THIS, TOO, WILL PASS

This, too, will pass. O' heart, say it over and over,

Out of your deepest sorrow, out of your grief.

No hurt can last forever-perhaps tomorrow

Will bring relief.

This, too, will pass. It will spend itself-its fury

Will die as the wind dies down with the setting sun:

Assuaged and calm, you will rest at last, forgetting A thing that is done.

Repeat it again and again, O' heart for your comfort;

This, too, will pass, as surely as passed before

The old forgotten pain, and the other sorrows

That once you bore.

Housekeeping.

As certain as stars at night, or dawn after darkness,

Inherent as the lift of the blowing grass,

Whatever your despair of your frustration-This, too, will pass.

Instead of the conventional white, the bride was attired in blue-grey satin and instead of the wedding veil falling over her face it hung from her shoulders. A large lei of flowers hung over her neck. (This reminded me of the floral tribute placed on the winning horse's neck.) On the bride's head was a satin affair that looked to me like a very rich-looking dust-cap but a dust-
