell within a small per cent of the number surprisingly close to what those calves will weigh in the fall. About the only thing they don't know is what the market will do.

Scientific breeding and care are two of the reasons why Texas produces more than a sixth of the nation's beef cattle and why Texas now is recognized for fine breeds as well as number of cattle

Center of Hereford Industry

The Hereford cattle industry has made greater strides in West Texas than in other parts of the State. That section, espetially around Marfa, is conceded to be the center of this development. At the International Livestock Show in Chicago, last year, 18 carloads of the best 27 carloads of fat beef were West Texas cattle. They were selected from 27 cars of the world's finest

Nature has conduced to make West Texas an ideal cattle country. Grasses are low in moisture and high in food content, which value they retain to considerable length when dry. Parasites and diseases are minimum and most stock are unusually large-boned and well-conditioned. Add to this the cowman's interest in quality beef on the hoof and you have a combination hard to beat.

Just how interested ranchers are in good breeding has been proven by the fact that some counties boast of 10 per cent registered and 85 per cent purebred stock throughout. Counties that claim the highest averages in blooded Herefords-for Herefords dominate the western plains and mesas-are Presidio, Jeff Davis, Brewster and Kimble, No. doubt other counties have averages equally as high. While percentages of purebred cattle are high, yet registration is neglected, due partly to the fact that many cattle still go to the packer. ing, uniformity, etc., has brought about Many ranchers have found a dependable and profitable market for calves and yearlings to be finished in the Corn Belt of the North. For this reason not a great many finished steers are sold off the West Texas ranges.

$2,000 for a Single Bull

Some cowmen will not hesitate to pay $2,000 for a good bull in order to improve breeding of their herds. Buyers give encouragement to better breeding y paying higher prices for better bred stock. Feeders say they can make more money out of purebred calves at $10 a hundred than inferior calves which cost them little or nothing. Blooded calves finish out heavier on less feed and are in greater demand from packers.

The trend toward purebred stock has given rise to another profitable branch of the cattle industry-that of raising herd bulls-and it pays. John Stribling sold his whole crop of bulls in 1936 for an average of $342 and got of calves that will die. They can figure $1,000, or better, for 10 per cent of

A bull is considered 60 per cent of the value of the herd; a cow 40 per cent. When a herd reaches that point where cows are better than buils, the herd is on a decline, according to Cows usually come from the owner's herd. About half of the best heifer calves are saved through the year. Next year they are culled again as yearlings and 15 per cent of the best retained. That leaves a margin to cover death losses and allow culling of old or unsatisfactory cows. A cow is supposed to be at her best when from 4 to years old.

Instead of the bi-annual roundups, most ranchers now brand and dehorn calves in small numbers, before they are a month old. This causes a minimum of worry for the calves' mothers

Vaccines have reduced the death-rate among calves to about an average of two per cent and some ranches are equipped with "sick wards" where diseased or injured cattle are isolated and treated.

Grand Champion Steer, 1937

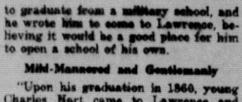

The grand champion steer of the 1937 Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show was a Hereford shown by Byron Eckert, of Mason county, a 4-H club boy. This steer was named champion of the Boys' Baby Beef Show before being picked as the outstanding steer among all breeds for the them. Luke Brite is reported to have show. Young Eckert sold his grand champion, weighing 951 pounds, for $1.12½ a pound to Leonard Brothers, of Fort Worth.

The Hereford exhibit at the Southwestern Exposition and Fat Stock Show this year is expected to top all other breeds, both in number of animals shown and in amount of premiums offered. Cash prizes of $5,000 have been posted for the Hereford division. Byron Gist, of Amarillo, was renamed superintendent of the Hereford department. He has served in that capacity for several years.

Producers of Highland Hereford cattle in West Texas are anticipating another good year in 1938. Rains have put ranges in excellent condition and a good deal of feed has been raised to help take care of the cattle during severe cold weather.

Dates for the annual Highland Hereford sales at Marfa have been set at October 6, 7 and 8 this year. This auction sale attracts leading ranchmen from all parts of West Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and Aritona. Feeders from the Corn Belt also

POULTRY NEWS Lice and Mites

Many times each year we read the same old story about lice and mites, and many times each year—we promptly forget all about it! Let's give this problem some serious thought.

Those in charge of State and commercial laboratories, specializing in making diagnosis of poultry diseases, say that a large percentage of the birds coming to the laboratory show no evidence of one specific disease but are in a generally weakened condition. many instances, this weakness is due to lice and mites.

By cooping layers into close quarters, forcing them to live in close contact with their own droppings, and often restricting their needs for fresh air and food, we are placing obstacles in their path. Give them a chance, by ridding them of lice and mites.

Laying Flock Culling

Since feed costs represent approximately half of the total cost of producing eggs, it becomes obvious to everyone that the average laying flock must be culled continuously to remove the birds that become physically unfit and are otherwise unable to lay enough eggs to pay for their feed. Too many poultrymen labor under the delusion that the laying flock may be culled once a year and then be neglected as far as further culling is concerned. This ed as far as further culling is concerned. This is one of the biggest mirtakes that flock owners make. Flock selection should be practiced every month in the year, by removing the birds that become physically unfit and otherwise out of good laying condition. Birds that are inherently poor layers should be removed from the flock as soon as they can be detected, and they can be detected by the simple expediency of examining the flock two or three times during the winter months to identify the birds with bright yellow-beaks and shanks.

Storage Holdings of Poultry and Eggs

Storage holdings of poultry continue to show up very favorably in comparison with last year. On December 1, there were 108, 787,000 pounds in storage, compared with 149, 000,391 pounds a year ago, and a five-year average of 104,676,000 pounds. Storage holdings of shell and frezen eggs on December 1 amounted to 6,128,000 cases,

There are 594 producing oil wells on University of Texas lands with an output of approximately 500,000 barrels per month, said Bert R. Haigh, Professor of Geology at the State Mining School, El Paso. New wells are being brought in at the rate of one a week.

Total income to the university permanent fund from royalties, rentals, bonuses and sales of land in fee amounted, November 1, 1937, to $27,-275,418, Haigh computed.

HOME OF MRS. SAM HOUSTON, INDEPENDENCE

Texas history's most colorful figure, without a question, was

Gen. Sam Houston, military leader and first President of the Texas Republic. But little has been said about the woman whose matchless devotion undoubtedly played an important part in his greatness.

Mrs. Sam Houston, the former Margaret Lea, was content to bask in the reflected glory of her illustrious husband. But in Independence, Texas, where she made her home after the general's death, she was idolized by her friends and neighbors not only as a devoted wife and mother but as a kindly and sympathetic leader among her wide circle of friends. It was her unselfishness that finally brought on her death. In 1867 when a yellow fever epidemic swept Central and

South Texas she volunteered as a nurse and was a victim to the

> Mrs. Byrns is one of the eight heirs of the late J. W. Mills of Texas. Her husband's grandfather, Jake W. Strickland, was a Texas pioneer and a soldier under Gen, Sam Houston. As a reward for his services, President Houston of the Republic of Texas, gave him the land grant which later became part of the Humble Company's property. Strickland died without realizing the land's value, leaving it to his son Mills.

The taxes paid on this same 59 acres in 1937 was $15.12, but in 1875 there were no school taxes, no road taxes and no bond issues.

Preparation: Decorations may be as elaborate or as simple as you wish. Strings of hearts may be cut from colored paper and used in many ways. Long strips of gayly colored crepe paper about two and one-half inches long, slightly twisted for rolling, strung across rooms and over windows make effective decora-tions. Large red hearts fastened to backs of chairs end a festive air. (Note: After party, carefully preserve decorations and they may be used for several years).

Prizes to be awarded during the entertainment may be simple or expensive, depending on the budget. For simple prizes we suggest: Home-made candy or cookies, or nickel and dime prizes such as: Dolls, balls and other toys that will make laughter for the guests. Wrap prizes tastefully, mark each one plainly.

Reception. Host and hostess greet guests at the door. Arrange for placing of wraps and introduce any guests not already acquainted. Either host or hostess may lead in directing games.
